54-Day Chrysler Dispute Ends For 58,000

Union Votes Today On New Contract; Work May Start Again Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 28.—A basis for settlement of the Chrysler Corporation labor dispute was agreed upon tonight by the management and the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers Union.

Details of the agreement were not immediately available but James F. Dewey, Federal Labor Department conciliator, said he was preparing a statement on the result of today's conference, which had continued into the night.

The agreement reached tonight between the heads of the union and the corporation was to be presented to U. A. W.-C. I. O. locals tomorrow for ratification, in order to enable the first of the workers to be back at their jobs by Thursday.

Union to Vote Today

Dewey K. T. Keller, president of the Chrysler Corporation, and Philip Murray, vice president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, issued the following statement:

"The conferees representing the Chrysler corporation and the conferees representing the U. A. W. C. I. O. reached an agreement tonight which is now being reduced to writing.

"In order to prevent confusion in returning employes to work and preparing the plants for opening on Thursday, the U. A. W. has agreed to withdraw its picket lines Wednesday morning and the corporation has agreed to close the Dodge main, Dodge truck and Dodge forge plants on Wednesday to all employes except foremen.

"The union conferees agreed to submit a draft of the contract to the membership Wednesday for ratification in an effort to enable the employes to return to work Thursday."

Total of 98,000 Involved

Lacking the headline-making methods employed in the automotive sit-down strikes of 1937, the labor dispute that closed plants of the Chrysler Corporation in October lasted 54 days, 11 days longer than the General Motors strike of 1937.

More than 58,000 Chrysler employes, 15,000 workers in Briggs Manufacturing Co. plants, and an estimated 25,000 in allied industries were thrown out of work.

The dispute, largest in which the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers Union has engaged since the sit-downs, shut off output of Chrysler plants almost at the start of 1940 production, and dealers handling Chrysler, DeSoto, Dodge and Plymouth cars quickly felt the pinch as

Asheville Blacked Out by Strike of Power Workers

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 28 (AP).—Asheville, a city of about 55,000, was plunged into darkness tonight after employes of the Carolina Power & Light Co. walked out in protest against refusal of company officials to grant a closed shop.

The blackout occurred just before midnight, after the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers had met continuously for three hours and presented its demands to the company management.

Current still was provided hospitals and was being cut on and off intermittently in the office of the Asheville Times-Citizen.

Police radios were quieted and the fire department hitched its alarm boxes to an auxiliary battery.

William Cooke, 28-year-old husband and father, is fighting for his life in an "iron lung" at Gallinger Hospital under treatment for infantile paralysis.

The rent on his neat little home at 1729 Bay street southeast is paid up until December 13. When that day comes—well, there won't be money for more.

A few weeks ago Cooke's mother, who had been in good health, fell dead.

Last spring the younger of his two daughters, Willa Mae Florence, 2½, almost died of pneumonia and whooping cough. The thing that saved her was an "iron lung," the same type of device keeping her daddy alive this minute.

In spite of these blows which have fallen in such rapid succession, the courageous Cookes were hopeful yesterday, hopeful they can continue to meet their bills and that bad luck is finished with them.

The youthful family head smilingly refused to be daunted. With nothing but his head visible, he

Convention Delay Urged On Roosevelt

Postponement of Both Nominating Sessions Advocated To Save Expenses

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 28. Suggestions that the 1940 Democratic and Republican national conventions be postponed and the political campaigns shortened were understood today to have been a topic of discussion between President Roosevelt and some of his recent callers.

A number of persons who have seen Mr. Roosevelt lately, it was learned, have recommended that the conventions, ordinarily held in June, be deferred for a month or a month and a half.

Their contention was that there would be scant interest and little could be accomplished in the early months of campaigns starting in July and running into November, particularly during a period of international crisis.

In addition, both parties would delay the establishment of campaign headquarters and save money.

Hamilton's Comment

[Republican Chairman John Hamilton said here last night that President Roosevelt "is arrogating, to himself a great deal of authority when he undertakes to direct when the Republican Party should hold its national convention."

["That usually has been a function of the Republican National Committee," he continued. "If Democrats are willing to have Mr. Roosevelt dictate all their party affairs, that is their business. But Republicans will not permit him to decree when they shall meet and where."

He pointed out that Republicans "projected that idea many months ago" and the matter was still "receiving careful consideration."

"Mr. Roosevelt's deep solicitude about economy in political campaigns is very amusing in view of his record. Taxpayers might well wish he would direct his economy to Federal spending." — Editor's note.]

The Democratic and Republican national committees always set different convention dates and some observers said it might be possible for them also to reach an agreement on a postponement, should the idea appeal to them.

But there were intimations that the matter had not yet been laid before the national chairmen.

The Chief Executive was represented as believing the suggestions for delay were interesting but as reserving judgment on whether he should espouse them.

Roosevelt Deferred Campaigns

Both in 1932 and 1936, it was recalled, Mr. Roosevelt himself deferred active campaigning until September.

The sources of the convention information laughed off as a pipe dream the thought that a delay might help the Administration maintain control over Congress.

In 1936, Congress closed its session between the two conventions, and frequently the proximity of the political meetings has occasioned adjournment rushes.

The question uppermost in the minds of most individuals, naturally enough, is not when the conventions

Little Republic Stunned, but Stands Firm; Capital Remains Calm

Helsinki (Wednesday), Nov. 29.—Stunned by Russia's sudden denunciation of the Soviet-Finnish nonaggression pact of 1932, Finland today remained firm in the face of Soviet demands which Finns feel threaten their sovereignty.

As the Soviet radio alleged further instances of Finnish frontier violations, Finns calmly awaited developments.

Sources generally in close touch with the Kremlin said, however, that unless Soviet Premier Molotoff's note of Tuesday night repeating demands for Finnish troops' withdrawal from the border was answered satisfactorily by Wednesday night, it will be followed by an 18-hour ultimatum.

These sources did not disclose what consequences might be expected should the Finns reject the ultimatum.

Border Episodes Denied

The government still hopes for a peaceful solution, but realizes the situation is extremely grave.

In a communique the Finnish government categorically denies the alleged new border episodes. It declares that the only unusual preceding was that Finnish sentries near Petsamo in the Arctic region heard mysterious noises in the tundra and that a patrol of six men was sent out to investigate. They have not returned. The Soviets reported three Finns captured in that region.

Big troop concentrations have taken place in the Leningrad district and in the woods between Leningrad and the furthermost Finnish defense lines. Tanks and heavy artillery have been placed. Undoubtedly Russia has everything ready to back up her demand with military action.

Ordered Not to Shoot

Early Tuesday morning light and heavy bombers escorted by scouting planes maneuvered near the Finn border, sometimes over Finn territory. The Finn troops, however, are obeying orders not to shoot. Every single officer has been ordered to avoid minor episodes, even though provoked.

How many Finns, until now, have been called up is not stated, but several thousands undoubtedly have joined the Finn neutrality guard, after the events over the week-end.

Unofficially, it is estimated that Finland, in case of war, can call up between 400,000 and 500,000 men. A majority of them already have joined, even if general mobilization is denied.

The Finnish cabinet met at 9 o'clock last night to discuss the most recent note from Molotoff, in which the nonaggresion pact was denounced.

The meeting lasted until 11 o'clock and a detailed answer was worked out and will be presented in Moscow today by the Finnish Minister. Its contents are not known.

The Finnish government considers that Russian reports of new hostili-

Finland Will Fight to Keep Independence, Says Procope

Minister Denies Shots Fired Across Border Into Russia

Finland loves peace, but it honors independence more, and will stand steadfastly behind its government if the Soviet government acts to destroy this independence, Hjalmar J. Procope, Finish Minister to the United States, declared in a radio address broadcast nationally from Washington last night.

The envoy denied Russian allegations that Finnish soldiers have been firing across the border, and creating disorders on the Soviet frontier.

"An investigation shows that the cannon shots did not take place on the Finnish side," said Procope. Furthermore, he insisted, Finland has no artillery within range to reach the Russian border.

"The Finnish army is purely a defensive one, and all our armaments are defensive. Our army is not going to attack Russia," said the minister.

"But Finland's history is one of heavy sacrifices. We ardently wish peace, but if sacrifices are needed to maintain our independence, we shall make them as we have made them in the past. We shall stand behind our government."

The Minister said the Soviet government had thrice recognized Finland's independence: in the Act of Recognition, 1917; in the Treaty of

The War of Nerves

Moscow (Wednesday), Nov. 29.—Shells exploded and bullets whizzed across the Finnish-Soviet frontier last night—according to the midnight broadcast of the Moscow radio—as relations between the two countries took a decided turn for the worse.

Three new incidents occurred, the radio said, at points scattered along the 600-mile frontier from the gloomy Arctic Ocean to Lake Ladoga north of Leningrad.

But no blood was reported spilled, as on Sunday, when Russians charged a Finnish cannonading caused death and wounds to 13 Red Army men.

Finns Admit Trading Shots

The clashes were reported just after Premier Molotoff had handed to the Finnish minister a caustic note denouncing the 1932 non-aggression pact with Finland, and the Red Army organ, Red Star, had decleared new "provocations" would be answered with fire "until those who have created the incident are exterminated."

With the Soviet believed by observers to have close to 1,000,000 men in position along Finland's borders, the next move from the Kremlin was awaited with considerable tensity.

[Soviet authorities, predicting an "early decision," said Molotoff's rejection of Finland's counter-proposals dealing with troops along the border had slammed the door on compromise. There must be capitulation by Finland or war, some indicated, according to the United Press.

Finns Reported Repelled

[Russian quarters said resumption of negotiations was possible if a new government was set up in Helsinki. The Soviet radio has been appealing to the Finnish people to overthrow the Cajander government and "escape the fate of Poland."—Editor's note.]

The radio declared firing broke out and Finnish artillery opened up at Vidlitczk (Vedlitsa), north of Lake Ladoga.

Only $133,108.76 to go!

Like an inspired host storming hitherto impregnable battlements, Washington's army of Community Chest volunteers surged forward last night in a mighty effort to sweep beyond their goal of $2,000,000.

Fifty leaders and 900 workers in the field learned yesterday that their campaign had increased pledges for the 1940 needs fund to $1,866,891.24, or 93.34 per cent of the goal.

Official Campaign Ended

The campaign is over—ended officially last week—but the war goes on, with every one of the 50 leaders and all the 900 workers vowed to carry on until the objective is won—$2,000,000 for the District's needy and underprivileged.

Between last Wednesday noon when the original campaign ended, and yesterday noon, approximately $86,000 was pledged, governmental and group solicitation units accounting for $65,000.

Led by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, the governmental unit topped five others with 97.8 per cent of its quota. Assigned to go out and get $765,000, the unit has credit for $748,418.43.

Right on the heels of the governmental unit during the past week was the solicitation group headed by Charles B. Dulcan, sr. That division reported an additional $32,482.19 yesterday, compared with $33,168.05 by governmental. Dulcan's unit, with

President to Segregate About $500,000,000 'Emergency' Defense

Defense Needs First

REPRESENTATIVE TAYLOR seeks "sacrifices" in relief and other spending, so defense needs may come first. Page 2.

Two Budgets

By the Associated Press

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 28.—A Presidential decision to segregate normal and "emergency" expenditures for defense in the annual budget resulted today from the Administration's efforts to build up the armed forces and isolate the Nation from the European war.

Some $500,000,000 of expenditures which may be attributed to the fact that there is a war and the United States is trying to remain neutral, Mr. Roosevelt said at a press conference, will go into a separate segment of the budget.

Makes Small Reductions

The way he put it, there will be an "A" budget for defense setting forth what would have been expended in the year beginning July 1, 1940, had there been no war. There will be a "B" budget, the President explained, containing the estimates of additional expenditures which are considered necessary because of the conflict.

The President said he had used a blue pencil to good advantage yesterday in trimming the budgets for the Treasury and Justice departments and the Panama Canal but that when it came to a matter of

Legion Asks Pensions for All World War Widows, Orphans

By Edward T. Folliard

The American Legion, now more than 1,000,000 strong, is preparing for a determined fight to have the next Congress grant "protection" (pensions) to all widows and orphans of World War veterans.

Thus, not only will Congress be asked to make record-breaking appropriations to strengthen America's arms to guard against another war, but it will be asked to add considerably to the cost of the last one by creating nearly a quarter of a million new pensioners.

Raymond J. Kelly, national commander of the American Legion, told The Post yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel that Americans ought to understand the cost of any war necessarily has to include the cost of taking care of disabled and dependents of those veterans who die.

Col. John Thomas Taylor, Legion legislative director, often described as Washington's most effective lobbyist, echoed Commander Kelly's words.

"Now that Congress is considering appropriating money for building up the national defense," said Col. Taylor, "the country is becoming conscious of the cost of war.

"The country should realize that

Yale Crowd Rocks Browder in Auto After Booing Him

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Yale University students and "townies" joined forces tonight in an effort to overturn an automobile containing Earl Browder, Communist Party general secretary. Browder made a speech in a campus building despite opposition of veterans' organizations and refusal of other universities to permit his appearance on their grounds.

Young men crowded around the automobile as Browder was being driven away from Strathcona Hall, where he had addressed an audience of 600 persons, mostly students, some of whom showered him with pennies and interrupted his speech with guffaws and boos.

"Turn it over!" some of the crowd shouted as Browder entered the automobile. The car was rocked from side to side, but the driver managed to start it before it could be overturned.

Navy Spoils Fun, Lights Field to Aid Army 'Air Raider'

Lakehurst, N. J., Nov. 28 (AP).—Army aviators conducted a secret "raid" on the Lakehurst naval air station last night and the Navy, thinking the dozen flares dropped were from a plane in distress, spoiled the fun by turning on all the landing lights.

That was the explanation obtained today by Gill Robb Wilson, New Jersey's aviation commissioner, for the mysterious airplane which flew at 10,000 feet over the lighter-than-air base. It was a warplane "on a training mission" from Mitchel Field, N. Y.

The flares caused a five-acre woods fire nearby.

Britain Seeks No Revenge, Says Premier

Sea Lanes Are Open, King Assures First War Parliament

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 28.—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the first war session of Parliament today that Britain did not enter the conflict against Germany "with any vindictive purpose" and disclaimed any intention of imposing upon the foe "a vindictive peace."

The prime minister spoke after King George opened the session with a speech assuring the British Empire that the royal navy was keeping "free and open the highways of the sea" despite mounting losses to British shipping.

To Consider Neutrals

Chamberlain evaded new demands for a more clear-cut definition of Britain's peace aims. Responding to opposition questioning, the prime minister said that it would be "absolutely futile to attempt to lay down today the conditions under which a new world is to be created."

"None of us know," he said, "how long this war will last, in what direction it will develop or when it is ended who will be standing by our side and who against us."

Blockade Deferred

Chamberlain declared the British-French blockade against German exports, to become effective next Monday, would do the least possible injury to neutrals "consistent with the purpose of stopping German exports."

Chamberlain referred to neutral protests against the blockade and said that "we recognize these meas-

British Cruiser Sunk by U-boat, Nazis Claim

By the Associated Press

The German high command last night announced a German submarine had destroyed a British heavy cruiser—and the Allies countered with unofficial estimates that 43 Nazi U-boats had been sunk since start of war.

The British admiralty stated the German assertion was "devoid of truth." After holding for four and one-half hours the Berlin story claiming a cruiser had been torpedoed, authorities permitted its dissemination when the German radio broadcast was picked up in London.

Naval circles said the German claim might have been made to "cheer up the people" or to "obtain information about the position of warships."

North Atlantic Claimed Clear

Official quarters in London suggested the Germans might have been misled by the acknowledged damaging of the cruiser Belfast, November 21.

Credited by the Nazis with the sinking was Lieut. Capt. Guenther Prien, 31-year-old hero of the daring Scapa Flow submarine raid October 14, which cost the British the battleship Royal Oak.

The German account of the cruiser's sinking gave no details other than the allegation it occurred east of the Shetland Islands in the North Sea. The date was not given, but it was announced Prien and his crew had returned safely to Kiel.

Meanwhile, as King George V was

Auto Seized, Owner Sues For $100,000

Printing Executive Says Tire Company Illegally Altered Mortgage

Phillip R. Belt, 38, 208 Ascot place northeast, sued General Tire Co., 1602 Fourteenth street northwest, in the District Court yesterday for $100,000 damages for seizing his automobile when he owed a $13.90 bill.

Belt asked $50,000 because his automobile was taken from a parking place in front of his home and $50,000 besides because the tire company invoked a chattel mortgage which Belt claims was unlawfully altered.

Belt, manager of the Ace Printing Co., and a former District commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, was represented by Attorney Franklyn Yasmer.

Official Named

Besides the tire company, the complaint named as a defendant Henry B. Murphee, who was described as manager and assistant to the president of the company.

Belt's complaint said that on September 28, 1938, he bought two tires on installments, for $15.90, and signed the blank form of a chattel mortgage on his automobile to secure the bill. These tires were paid for, the complaint said, when Belt bought two more tires on January 13, 1939.

Charges Extra Costs

Belt said there was $13.90 due on the second pair of tires when he was late with a payment in March of this year. He charged the tire company with filling out the mortgage to make it cover the second purchase. Then, the complaint said, Murphee took the automobile from in front of the Belt home about 7 p. m. on March 3.

To regain the car the complaint said, Belt "was unlawfully and against his will, forced to pay . . . the sum of $10 as a repossession or 'snatching charge' and $1 storage charge and also the sum of 13.90 due on the charge account."

He asked the damages for the indignity and embarrassment he suffered and for the injury to his credit and reputation.

Pittman Predicts Idle U. S. Ships Will Find Business

By the Associated Press

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, predicted yesterday that an increase in American shipping to Pacific and South American ports soon would recall to service most of the Merchant Marine vessels made idle by restrictions in the neutrality act.

Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he believed that sinking of belligerent and neutral vessels by loose mines in the European war area would be reflected quickly in withdrawals of other ships on those nations from Pacific and South American service.

"If this war lasts another year," he told reporters, "I don't think we will have any of our ships idle. I think they will all be in trade, replacing the ships of other nations which have transferred to European waters."

Pittman, declaring that most American shipping companies are glad that their ships are not going into combat areas, urged that Congress consider reimbursing ship owners for loss of revenue suffered because of the restrictions.

Ry. Express Expects Big Holiday Traffic

"We are expecting the biggest holiday express traffic in years, and for good reason," C. W. Turner, superintendent of the Railway Express Agency here, said yesterday. "The Christmas gift habit is increasing and never before have so many beautiful and practical things been available for the purpose. You can depend upon it that the people, who are now on the pay roll, are going to make up for the time when they had economy enforced upon them."

Mr. Turner stated that he expected there would be increased use of express service for sending holiday packages, because of rate reductions recently put into effect, on shipments of 21 pounds or under, for all distances, and on those of 50 pounds and under for shorter distances.

Judge Assails Police Invasion of Civil Rights

Invasion of the liberties of the citizens by police officers was excoriated from the Municipal Court bench by Judge Nathan Cayton yesterday.

"Officers have no more right than other persons to violate the law," said Judge Cayton in upholding the District statute providing that the police forfeit $500 to any person held without charge for more than six hours. The law says a prisoner must be shown a warrant or released when the six hours expire.

The ruling meant that Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, and other officers must defend themselves in December against the $500 suit of James F. (Buzz) Donovan.

Donovan was held "for investigation" August 12 in connection with a $227 holdup. Attorney James J. Laughlin demanded that the police show a warrant for Donovan. When none was shown after six hours, Laughlin demanded his client's release, warning that otherwise he would file the $500 suit.

Donovan was not released until he had been held 45 hours, after Laughlin had sued in the District Court for a habeas corpus.

Chester Gray, assistant corporation counsel, told Judge Cayton yesterday that the law did not require the officers to produce a warrant if none existed.

Without hearing Laughlin's argument, Judge Cayton ruled in his favor.

Meanwhile, Laughlin has filed a $50,000 suit against the police in the District Court for false arrest.

54-Day Chrysler Dispute Ends For 58,000

Union Votes Today On New Contract; Work May Start Again Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 28.—A basis for settlement of the Chrysler Corporation labor dispute was agreed upon tonight by the management and the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers Union.

Details of the agreement were not immediately available but James F. Dewey, Federal Labor Department conciliator, said he was preparing a statement on the result of today's conference, which had continued into the night.

The agreement reached tonight between the heads of the union and the corporation was to be presented to U. A. W.-C. I. O. locals tomorrow for ratification, in order to enable the first of the workers to be back at their jobs by Thursday.

Union to Vote Today

Dewey K. T. Keller, president of the Chrysler Corporation, and Philip Murray, vice president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, issued the following statement:

"The conferees representing the Chrysler corporation and the conferees representing the U. A. W. C. I. O. reached an agreement tonight which is now being reduced to writing.

"In order to prevent confusion in returning employes to work and preparing the plants for opening on Thursday, the U. A. W. has agreed to withdraw its picket lines Wednesday morning and the corporation has agreed to close the Dodge main, Dodge truck and Dodge forge plants on Wednesday to all employes except foremen.

"The union conferees agreed to submit a draft of the contract to the membership Wednesday for ratification in an effort to enable the employes to return to work Thursday."

Total of 98,000 Involved

Lacking the headline-making methods employed in the automotive sit-down strikes of 1937, the labor dispute that closed plants of the Chrysler Corporation in October lasted 54 days, 11 days longer than the General Motors strike of 1937.

More than 58,000 Chrysler employes, 15,000 workers in Briggs Manufacturing Co. plants, and an estimated 25,000 in allied industries were thrown out of work.

The dispute, largest in which the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers Union has engaged since the sit-downs, shut off output of Chrysler plants almost at the start of 1940 production, and dealers handling Chrysler, DeSoto, Dodge and Plymouth cars quickly felt the pinch as

Asheville Blacked Out by Strike of Power Workers

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 28 (AP).—Asheville, a city of about 55,000, was plunged into darkness tonight after employes of the Carolina Power & Light Co. walked out in protest against refusal of company officials to grant a closed shop.

The blackout occurred just before midnight, after the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers had met continuously for three hours and presented its demands to the company management.

Current still was provided hospitals and was being cut on and off intermittently in the office of the Asheville Times-Citizen.

Police radios were quieted and the fire department hitched its alarm boxes to an auxiliary battery.

William Cooke, 28-year-old husband and father, is fighting for his life in an "iron lung" at Gallinger Hospital under treatment for infantile paralysis.

The rent on his neat little home at 1729 Bay street southeast is paid up until December 13. When that day comes—well, there won't be money for more.

A few weeks ago Cooke's mother, who had been in good health, fell dead.

Last spring the younger of his two daughters, Willa Mae Florence, 2½, almost died of pneumonia and whooping cough. The thing that saved her was an "iron lung," the same type of device keeping her daddy alive this minute.

In spite of these blows which have fallen in such rapid succession, the courageous Cookes were hopeful yesterday, hopeful they can continue to meet their bills and that bad luck is finished with them.

The youthful family head smilingly refused to be daunted. With nothing but his head visible, he

Convention Delay Urged On Roosevelt

Postponement of Both Nominating Sessions Advocated To Save Expenses

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 28. Suggestions that the 1940 Democratic and Republican national conventions be postponed and the political campaigns shortened were understood today to have been a topic of discussion between President Roosevelt and some of his recent callers.

A number of persons who have seen Mr. Roosevelt lately, it was learned, have recommended that the conventions, ordinarily held in June, be deferred for a month or a month and a half.

Their contention was that there would be scant interest and little could be accomplished in the early months of campaigns starting in July and running into November, particularly during a period of international crisis.

In addition, both parties would delay the establishment of campaign headquarters and save money.

Hamilton's Comment

[Republican Chairman John Hamilton said here last night that President Roosevelt "is arrogating, to himself a great deal of authority when he undertakes to direct when the Republican Party should hold its national convention."

["That usually has been a function of the Republican National Committee," he continued. "If Democrats are willing to have Mr. Roosevelt dictate all their party affairs, that is their business. But Republicans will not permit him to decree when they shall meet and where."

He pointed out that Republicans "projected that idea many months ago" and the matter was still "receiving careful consideration."

"Mr. Roosevelt's deep solicitude about economy in political campaigns is very amusing in view of his record. Taxpayers might well wish he would direct his economy to Federal spending." — Editor's note.]

The Democratic and Republican national committees always set different convention dates and some observers said it might be possible for them also to reach an agreement on a postponement, should the idea appeal to them.

But there were intimations that the matter had not yet been laid before the national chairmen.

The Chief Executive was represented as believing the suggestions for delay were interesting but as reserving judgment on whether he should espouse them.

Roosevelt Deferred Campaigns

Both in 1932 and 1936, it was recalled, Mr. Roosevelt himself deferred active campaigning until September.

The sources of the convention information laughed off as a pipe dream the thought that a delay might help the Administration maintain control over Congress.

In 1936, Congress closed its session between the two conventions, and frequently the proximity of the political meetings has occasioned adjournment rushes.

The question uppermost in the minds of most individuals, naturally enough, is not when the conventions

Little Republic Stunned, but Stands Firm; Capital Remains Calm

Helsinki (Wednesday), Nov. 29.—Stunned by Russia's sudden denunciation of the Soviet-Finnish nonaggression pact of 1932, Finland today remained firm in the face of Soviet demands which Finns feel threaten their sovereignty.

As the Soviet radio alleged further instances of Finnish frontier violations, Finns calmly awaited developments.

Sources generally in close touch with the Kremlin said, however, that unless Soviet Premier Molotoff's note of Tuesday night repeating demands for Finnish troops' withdrawal from the border was answered satisfactorily by Wednesday night, it will be followed by an 18-hour ultimatum.

These sources did not disclose what consequences might be expected should the Finns reject the ultimatum.

Border Episodes Denied

The government still hopes for a peaceful solution, but realizes the situation is extremely grave.

In a communique the Finnish government categorically denies the alleged new border episodes. It declares that the only unusual preceeding was that Finnish sentries near Petsamo in the Arctic region heard mysterious noises in the tundra and that a patrol of six men was sent out to investigate. They have not returned. The Soviets reported three Finns captured in that region.

Big troop concentrations have taken place in the Leningrad district and in the woods between Leningrad and the furthermost Finnish defense lines. Tanks and heavy artillery have been placed. Undoubtedly Russia has everything ready to back up her demand with military action.

Ordered Not to Shoot

Early Tuesday morning light and heavy bombers escorted by scouting planes maneuvered near the Finn border, sometimes over Finn territory. The Finn troops, however, are obeying orders not to shoot. Every single officer has been ordered to avoid minor episodes, even though provoked.

How many Finns, until now, have been called up is not stated, but several thousands undoubtedly have joined the Finn neutrality guard, after the events over the week-end.

Unofficially, it is estimated that Finland, in case of war, can call up between 400,000 and 500,000 men. A majority of them already have joined, even if general mobilization is denied.

The Finnish cabinet met at 9 o'clock last night to discuss the most recent note from Molotoff, in which the nonaggresion pact was denounced.

The meeting lasted until 11 o'clock and a detailed answer was worked out and will be presented in Moscow today by the Finnish Minister. Its contents are not known.

The Finnish government considers that Russian reports of new hostili-

Finland Will Fight to Keep Independence, Says Procope

Minister Denies Shots Fired Across Border Into Russia

Finland loves peace, but it honors independence more, and will stand steadfastly behind its government if the Soviet government acts to destroy this independence, Hjalmar J. Procope, Finish Minister to the United States, declared in a radio address broadcast nationally from Washington last night.

The envoy denied Russian allegations that Finnish soldiers have been firing across the border, and creating disorders on the Soviet frontier.

"An investigation shows that the cannon shots did not take place on the Finnish side," said Procope. Furthermore, he insisted, Finland has no artillery within range to reach the Russian border.

"The Finnish army is purely a defensive one, and all our armaments are defensive. Our army is not going to attack Russia," said the minister.

"But Finland's history is one of heavy sacrifices. We ardently wish peace, but if sacrifices are needed to maintain our independence, we shall make them as we have made them in the past. We shall stand behind our government."

The Minister said the Soviet government had thrice recognized Finland's independence: in the Act of Recognition, 1917; in the Treaty of

Moscow (Wednesday), Nov. 29.—Shells exploded and bullets whizzed across the Finnish-Soviet frontier last night—according to the midnight broadcast of the Moscow radio—as relations between the two countries took a decided turn for the worse.

Three new incidents occurred, the radio said, at points scattered along the 600-mile frontier from the gloomy Arctic Ocean to Lake Ladoga north of Leningrad.

But no blood was reported spilled, as on Sunday, when Russians charged a Finnish cannonading caused death and wounds to 13 Red Army men.

Finns Admit Trading Shots

The clashes were reported just after Premier Molotoff had handed to the Finnish minister a caustic note denouncing the 1932 non-aggression pact with Finland, and the Red Army organ, Red Star, had declared new "provocations" would be answered with fire "until those who have created the incident are exterminated."

With the Soviet believed by observers to have close to 1,000,000 men in position along Finland's borders, the next move from the Kremlin was awaited with considerable tensity.

[Soviet authorities, predicting an "early decision," said Molotoff's rejection of Finland's counter-proposals dealing with troops along the border had slammed the door on compromise. There must be capitulation by Finland or war, some indicated, according to the United Press.

Finns Reported Repelled

[Russian quarters said resumption of negotiations was possible if a new government was set up in Helsinki. The Soviet radio has been appealing to the Finnish people to overthrow the Cajander government and "escape the fate of Poland."—Editor's note.]

The radio declared firing broke out and Finnish artillery opened up at Vidlitczk (Vedlitsa), north of Lake Ladoga.

Only $133,108.76 to go!

Like an inspired host storming hitherto impregnable battlements, Washington's army of Community Chest volunteers surged forward last night in a mighty effort to sweep beyond their goal of $2,000,000.

Fifty leaders and 900 workers in the field learned yesterday that their campaign had increased pledges for the 1940 needs fund to $1,866,891.24, or 93.34 per cent of the goal.

Official Campaign Ended

The campaign is over—ended officially last week—but the war goes on, with every one of the 50 leaders and all the 900 workers vowed to carry on until the objective is won—$2,000,000 for the District's needy and underprivileged.

Between last Wednesday noon when the original campaign ended, and yesterday noon, approximately $86,000 was pledged, governmental and group solicitation units accounting for $65,000.

Led by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, the governmental unit topped five others with 97.8 per cent of its quota. Assigned to go out and get $765,000, the unit has credit for $748,418.43.

Right on the heels of the governmental unit during the past week was the solicitation group headed by Charles B. Dulcan, sr. That division reported an additional $32,482.10 yesterday, compared with $33,168.05 by governmental. Dulcan's unit, with

Two Budgets

By the Associated Press

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 28.—A Presidential decision to segregate normal and "emergency" expenditures for defense in the annual budget resulted today from the Administration's efforts to build up the armed forces and isolate the Nation from the European war.

Some $500,000,000 of expenditures which may be attributed to the fact that there is a war and the United States is trying to remain neutral, Mr. Roosevelt said at a press conference, will go into a separate segment of the budget.

Makes Small Reductions

The way he put it, there will be an "A" budget for defense setting forth what would have been expended in the year beginning July 1, 1940, had there been no war. There will be a "B" budget, the President explained, containing the estimates of additional expenditures which are considered necessary because of the conflict.

The President said he had used a blue pencil to good advantage yesterday in trimming the budgets for the Treasury and Justice departments and the Panama Canal but that when it came to a matter of

Britain Seeks No Revenge, Says Premier

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 28.—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the first war session of Parliament today that Britain did not enter the conflict against Germany "with any vindictive purpose" and disclaimed any intention of imposing upon the foe "a vindictive peace."

The prime minister spoke after King George opened the session with a speech assuring the British Empire that the royal navy was keeping "free and open the highways of the sea" despite mounting losses to British shipping.

To Consider Neutrals

Chamberlain evaded new demands for a more clear-cut definition of Britain's peace aims. Responding to opposition questioning, the prime minister said that it would be "absolutely futile to attempt to lay down today the conditions under which a new world is to be created."

"None of us know," he said, "how long this war will last, in what direction it will develop or when it is ended who will be standing by our side and who against us."

Blockade Deferred

Chamberlain declared the British-French blockade against German exports, to become effective next Monday, would do the least possible injury to neutrals "consistent with the purpose of stopping German exports."

Chamberlain referred to neutral protests against the blockade and said that "we recognize these meas-

British Cruiser Sunk by U-boat, Nazis Claim

By the Associated Press

The German high command last night announced a German submarine had destroyed a British heavy cruiser—and the Allies countered with unofficial estimates that 43 Nazi U-boats had been sunk since start of war.

The British admiralty stated the German assertion was "devoid of truth." After holding for four and one-half hours the Berlin story claiming a cruiser had been torpedoed, authorities permitted its dissemination when the German radio broadcast was picked up in London.

Naval circles said the German claim might have been made to "cheer up the people" or to "obtain information about the position of warships."

North Atlantic Claimed Clear

Official quarters in London suggested the Germans might have been misled by the acknowledged damaging of the cruiser Belfast, November 21.

Credited by the Nazis with the sinking was Lieut. Capt. Guenther Prien, 31-year-old hero of the daring Scapa Flow submarine raid October 14, which cost the British the battleship Royal Oak.

The German account of the cruiser's sinking gave no details other than the allegation it occurred east of the Shetland Islands in the North Sea. The date was not given, but it was announced Prien and his crew had returned safely to Kiel.

Legion Asks Pensions for All World War Widows, Orphans

By Edward T. Folliard

The American Legion, now more than 1,000,000 strong, is preparing for a determined fight to have the next Congress grant "protection" (pensions) to all widows and orphans of World War veterans.

Thus, not only will Congress be asked to make record-breaking appropriations to strengthen America's arms to guard against another war, but it will be asked to add considerably to the cost of the last one by creating nearly a quarter of a million new pensioners.

Raymond J. Kelly, national commander of the American Legion, told The Post yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel that Americans ought to understand the cost of any war necessarily has to include the cost of taking care of disabled and dependents of those veterans who die.

Col. John Thomas Taylor, Legion legislative director, often described as Washington's most effective lobbyist, echoed Commander Kelly's words.

"Now that Congress is considering appropriating money for building up the national defense," said Col. Taylor, "the country is becoming conscious of the cost of war.

"The country should realize that

Yale Crowd Rocks Browder in Auto After Booing Him

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Yale University students and "townies" joined forces tonight in an effort to overturn an automobile containing Earl Browder, Communist Party general secretary. Browder made a speech in a campus building despite opposition of veterans' organizations and refusal of other universities to permit his appearance on their grounds.

Young men crowded around the automobile as Browder was being driven away from Strathcona Hall, where he had addressed an audience of 600 persons, mostly students, some of whom showered him with pennies and interrupted his speech with guffaws and boos.

"Turn it over!" some of the crowd shouted as Browder entered the automobile. The car was rocked from side to side, but the driver managed to start it before it could be overturned.

Navy Spoils Fun, Lights Field to Aid Army 'Air Raider'

Lakehurst, N. J., Nov. 28 (AP).—Army aviators conducted a secret "raid" on the Lakehurst naval air station last night and the Navy, thinking the dozen flares dropped were from a plane in distress, spoiled the fun by turning on all the landing lights.

That was the explanation obtained today by Gill Robb Wilson, New Jersey's aviation commissioner, for the mysterious airplane which flew at 10,000 feet over the lighter-than-air base. It was a warplane "on a training mission" from Mitchel Field, N. Y.

The flares caused a five-acre woods fire nearby.

Polish Jews to Share in Aid From American Red Cross

The German government has consented to an "impartial distribution" of American Red Cross supplies in German-occupied Poland, it was announced here yesterday.

Red Cross officials had refused to send any supplies into the conquered areas until assured there would be no discrimination against Polish Jews. It was reported Nazi agencies had refused to give food to any but so-called Aryans.

Under the agreement announced yesterday, Jewish agencies will help in distributing American Red Cross supplies.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, said that $250,000 had been allotted for medicines, hospital supplies and clothing. He announced these would be sent into German-occupied Poland immediately.

"We have received word from our delegation in Berlin," Chairman Davis said, "that the German government has given us satisfactory assurances that American relief supplies will be distributed on a non-sectarian basis in Poland.

NAZI GIFT: In an off-the-record talk a few evenings ago, Herr Hans Thomsen, the Nazis' personable Charge d'Affaires here, argued the German side of the war to a small, select audience of Government officials and other eminent Washingtonians.

Harlan Miller

He concluded with a somewhat puzzling promise. His listeners didn't know whether he was serious or spoofing.

"When we win the war," he said, "Germany will deem it a fitting gesture to give Bermuda to the United States."

The same men heard flushed Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff try to justify the German position just before the demise of Czecho-Slovakia.

They report that Thomsen is fully as skillful at dialectics as Dieckhoff, who is still Ambassador to the U. S., but remains in Berlin. It was Dieckhoff who then said Prague was a German town. He turned out to be right.

There's a Hollywood whisper that when Will Hays was offered the job of movie czar, he asked an eminent politician whether it would be wise to accept.

"Yes," said the politician, after due thought, "provided you make 'em put your entire salary for the five years in a bank in escrow, so you'll be on the safe side in disputes with your bosses."

√ √ √ √

So the entire sum was deposited in a bank under iron-clad conditions.

The rumor is that at each renewal of Hays' contract, his salary (rumored to be over $50,000 a year) has each time been deposited in escrow, in full in advance, for the whole period.

On a third term for Roosevelt, there's a significant contrast between the latest Gallup and Fortune magazine surveys.

Gallup's survey of voters in Who's Who shows 54 per cent think he will run, 55 per cent think he will lose—but only 21 per cent of the Who's Who citizens would vote for him.

Fortune's survey of a cross-section of all voters shows 47.7 per cent want a third term for him, an increase of 12.5 per cent since war began.

There are around 31,545 listed in Who's Who.

The latest Roosevelt-McNutt story is credited to Mrs. McNutt, but I doubt that she's the author. Some one asked how the political liaison between the President and Mr. McNutt was developing.

"The President reminds me of a man who was half-wooing a lady," she is said to have said, "who kept looking into her eyes and saying I love you, I love you, but who never asked her to marry him."

It just goes to show.

"—gold in 3,000 counties!"

1939 GOLD RUSH? The latest cynical suggestion for disposal of the American gold hoard at Fort Knox would make a spectacular movie. It involves reburial of the gold in smaller batches and its rediscovery in a new, synthetic 1939 gold rush.

√ √ √ √

By this plan, each State would be given a share of the gold, according to its population. Then the States would bury a portion of it in each county, on the basis of its population.

√ √ √ √

Finally the 1939 sourdoughs could line up and, at a given signal, rush in and begin to dig. The scene would be like Cimarron or California in 1849, except that each of the 3,000 counties would have a little gold rush all its own

√ √ √ √

Sponsors of the idea here decline to grab any credit for it, offer it to the Treasury freely. They say the 1939-40 gold rush would stimulate business and re-create the vanished frontier in 3,000 counties.

57 Senators Favor Curbs On Trade Pacts

Would Make Future Treaties Subject to Senate Approval

A majority of the Senate—57 out of 96 members—favor making all future reciprocal trade agreements with foreign nations subject to Senate ratification, a survey yesterday by opposition leaders revealed.

Forces on Capitol Hill demanding that the reciprocal trade act be allowed to die next June 12, the end of its existence under present law, claimed they could count on a majority supporting that position. But they conceded an amendment to make the pacts subject to Senate ratification would command more votes.

Basing their survey upon direct conversations with other Senators and utterances made by legislators in the current furor over the proposed agreement with Chile, Senators leading the fight forecast Congress would put the axe to the Roosevelt-Hull foreign trade formula at the next session.

Constitution Cited

Consensus of this group was that 32 Democrats, 23 Republicans and the 2 Farmer-Laborites could now be considered as in favor of requiring all foreign trade agreements to be submitted to the Senate for ratification on the theory they are in effect treaties. All treaties, under the Constitution, are subject to Senate ratification.

Should President Roosevelt accede to recommendations of some of his stalwart supporters in Congress that he make no effort for extension of the reciprocal tariff act, it would be heralded as a blow to a major principle supported by Secretary Hull.

That Hull intends to wage a vigorous fight for rentention of the reciprocal tariff program has been made plain by him. The State Department, which negotiates the pacts, has begun assembling ammunition for a titanic struggle in Congress.

Johnson Opposes Pacts

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, who is opposed to extension of the life of the reciprocal trade act, scoffed at the radio appeal Sunday of British Prime Minister Chamberlain for a general whittling down of tariff walls. Hull warmly praised Chamberlain's speech.

"I would rather have as my witness the American farmer and other producers from the soil in this country," Johnson said. "The farmers, livestock men and others out West are dead set against the so-called reciprocal trade agreements program," the Senator added.

W. W. Wheeler, chairman of the metropolitan unit, yesterday reported an additional $8,481.30 from 573 givers. His workers have now collected $191,583.33, or 95.3 per cent of their $201,000 quota.

Advance Gifts Increase

Reporting for advance gifts, Chairman Thomas P. Morgan, jr., said 28 givers have pledged $9,410 during the past week, bringing the total to $455,053, or 87.33 per cent of the $521,000 quota.

The suburban unit, according to Chairman Donal L. Chamberlin, received $5,984 in pledges since last Wednesday, bringing its total to $37,767 or 72.63 per cent of the $52,000 quota.

Chamberlin pointed out that his suburban report is far from complete, although Montgomery County, Md., has made 118 per cent of its quota.

For the Capital (colored) unit, whose chairman, Nathan A. Dobbins, was unable to attend, it was reported that $557.93 was pledged. The total is now $6,592.92, or 82.40 per cent of the $8,000 quota.

"We're going over the top or bust!" declared Morgan, whose advance gifts unit must collect an additional $66,000 to make 100 per cent. "We're going over the top," echoed the entire army of 950.

New Deal Called Socialist by Nice

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—Former Gov. Nice of Maryland asserted tonight that "communism and socialism in the disguise of a New Deal have made advances over the country momentous and sinister in their extent and effect."

He told the National Republican Club the Roosevelt Administration "has advanced from purely humanitarian expedients to revolutionary measures and policies."

Library of Congress Receives Magna Carta As Six Supreme Court Justices Look On

Cherished copy of the Magna Carta was deposited in the Library of Congress yesterday for the duration of the European War by the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian. Librarian Archibald MacLeish accepted the document seen in the background. Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes witnessed the presentation

Library of Congress guards yesterday mounted day and night watch over a 17-inch sheet of medieval parchment, revered as the earliest written guarantee of Anglo-Saxon liberties.

The document, clearest of four known copies of the Magna Carta, is entrusted to the library's safekeeping until the European war is ended.

Six Supreme Court justices, Congressmen, historians, diplomats, tourists and library staff workers crowded the ornate gallery as the Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, delivered the priceless parchment into the "benevolent care" of Archibald MacLeish.

The librarian saw "an affirmation of the faith in which this Nation was conceived" in the "turn of time which brings the great charter of the English to stand across this gallery from the two great charters of American freedom."

Lord Lothian conveyed the British government's "great delight" that the library "has found for Magna Carta this wonderful position, where it lies alongside its own descendants, the Declaration of American Independence and the American Constitution."

Viewed last summer by more than 14,000,000 visitors to the British Pavilion at the New York World's Fair, the charter was quietly transferred three weeks ago to the British Embassy here.

Private detectives accompanied the embassy limousines yesterday to the library, where nearly 50 uniformed guards lined Magna Carta's route from curb to gallery.

Sealed in an airtight case of bronze and glass, the document was locked behind two more layers of glass in a tapestry-framed display cabinet.

"The principles which underlay Magna Carta are the ultimate foundations of your liberties no less than of ours," Lord Lothian declared. These liberties are still preserved, he said, "though at the moment they are being challenged by totalitarian imperialism, both from the right and from the left.

For Magna Carta to "come to its full fruition" he called on the present generation in America and Great Britain to develop the sense of responsibility which is "the correlative to freedom."

MacLeish, asserting the continued vitality of Magna Carta, said that representative government from time to time mistakes the demagogues for "true defenders of the people's rights" but in the end always restores "the people's limitations on its own powers."

Washington's copy of Magna Carta belongs to the dean and chapter of Lincoln Cathedral in England.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 28.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's charge that Earl Bowder, American Communist leader, "seems to feel that allegiance is to another country," is in line with the attitude toward Communists held by many American voters at the present time.

GEORGE GALLUP

In a national survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion a majority of those polled expressed the belief that the Communist Party in this country is merely an arm of the Soviet Union, being either controlled directly by Russia or working in close consultation with Russia. Only a small minority in the survey said they thought the Communist Party was entirely independent of Russia.

These views, of course, represent opinions only. The actual facts regarding Russia's relation to the party have not definitely been established in detail. Whether those polled in the survey are right or wrong in their estimate of Russian control over the party, their sentiments may account in part for the slow growth of the party in this country.

To find the general attitude of the public toward the American Communists, the Institute put to a cross-section of voters a question containing four statements. The voters were asked: "Which of these statements best describes your opinion about the Communist Party in the United States?"

The four statements, with the percentage vote on each follow:

The Communist Party in this country takes orders directly from Russia 25%

The policies of the Communist Party in the United States are decided on by Communists in this country in consulation with Russia 27%

The policies of the American Communist Party are decided entirely by Communists in the United States 9%

Know nothing about the Communist Party 39%

Some variation of opinion was found by income groups in the survey. More voters in the upper income level had opinions than in the lower levels. But in each level the largest single group with opinions felt that the party was controlled either directly or indirectly by Russia.

The study also found a sharp difference in the no opinion vote between farmers and urban voters. Whereas only about one-third (35 per cent) of city dwellers in the survey said they knew nothing about the Communist Party, one-half of the farmers (50 per cent) said they had no opinion answer.

In all of these groups—rich and poor, urban and farm—only small minorities, less than 10 per cent, felt that the Communist Party was a purely American party, independent of Russian control. And, as previous institute surveys have shown, Russia is one of the least liked foreign countries in the United States, polling only 1 per cent in a recent survey on favorite foreign nations.

Voters Estimate Communist Strength

Some anti-Communist forces in the United States have painted dramatic pictures of a so-called "red menace," professing to find a vast network of Communist Party workers throughout the country. In order to get some idea as to what the public's views on the matter are, the Institute asked a second question in its survey. The question was:

"About how many members do you think there are in the Communist Party in the United States?"

A large majority—60 per cent—said they did not know. Among the remainder who were willing to hazard a guess, the median average of all estimates was approximately 300,000.

In 1932 the Communist Presidential candidates polled approximately 100,000 votes, and the Communist Party vote in 1936 was approximately 80,000.

House Leaders Back Economy On All but Nation's Defense

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Cooperation in any "real" economy program laid down by the President was pledged yesterday by ranking Democratic members of the House Appropriations Committee, who urged cuts wherever possible in nonmilitary spending.

But suggested pruning of relief outlays drew a strong protest from the WPA, where officials denied that increased war trade would relieve unemployment materially and predicted this country still will have nearly 9,000,000 jobless next spring.

Both Chairman Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee and Representative Woodsum, of Virginia, a ranking member, took a contrary view. Both said they hoped gains in business and improvement in WPA administration would make possible "substantial cuts" in relief.

Defense to Come First

"Our first task is to preserve peace in the Western Hemisphere," said Chairman Taylor, "and to that end I look on my committee as America's first line of defense. With a buccaneer spirit abroad in the world, defense needs should and will come first. Savings should be made in other items, which are necessarily serondary. We should be willing to make some sarrifires in these."

Taylor said he would welcome any suggestions for economy from the White House, adding "my committee generally has cut under Presidential estimates and probably will do so again."

Woodrum said he viewed economy talks at Warm Springs as a "hopeful sign" but declared, "only by close cooperation between the executive and legislative branches can there be any real economy."

Like Taylor, Woodrum said it is too early to estimate what 190 relief needs will be, but he hoped for material savings. The Virginian said he recognized that jobs opened by increased defense spending would not directly absorb those on relief rolls, but said this coupled with business improvement should relieve the WPA load.

Republicans Skeptical

Interviewed following committee hearings on deficiency defense estimates, Woodrum said he viewed Army and Navy deficiency requests as "conservative" and echoed Taylor's belief, "defense must come first."

Strong skepticism as to the President's economy aims was voiced by two Republican members of the committee, Representatives Taber, of New York, and Wigglesworth, of Massachusetts.

"He does that every Christmas," said Wigglesworth.

There's no economy in sight," added Taber.

The New York Republican, ranking minority member of the appropriations committee, charged "they haven't begun to eliminate the waste and extravagance in WPA. If they would just do away with the abuses, we would have a big saving."

WPA Holds Funds Inadequate

Taber said he again will propose that half of the WPA burden be borne by the States."

The WPA, which last year received $1,477,000,000 from Congress to maintain an average of 2,000,000 on relief rolls, has not yet estimated 1940 relief needs. But spokesmen in a series of speeches have declared plainly they regard current funds as inadequate.

Gill declared the WPA program may have defects but "its serious weakness is that it does not provide work for enough of the unemployed." He added that "if saving money were the only consideration, surely the maximum merit would be to stop WPA and relief."

Meanwhile, WPA enrollments began to climb with winter's advance. Rolls as of November 8 stood at 1,930,463, an increase of 29,727 over the preceding week, and unpublicized figures since were believed to have raised the total past the 2,000,000 mark. Officials said this was only two-thirds of the eligible unemployed.

While House appropriations leaders were sharpening their knives for relief bill cuts, they were skeptical of the $1,000,000,000 estimate of Chairman Adams of the Senate Deficiency Appropriations subcommittee. Adams' estimate was based on a 1,300,000 WPA enrollment. One House committeeman suggested a $1,000,000,000 WPA appropriation might be supplemented by a related PWA appropriation.

Kuhn Branded 'Pathological' Liar by State

Bundsfuehrer Closes Eyes as Prosecutor Grows Sarcastic

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 28.—Fritz Kuhn, on trial in theft of $1,217 from his German-American bund, sat stolidly with closed eyes today as Assistant District Attorney McCarthy called him a "pathological" liar who had required his adherents to testify in his behalf.

Tomorrow, the case will go to the jury.

Answering defense contentions that Kuhn's position in the bund under the "leadership principle" was one of such power that he could do as he saw fit with bund funds, the prosecutor claimed that principle actually had operated as a "follow-the-leader" arrangement under which Kuhn's subordinates were ordered to support his story.

Scoffs at Accusations

Referring to a part of the indictment charging Kuhn with misappropriating $500 he had been supposed to pay James D. C. Murray, attorney, for legal services, McCarthy asserted the defense from that accusation was one by which the bund sought simultaneously to "clean its skirts and drop two Jews with the same stone."

The two State witnesses thus mentioned were Daniel Kirchman and Irving Hest, an accountant. They were offered to refute defense testimony that Kuhn had in fact sent the $500 to Murray's office and that Kirchman, a Murray associate, had signed a receipt for it.

"Don't you get the setup?" McCarthy asked sardonically. "Kirchman steals the cash. Irving Hest steals the receipt. . . But remember, Kirchman in Murray's office is a Jewish boy. Hest, the accountant in the district attorney's office, is a Jew."

Called "A Common Thief"

Denying the assertion of the defense that Kuhn's prosecution had a "political" motive, the prosecutor went on:

"Kuhn is not on trial for un-Americanism. He is charged with being a common thief."

McCarthy attacked Kuhn's lawyer, Peter L. F. Sabbatino, calling him a "caliban of ethics," and accused him of setting forth a "fabulous" defense, which, he said, was "a tissue of lies."

McCarthy's criticism of Sabbatino was in reply to the defense counsel's intimation, yesterday, that McCarthy kept a "tryst" in Miami with Mrs. Florence Camp, the "golden angel" of Kuhn's love letters.

The prosecutor said Kuhn had lied to the jury about Mrs. Camp, that he "deceived the bund about her sympathy for the bund," and that he lied before the Dies committee.

The blaze broke out in the hold of the 3,664-ton vessels, in which 100 barrels of gycerine were stored. Puerto Colombia authorities succeeded in moving the vessel to a distant part of the harbor, where the blaze was extinguished.

Comptroller Orders an End To Primping on G. A. O. Time

Employes Who Powder Noses Ahead Of Time, So as to Run When Bell Rings, Must Be Reported, Brown Says

By Alfred Friendly

General Accounting Office Employes may not powder noses or straighten neckties preparatory to springing from their chairs on the stroke of the 4:30 bell, Camptroller General Brown warned yesterday. Instead, he said, they must render "seven hours of faithful service" and not stop working a second before quitting time.

"It is observed," Brown said in a memorandum to his division chiefs, "that some of our employes stop work before official quitting time, apparently for the purpose of making themselves ready to leave the building exactly when the bell rings

Violators to Be Reported

"It is a rule of this office that all employes shall be at their stations of duty at the time set for work to begin and render seven hours of faithful service.

"'All supervisory officials are expected to require a strict observance of this rule and report the names of all violators."

Brown's ukase against jumping the gun carries on the G. A. O. reputation of being Washington's most machine-like, regimented and soulless Government office.

A Strict Office

Unlike almost any other Federal clerical agency, at the G. A. O.:

Employes may not receive personal phone calls at their desks. Incoming calls are questioned by the phone operators to determine if they are official.

Callers may not proceed to their destination, but must first go to the office of the chief clerk to state their business.

Other Comptroller General rulings yesterday:

Government employes are not entitled to military leave pay when called into service as Reserve officers in time of emergency. They obtain military leave with pay only during training periods not exceeding 15 days a year.

Temporary employes on a per diem, 5-day, 40-hour week basis are not entitled to pay for a holiday even though the holiday occurs on a day when they would ordinarily be working.

ODDENDA: When dignified Supreme Court Justice Harlan Fiske Stone wants his car and chauffeur, he places two fingers in his mouth and gives vent to an ear-splitting whistle, the envy of school boys for blocks around . . . Resigned comment of a secretary whose boss is never at his desk: "He's out conferencing around" . . . The Government lost $783,000 in 800 fires on Federal property in the 1938 fiscal year. In the District, the loss was only $5,809, or less than one-thousandth of one per cent of the value subject to loss.

Secretary Wallace did not know it at the time, but his recent speech to the land grant colleges association was the scenario of a new Pare Lorenz film for the AAA. The theme was conservation—not only of land and soil and water, but of humanity . . . In that speech, incidentally, Wallace recalled a little-remembered quotation of Patrick Henry, "He is the greatest patriot who stops the most gullies."

Admiral Byrd's expedition to Antarctica will stuff its collective knapsacks with some new dairy foods, not yet on the market. They were made of skim milk derivatives by the Bureau of Dairy Industry and include dried pea soup, wafers made of potatoes, skim milk and salt and caramels and fudge—the sissies!—containing whey solids.

Strategy behind the President's Merit System Improvement Committee moves is to submit its report before Congress convenes as a means of encouraging passage of the Ramspeck bill to extend civil service. The legislation has a privileged place on the House calendar and will be among the first orders of business of the next session. The committee report contains a thumping indorsement of the bill.

Although the committee will hold hearings beginning December 8, when friends of veterans' preference will have their day in court, those who know what they are talking about insist that the committee remains unchanged in its plan drastically to pare the preferences down. Gen. Robert E. Wood is the veterans' best advocate on the committee, and will stick against removing the preferences for peacetime veterans. He is agreed, however, on requiring all applicants to get a passing grade before addition of the 5 and 10-point bonuses, on ending the provision placing disabled veterans at the top of the list, and ending the waiver of age limits for veterans.

Civil Service exams: Operator of bulldozer and patrol grade, 65 cents an hour, and power shovel, $1.10 an hour, Public Roads Administration, Beltsville, Md.; ordnance material inspectors, $1,620 to $2,600, War Department; protozoologist, associate and assistant, from $2,600 to $3,800, Bureau of Animal Industry.

Thomas' Attack On Dies Critics Hit by Voorhis

Californian Disputes Belief Only the 'ism' Groups Oppose Probe

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

One member of the Dies committee was severely criticized by another yesterday for suggesting the only opposition to continuance of the committee next year will come from Communists or Nazi sympathizers.

Taking exception to a statement by Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, said that "whenever we get to the place where support of the indefinite continuance of one Congressional committee becomes the test of a man's patriotism, we are on mighty dangerous ground in the United States."

Roosevelt Question Open

Representative Thomas had urged making the committee a permanent one, and had warned that efforts next session to discontinue it "should be regarded with suspicion." He added that "only those sympathetic to the aims of foreign isms will join the united front to smear the committee."

Meanwhile, the door was still left open for the possible appearance of Mrs. Roosevelt as a witness. Chairman Dies said yesterday that he would confer on the matter with other members of the committee when he returns tomorrow from a trip to New York.

Mrs. Roosevelt has expressed her willingness to appear if she is asked. Three of the seven committee members have stated they would be glad to hear her. If she should take the stand, her testimony probably would constitute a defense of the American Youth Congress, which committee witnesses have charged is Communist-controlled.

Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of a subcommittee conducting this week's hearings on subversive activities in education, said yesterday he would be "interested in what Mrs. Roosevelt has to say, as I consider her one of the ablest women of the age."

Voorhis Outlines Stand

In his reply to Representative Thomas, Representative Voorhis, one of the New Dealers on the committee, asserted that "because a person disapproves of some of the methods of the Dies Committee certainly does not mean he is in favor 'of foreign isms' or against a decent presentation of facts concerning them."

"There are plenty of devoted American citizens," said Voorhis, "who are no more sympathetic to foreign isms than the members of the Dies Committee, who believe that such an investigation is of value to the Nation just to the extent that all the members of the committee are willing not only to let properly developed evidence speak for itself but also to refrain from unnecessary and alarming statements, unsupported by present evidence."

Witness Misses Train

Committee hearings were called off yesterday when the scheduled witness, William Howell, colored, of Detroit, wired that he had missed his train. Described as an extremely important witness, Nowell is expected to testify today.

Pair Admits Robbery of Filling Stations

Arrests in 12 Hours Clear Up Half of Monday Night Holdups

Just 12 hours after armed bandits robbed four stores and filling stations, police took into custody two men who confessed two of the robberies.

Lieut. John H. Fowler, chief of the robbery squad, announced quick solution of the crimes and stated he recovered part of the money taken and an automatic pistol which the suspects probably used.

One man was arrested in a rooming house in the 1100 block of Eleventh street northwest and the other was seized at a filling station at Twelfth and E streets northwest, where he was employed.

Fowler, who was aided in the captures by Detective Sergts. Elmer Lewis and Eugene E. Thompson, said both men admitted robbing Harry L. Carey, filling station attendant at Fifth and Kennedy streets northwest, and Elmont Thomas, at a gasoline station at New York avenue and Bladensburg road northeast. Both holdups occured shortly after midnight yesterday.

The suspects, the detectives stated, readily admitted the two robberies, but vehemently denied any knowledge of holdups at two liquor stores at about the same time. Fowler said both men are being held for investigation into other recent robberies and will be placed in a line-up before recent victims.

Both suspects are married and have small children, it was said.

Juanita Hawkins, 35, and William B. Williams, 28, both of the 100 block of S street northwest, were under arrest last night on charges of robbery. They were identified in a police line-up by five persons in connection with five robberies perpetrated last month.

Williams, those who identified him told police, had appeared in the dress of a woman. They were being held last night at the Second Precinct Station.

Army Bombers Fly Infantry in Test in Hawaii

A new use for Army bombers—flying infantrymen to battle—was revealed yesterday as having been recently tested.

Lieut. John J. Tolson, writing in the current Infantry Journal, tells of his machine gun company being flown to the remote island of Kauai in the Hawiian group from their home post near Honolulu, as an experiment.

It was assumed in a problem the small garrison on the island had been attacked. The company, with full equipment, was flown in ten B-18 bombers, and landed under the protection of the machine guns of the planes.

Officials here recalled that Germany flew troops to Vienna in the annexation of Austria.

Writer, Film Director Hurt in Auto Crash

Los Angeles, Nov. 28 (AP).—Gene Fowler, writer and humorist, and Leo McCarey, film director, were painfully but not critically injured in an automobile collision in nearby Azusa. They were pinioned last night under their car, which the director was driving.

Farm Program Anticipates No War Demand

270,000,000-Acre Planting Goal About Equals Last Season's

By the Associated Press

Foreseing little, if any, expansion in foreign demand for American agricultural products as a result of the war, the Agriculture Department yesterday set up a farm program for 1940 having a production goal about equal to that of the past season.

The program establishes a total planting goal of between 270,000,000 and 285,000,000 acres for the so-called "soil depleting" crops, which include wheat, corn, other grains, cotton, tobacco, rice, potatoes and commercial vegetables.

Existing surpluses in the major crops, the department said, appeared to be sufficient to supply any reasonable expansion in domestic and foreign requirements without increasing planting operations.

Below 1928-32 Average

The 1940 farm goal compares with an average of 308,000,000 acres planted to the major crops in the 1928-32 period, when American agriculture was operating at near peak capacity.

The planting goals for the major crops, next year and the past season, respectively, included: Wheat, 60,000,000 to 65,000,000 and 55,000,000, to 60,000,000 acres; corn, 88,000,000 to 90,000,000, and 94,000,000 to 97,000,000; cotton, 27,000,000 to 29,000,000, unchanged from 1939; rice, 880,000 to 900,000 and 850,000 to 880,000; peanuts, 1,550,000 to 1,600,000 and 1,550,000 to 1,650,000; potatoes, 3,100,000 to 3,300,000, unchanged from 1939; tobacco, 1,347,500 to 1,502,000 and 1,482,000 to 1,573,000; these allotments will be divided among farmers, and those who comply by planting within their individual allotments will share in $725,000,000 benefit payments authorized by Congress.

Two Types of Payments

Two types of payments will be provided—soil conservation, for which $500,000,000 is authorized, and price adjustment, for which $225,000,000 has been appropriated. Rates for the soil conservation payments next season compared with those of the past season are: Corn, 10 and 9 cents per bushel; cotton, 1.6 and 1.8 cents per pound; wheat, 9 and 17 cents per bushel; Rice, 6.5 and 9 cents per 100 pounds; peanuts, $2.50 and $3 per ton; potatoes, 3 and 3 cents per bushel; commercial vegetables, $1.50 and $1.50 per acre; tobacco, flue-cured and burley, 1 and 0.8 cents per pound; fire and dark air-cured tobacco, 1.2 and 1.26 cents per pound; type 41 tobacco, 0.6 and 1.0 cents per pound; cigar filler and binder tobacco, 1 and 1 cent per pound; Georgia-Florida type 62 tobacco, 1.2 and 1.5 cents per pound.

Others to Be Determined

The price adjustment payment rates, which will be limited to wheat, corn, tobacco, cotton and rice, will be determined later.

In areas outside the special cotton, corn, wheat and tobacco belts, farmers will be allowed $1.10 per acre for complying with soil-depleting acreage allotments allowed them. Other special payments will be allowed for following recognized soil-building practices such as planting legumes, restoring cultivated land to grasses and building water conservation facilities.

R. M. Evans, agricultural adjustment administrator, said the 1940 program offered more opportunity for soil conservation than did the 1939 program, largely through encouraging practices which normally are not carried out on a large number of farms.

Chrysler Dispute Ends for 60,000

their supplies of new automobiles were exhausted.

Officials of Chrysler Corporation said a "slow-down, job-skipping strike" was in progress; union leaders said it was a lockout.

It was not until weeks had passed that the union formally called a strike and set up picket lines at the main Dodge plant.

Open hostility between corporation and union flared October 6 when more than 100 workers at the Dodge main plant, key unit of Chrysler operations, were dismissed.

The union charged the men were discharged for their inability to keep pace with what it termed a "speedup" of production standards; the corporation stated those discharged had "refused to do their work and flouted discipline."

For several days following October 6, Dodge workers returned to the plant at the opening of each shift only to be sent home after short working periods when the management said "slow-downs" made continued operation impossible. Finally the men no longer entered the plants.

Mexican Envoy Stresses Good Will to Legionnaires

Lower—Genevieve and Tommy Callahan, daughter and son of the post commander, and Barbara Buckley, daughter of junior vice commander, hold American and Mexican colors, presented to Senor Castillo Najera with bouquet of American beauty roses

Declaring that relations between the United States and Mexico are growing closer every day, Francisco Castillo Najera, the Mexican Ambassador, addressed members of National Cathedral Post, American Legion, at a "Good Neighbor" night program.

The envoy and others of his family and members of the embassy staff were guests of the legionnaires, whose guard of honor accompanied the Mexican party from the embassy to the hall at Wisconsin avenue and Windom place northwest.

As an evidence of the good will of the two American republics, the Ambassador expressed the hope that the legionnaires would come to Mexico City for their national convention 1941.

Replying to the envoy's remarks, Lawrence Duggan, chief of the State Department's division of American Republics, said Ambassador Castillo Najera "not only has consistently given every effort toward improvement of relations between the United States and Mexico, but has contributed in a general way to fostering better relations between all of the nations of this hemisphere."

Frank Buckley, legion vice commander, introduced the speakers.

Delay Convention, Roosevelt Urged

will be held but who will seek and who will obtain the Presidential nominations.

Some observers were inclined to the view that members of the President's party might be attempting to lay a smoke screen behind which the Democratic convention might be deferred, even if the Republican parley were held in June. If that maneuver were carried out, they said, Mr. Roosevelt could hold back announcement of a decision on a third term.

Some political prognosticators asserted that a delay in the President's decision on a third term might readily have significant effects on Congress.

They said that if Mr. Roosevelt announced during a Congressional session that "he did not choose to run" again, the transaction of legislative business might be muddled by efforts of Senate and House members to get on the bandwagon of the right potential candidate or to push their own choices for the nomination.

Eight Rescued In Northeast Store Fire

Blaze Begins in Cellar And Rises to Where Families Are Asleep

Eight persons, including a 9-month-old baby and two small girls, escaped early yesterday when fire broke out in the cellar of the store over which they lived at 500 Twelfth street northeast.

Apparently caused by a short circuit in electric wires, the blaze enveloped the basement and ate through the rafters to the first floor. The residents were awakened and led to safety before firemen arrived.

Mrs. Elva Anderson, 20, said an unidentified man took her and her baby son, Vernon Lee, through the dense smoke. Mrs. Dora Deigan, wife of the store proprietor, and her two daughters, Shirley, 10, and Annette, 7, also were led down the smoky stairs by a neighbor. Mr. Deigan was not at home, it was said.

Other residents of the apartment, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Martin and their daughter, Alice, 18, were taken out by two cab drivers.

In the meantime, the fire marshal's office and a special squad of detectives have been searching for a firebug who started nine fires in apartment houses in the Kalorama and Belmont roads section Sunday morning.

Mrs. Krechel died Tuesday. She was a native of Baltimore, but had lived here for many years at 3000 Connecticut avenue.

She is survived by her husband, a brother, Milton Meyers, and two sisters, Mrs. Gertrude Hartzel and Mrs. Pearl Sindal.

tries, she declared her strict neutrality in the present European conflict at the outbreak of hostilities."

Finland has tried to find a peaceful solution to the present dispute with the Soviet government, said the envoy, and representatives sent to Moscow have done everything they could. But to solve these problems, he declared, we cannot "go beyond the limits of neutrality." It would be going beyond such limits to open places on Finnish soil for foreign troops.

The Aaland Islands in the Gulf of Finland, which the Russians want for military bases, serve now "as a friendly hand to our neighbor, Sweden," said Procope. To give up control of this hand would affect the whole situation in northern Europe, he declared, adding that since the Soviet obtained certain Estonian islands in the gulf for bases, it can no longer be said that Leningrad is threatened.

"Determination must go along with neutrality," declared the minister. "Finland does not intend the slightest aggression. But in light of recent events the precautions we have taken cannot be considered provocative."

Extra Budget To Carry Costs

dollars and cents, it did not look like a lot of money.

The trimming was done at a conference with Budget Director Harold S. Smith.

The President said he was cutting out increases in Federal positions which had slipped into various bureaus which were doing the same work as they were last year and the year before.

He said it was a good thing for the Government to prune the tree even though the amount in dollars and cents was small.

For instance, on a bureau that costs $300,000 a year to run, Mr. Roosevelt said he would take out $3,000, which would mean the elimination of two jobs paying $1,500 a year.

[In a survey published last Saturday, The Post revealed that practically no reduction in personnel had accompanied operations of the President's reorganization plan in executive offices to date. In most cases, it was shown, personnel figures of the agencies affected had increased.—Editor's note.]

Navy's "A" Budget Completed

Actually there is only one budget submitted to Congress, but the portions for defense, relief, agriculture activities, the Commerce Department and all the other governmental activities are called budgets, whereas a more accurate term would be "sub-budgets." The defense items will be placed in different sub-budgets, the President indicated.

The Navy's regular "A" budget already has been sent to the House Appropriations Committee, he asserted.

The same system applies, Mr. Roosevelt said, to the Army, Coast Guard and counter-espionage operations of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

May Address Congress

The "B" budget has not been completed, the President said, and the $500,000,000 is a rough estimate. The entire budget, he said, would be submitted to Congress the day after he delivered his annual message to the legislators. He said he probably would deliver the message in person either on January 3, when Congress convenes, or on January 4.

In response to questions, Mr. Rooevelt asserted today that the comments and newspaper editorials which mentioned a special tax to finance the added defense expenditures were all to the good.

Asked about relief, Mr. Roosevelt did not answer a question whether he thought the outlay in the next fiscal year could be held down to $1,000,000,000.

An estimate of relief requirements will be made in mid-December, he said, and a sum to meet them included in the budget. It is hoped that whatever amount is requested will last through the year, he said, but it might have to be increased after another survey of relief needs is made in April.

Relief rolls are pretty well down now, the President said. He could not recall whether a million, six, seven or eight hundred thousand persons were on them.

James R. Shade Funeral Services Set Tomorrow

Services for James R. Shade, 64, resident manager of the apartment house at 2131 O street northwest, will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Deal funeral home, 816 H street northeast, with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery. He died Monday at his home.

A resident of Washington for 25 years, he was formerly in the plumbing business before taking over the managership of the apartment house nine years ago. He was a member of the Loyal Order of Moose.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ella Shade; a son, James R. Shade, jr., of Erie, Pa.; two daughters, Mrs. Susan Walker, of Pottsdale, Pa., and Mrs. Pearl Park, of Cleveland, Ohio; a sister, Mrs. Laura Daddysman, of Washington; 10 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Legion Asks Widow-Orphan Pensions

the cost of war also includes the cost of caring for those injured in battle and the dependents of those veterans who die. It is just as much a war cost as the purchase of arms and munitions. However, people are inclined to forget that after a war is over."

Col. Taylor said the fight to be made in the 1940 election year for widows and orphans of World War veterans would be the most intensive since the battle for adjusted compensation, popularly called the "bonus."

Congress already has passed legislation to take care of widows and orphans of men who were disabled in the World War. However, the bill on which the Legion will base its fight this time contains no such restriction.

221,600 Affected Now

Widows and orphans of all World War veterans, wounded or not, would receive pensions if they needed them.

Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the Veterans' Administration, has gone on record against the widows and orphans bill. He estimated that in the first year it would cost $78,089,000 if all those entitled to pensions made application.

Gen. Hines said the bill would add to the pension rolls, as of 1939, some 221,600 dependents of World War veterans, classified as follows:

34,800 children (orphans).
67,500 widows.

The American Legion's bill, which was introduced October 23 by Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation, provides that widows and orphans of veterans who served 90 days or more in the war would be eligible.

Maximum Would Be $64

The monthly rates of compensation would be: Widow but no child, $30; widow with one child, $38 (with $4 for each additional child); no widow but one child, $15; no widow but two children, $22 (equally divided); no widow but three children, $30 (equally divided), and $3 for each additional child.

Total compensation would not exceed $64 a month. A widow without child, or a child, whose annual income exceeded $1,000 could not collect the pension. Neither could a widow with child, or children, whose annual income exceeded $2,500.

Representative Rankin said yesterday he would attempt to get hearings on the widows and orphans bill early in the forthcoming session.

"I doubt if this bill would cost any more than it would cost if these people went on relief," he said. "And I don't think that the widows and orphans of men who offered their lives to the Nation should have to go on relief."

Strategy Meeting Here

National Commander Kelly, who, along with other Legion leaders, is dead set against America having anything to do with the war now being fought in Europe, pointed out that the Nation spent $40,000,000,000 on the World War, without persuading Europe to "see things in the idealistic way we saw them."

Commander Kelly said that the Legion, at its last national convention demanded that the widows and orphans of the World War be afforded the same protection as widows and orphans of men who served in the country's other wars.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Leopold Stokowski conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra Tuesday evening in Constitution Hall. Program: Overture in D minor (Handel), Symphony in G minor (Mozart), Passacaglia in C minor (Bach), "Nocturnes" (Debussy), "Pictures at an Exhibition" (Musorgski).

As is always the case when Leopold Stokowski comes to Washington with the Philadelphia Orchestra, there was no vacant floor space in Constitution Hall last evening except the aisles. An observer unaware of the drawing power of the unpredictable conductor might have thought that the capacity audience had assembled to see the widely advertised new seating arrangement of the players, but since this idea emanated from the Stokowskian mind, the focal point of attention would have been virtually the same. Moreover, the program contained two of his resplendent transcriptions, which were enough in themselves to excite interest.

Although final judgment must be suspended until such time as the tonal problems can be analyzed in an auditorium with better acoustics than Constitution Hall possesses, the net result of the unorthodox shifting of the instrumental choirs, as noted at this concert, was merely more noise. The full volume of a modern orchestra in fortissimo is overwhelming enough without resorting to strategic devices for increasing that volume. The human ear can take just so many vibrations before the saturation point is reached, and thereafter the beauty of tone is distorted, and the pleasure of listening turns into pain.

Mr. Stokowski has seated the woodwinds in a semi-circle before the podium, placed the horns and percussion at the right front, the basses at the left front, the double basses at the back, and fitted in the other strings wherever there was room. This arrangement is a distraction to the eyes as it brings sharply to notice instruments whose peculiarities are usually discreetly veiled. The eyes are not the sense organs primarily concerned with a concert, and anything that stimulates their activity is an extra-musical phenomenon that detracts from auditory enjoyment.

One surmises that this shuffling of the orchestral design may be an outcome of Mr. Stokowski's present preoccupation with problems of radio transmission and cinema sound-tracks. The microphone and the human ear, however, are radically different mechanisms, and what is good for one may be bad for the other. It is a well-known fact that an orchestra in a broadcasting hall designed for transmission does not sound so well to an audience in that hall as it does elsewhere.

Were the musicians of the Philadelphia Orchestra jumbled in the utmost confusion they would still constitute a virtuoso organization. So despite unexpected and disturbing blasts of trombones and unusually loud salvos of horns, the performance had its wanted excellence in technique and tone. Handel's D minor overture was an impressive portal for the G minor symphony of Mozart, which was given a delightful reading. The Mozartian impressions were then completely obliterated by the massive proportions of Bach's great passacaglia as arranged by the conductor.

The second half of the program began with a beautifully tinted performance of Debussy's "Nocturnes." There was but one flaw in the balance of dynamics—an excess of voices in "Sirenes." Members of the Women's Glee Club of the University of Pennsylvania to the number of 25 vocalized the lines of the sirens, when there should have been ten at the most. The effect which Debussy surely wished to produce was that of the magical call of voices from a distance, voices sounding so far away that one is not always certain that they are voices. The fact that Debussy did not write words for the singers but had them vocalize indicates to me that he intended that the hearer should strain his ears to catch the luring call.

Mr. Stokowski's "symphonic transcription" of Musorgski's piano suite, "Pictures at an Exhibition," caps all of the arrangements that have been made of this imaginative work. The instrumentation is more than clever; it is masterly in the manner in which the suggestions that Musorgski put into the limited medium of the piano are caught up and magnified. Because of this magnification, the version is practically a new work built upon the hints of the composer, and its only relation to the original is in the use of the same themes.

"Buy Christmas Seals"

Roosevelt Backs Seal Sale

President Roosevelt yesterday indorsed the annual sale of Christmas Seals and declared the campaign of the National Tuberculosis Association "merits the continued support of all the people of our country."

"As the Christmas season approaches, my mind is drawn to the fact that it is again time for all of us to give our support to the sale of Christmas seals," said the President.

"This is such a well established custom in the United States that it seems hardly necessary again to call the attention of the people to its importance.

"Tuberculosis still menaces the lives of all our citizens and it leads in the cause of death of those between the ages of 15 and 45.

"The fine work that has been done by the National Tuberculosis Association in the prevention of this dreaded disease merits the continued support of all the people of our country."

The campaign, sponsored by the National Association and nearly 2,000 local organizations, will open in the District December 1.

Officials said yesterday that in addition to the seals, this year's campaign will include sale of Christmas "bonds" in denominations from $5 to $100, to be distributed to business firms through a special volunteer committee of the Junior Board.

British Strafe Mine-Laying Planes' Base

Frisian Island Drome Machine-Gunned in English Attack

By Robert P. Post.
Copyright by New York Times

London, Nov. 28.—A squadron of long-range British Royal Air Force fighters, whose mission was patrolling for enemy mine-laying submarines, today reconnoitered the German seaplane base at Borkum and machine-gunned three mine-laying planes based there.

From the brief air ministry announcement, it would appear that the attack, which was carried out safely through heavy anti-aircraft fire, was a little of something extra on the part of the British pilots.

If either reconnaissance or destruction was the mission it would appear that the British would have used light or heavy bombers capable of attacking or photographing the German base. Apparently the fighters saw seaplanes at their base and could not tresist tthe chance. Having nno bombs, they dived with their machine guns spottinng. It is not recorded whether the attack did any serious damage to German planes.

Dropped No Bombs

By the United Press

Berlin, Nov. 28.—British war planes today machine-gunned the German air base at Borkum, 26 miles northwest of Emden at the mouth of the Ems River, but dropped no bombs.

An official statement announcing the raid said the enemy planes attacked the Borkum airdrome of the German air force. The British planes were driven off by German antiaircraft fire, the statement said.

The DNB news agency had reported earlier that an attempted British air attack on the northwest coast of Germany on the night of November 27-28 had failed. One British plane was believed lost after being forced down in the North Sea, DNB said.

DNB Admits Losses

DNB, reviewing air warfare of the past week, admitted Germany had lost a "number of planes" in reconnaissance flights over France "because of the very heavy antiaircraft fire to which our planes are exposed."

In reconnaissance flights on November 22-23, DNB said, German planes won six battles over French territory, mostly near the frontier. Ten French planes were shot down. The Germans lost four, plus two forced landings and one machine missing.

German Messerschmitt 109 planes have proved "greatly superior" to the American Curtiss and French Morane fighters which the French are using, it was asserted.

Official comment on today's land operations said that east of Moselle, Allied artillery shelled areas around Perl, Sehndorf, Hammelsberg and the Tuntinger Forest. German artillery retaliated by shelling the enemy infantry positions.

Northwest of Grindorf a German scouting detachment captured eight French prisoners, including an officer.

Belgians Fight Off Planes

Brussels, Nov. 28 (AP).—Antiaircraft batteries in Brussels, Malines, Ghent, Bruges and Ostend went into action today when a group of foreign planes flew over Belgium.

Observers in Brussels saw three planes which informed persons said apparently were German.

Belgian planes took off to intercept the foreign planes, but the latter quickly disappeared. Reports from Ghent said one plane passed there flying northwest at about 18,000 feet.

Life-Preserving Cabinet for Premature Infants Bought With Funds Given by Same Physicians Who Treat Charity Patients Free

Thanks to the philanthropy of its visiting staff doctors, Providence Hospital today has an incubator which will mean the difference between life and death to some of the babies born prematurely on the maturnity floor.

Sister Rosa, superintendent of Providence, yesterday announced acquisition of the modern life-preserving cabinet and at the same time highly praised the physicians and surgeons who made it possible.

"Forty-five of our staff doctors contributed from $5 to $25 each to buy the incubator," she said proudly. "I think it was wonderful of them. Remember, these are the same doctors who gave their time and services free to our charity patients.

"All of them are always on call, whether they're needed to deliver a baby or to sew up the heart of someone who's been stabbed. Sometimes we get them out of bed in the middle of the night. And now they've dug down into their own pockets to buy the hospital something it needs so badly."

So far this year, 32 premature infants have been born at Providence Hospital, including four sets of twins. Heretofore the only incubators available have been makeshift ones, with an electric bulb furnishing the only heat.

The new piece of equipment cost $425 and, with its compact heating and humidification system, is just about the last word in baby incubators.

"Our doctors raised so much," said Sister Rosa jubilantly, "that I believe there will be enough left over to install a signal lighting system in the hospital.

Still Seized Over Laundry

A squad of Washington police and internal revenue agents raided a room above a Chinese laundry in the 800 block of Twelfth street northeast yesterday afternoon and arrested Quong Sing, 28, on charges of possessing an unregistered still, and operating it without bond.

On the second floor of the laundry, police, led by Sergt. W. T. Murphy, of the Ninth Precinct, said they found a 10-gallon still, 150 gallons of mash and 49 gallons of finished whisky, 25 gallons of which was a particular Chinese variety. The still, mash and whisky were confiscated and taken to the precinct station.

The raid was staged on a warrant issued by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. Sergt. Murphy reported that on several occasions he had noticed the odor of whisky and mash in the neighborhood of the laundry, and that investigation led to yesterday's raid.

Md. Wife Says Husband Missing With 'Large Sum'

Prince Georges County police yesterday posted a lookout for Carl W. Schneider, 46, Mitchellville (Md.) storekeeper, who disappeared from his home October 3 with a "large sum of money" in his possession.

Josef Schneider, brother of the missing man, said he had received a telephone call from him on October 19, when he said he was in Florida and would leave immediately for home. No word has been received from him since then.

Mrs. Elfriede Schneider told police her husband left home, saying he was going to Bowie. She said she knew he had "a large sum of money," but couldn't say how much. He left his home in a light panel body delivery truck, Mrs. Schneider reported.

Clashes Reported On Finnish Border

attempt was repulsed by rifle and machine-gun fire.

Earlier, it was declared, five Finns were engaged in a skirmish on the isthmus between the peninsulas of Rybachi and Srendi, within the Arctic Circle.

Although the Soviet border patrol at first gave ground, it was reported, reinforcements were received, the Finns were chased back into Finland and three of them captured.

A third incident, in which Finnish rifle fire across the border was not returned, also was related.

In greater detail, the incidents were described by the radio as follows:

"At 5 p. m. (9 a. m., E. S. T.) a group of five Finnish soldiers was observed crossing the frontier by a Soviet frontier guard patrol on the isthmus between the peninsulas of Rybachi and Sredni within the Arctic Circle.

"The Soviet patrol opened fire and began to withdraw but was reinforced and threw the Finnish detachment back into their own territory.

"Three Finnish prisoners were taken, and some weapons and equipment seized.

Rifle Fire Charged

"One hour later, at 6 p. m. (10 a. m., Eastern standard time), near "Hill 204.2," rifle fire broke out from the Finnish side. Soviet troops did not return the fire, however, which was from two Finnish soldiers who fired five shots.

"The third incident occurred when two Finnish artillery shells burst 500 yards within Soviet territory as marked by boundary post No. 367, and small groups of Finnish infantry attempted to cross the frontier.

"But they were met by rifle and machine gun fire and forced to retreat to the inferior of Finnish territory."

The latter incident was said to have occurred near Vidliteak (Vedlitsa), north of Lake Ladoga.

The broadcast added that the Soviet guard on the frontier in the Far North, scene of the first clash, had been strengthened, and that there had been no Russian casualties.

Democrat Votes Twice and Grand Jury Just Grins

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 28 (INS).—The Westchester County Grand Jury today refused to indict Henry Muck, 76, for admittedly casting two votes in the recent Mount Vernon elections.

Henry was just a victim of his own high spirits, he explained to the satisfaction of the grand jury. Since 1896 Henry has been an active Democratic worker.

For many years he was Democratic captain of the Thirty-sixth Election District, and a rivalry to cast the first vote grew between him and John Archer, the Republican captain.

On November 7, Henry raced to the Thirty-sixth Election District poll, and cast his vote. He beat Archer by one minute.

Henry was still slapping his thigh with glee when he realized he had moved last August to the Tenth Election District. Greatly abashed, he trotted over to the Tenth and cast another vote, thinking the second would invalidate the first, he said.

Both votes stood, however. The grand jury excused it and the Republicans don't mind—they won, anyhow.

ties on the border have originated in the heated imagination of border troops. The Finnish command was questioned until midnight and it gave no disquieting reports. Troops have been withdrawn some distance from the border and are strictly ordered to avoid any incidents even if provoked.

Helsinki Quiet

The atmosphere here is quiet even if nervousness has been intensified. The Finnish radio made no comment on the new Russian diplomatic moves in its broadcast last night.

The Soviet government's note delivered last evening to the Finnish foreign ministry shattered with one blow Finland's fervent hope that the Soviet rulers would accept corroborated assurances that the fatal shots near Mainila, frontier village, on Sunday were not fired from the Finnish side.

The Soviet note, on the contrary, bears witness that the Finnish evidence made no impression on the Soviet government, but seems to have aggravated its expressed apprehension of Finnish attacks upon Leningrad.

Gravity Recognized

It was clearly indicated all over Finland last night that the Soviet decision to annul the non-aggression pact made the position of this country still more serious and distinctly increased the chances of an open conflict.

Finnish official circles did not fail to note the ominous character of the move of terminating the pact without any notice.

Much anxiey is felt here about the four islands in the eastern part of the Gulf of Finland that are near the shipping lane of Leningrad and are among those part of Finnish territory that the Soviet demanded in previous negotiations. The Baltic red fleet in the last few days has been cruising in the Gulf of Finland and it is regarded as not impossible that it might contemplate occupying them.

Finland's Darkest Day

It remains to be seen whether the Soviet has other military aspirations awaiting maturity—either the Karelian Isthmus where Finland has a strong fortification system or southwest Finland in Hango district where the Soviet has demanded a naval base.

Yesterday was the darkest day for the people of Finland during eight painful weeks. Everybody realizes that a climax is approaching. The general calm, however, continues to reign everywhere, as the people have confidence that the cabinet is doing its utmost to preserve peace.

"With denunciation of the non-aggresion pact, there no longer is any formal obstacles against the Russians coming over," a foreign office spokesman said.

"Anything is possible now. The situation is most grave.

"The next few days may be decisive."

Observers here quickly drew a parallel between the Russian move and Adolf Hitler's denunciation of the German-Polish nonaggression pact last April, five months before he sent troops into Poland.

Finns Steadfast

Finland has steadfastly rejected Soviet territorial demands presented in negotiations which began in Moscow October 7 and were broken off November 13 by the Finns, who maintained they could not meet them and maintain their independence.

A bitter Russian press campaign against Finland ensued and was climaxed on Sunday by demands that Finland withdraw her troops 12 to 16 miles from the border. The Finns replied yesterday that they would do so only on condition that Russia did likewise. The Russian demand followed allegations 13 of her soldiers were casualties of Finnish cannon.

The most vitriolic of these attacks came Sunday when Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, attacked Finnish Premier Cajander and urged that the fate of "Polish jacknapes" should be learned in Helsinki.

Errko Leaves Door Open

This attack was followed up by an ultimatum-like message from Soviet Premier Molotoff protesting the alleged border incident Sunday at Mainila where Finnish cannon were declared to have spoken.

In his reply yesterday, Finnish Foreign Minister Errko left the door open to arbitration by announcing readiness to meet the Russian demand, for withdrawal of Finland's troops on condition that Soviet forces followed suit.

Errko also advised Moltotoff that investigation disclosed no shots were fired across the border by the Finns and suggested there might have been "an accident on the Russian side in connection with exercises . . . which, unfortunately, claimed a loss of life."

In her original demands Russia asked of Finland:

A lease on a small section of Finnish territory near the entrance of the Gulf of Finland—for military purposes.

Title to some small islands in the Gulf of Finland.

Portions of the Rybachi Peninsula on the Arctic Ocean.

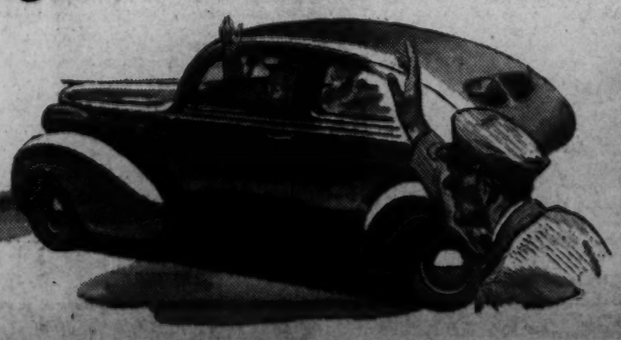
WINTER'S ACCURSED 90 HOURS

—mild to your OIL-PLATED engine

5 to 8 minutes isn't "such a much" unless your cold engine is straining that long without prompt lubrication. And how much worse when you figure that less than a dozen cold starts a day threaten all of an hour's lubrication delay. In the course of the Winter that could exceed 90 hours of risky slow-motion oiling . . . that's what—90 hours!

Let's be sensible and not just hope blindly that 90 hours or even half that won't hurt. The way to avoid the worst chance of harm is to change today to OIL-PLATING.

Automatically your engine becomes OIL-PLATED as you drive from Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station with a fill of his Conoco Germ Processed oil—



patented. The basic patents cover the use of a rare man-made substance that goes into this Germ Processed oil to effect the close union or bond between the oil and the engine parts. Like chrome-plating on the bumpers, OIL-PLATING in the engine can't drain down every time the car stands, and therefore OIL-PLATING isn't waiting to be restored "from scratch" every time you start up again. How different from oils that can only flow fast! Surely OIL-PLATING must beat them to it. In advance of any flow, it's there! This drain-proof slippy OIL-PLATING lets the starter turn easy, the engine turn fast, and you're safely away. The only wait is a good long one before you'll ever need to add another quart of Germ Processed oil. From Your Mileage Merchant only. OIL-PLATE today. Continental Oil Company

Dutch Ships To Risk Perils Of War at Sea

Greece Faces Crisis From British Plan To Seize Nazi Goods

By the Associated Press

Amsterdam, Nov. 28.—Netherlands government sources declared tonight Dutch ships will continue to sail the seas despite war dangers and new blockade restrictions imposed by the British and French.

A semi-official statement, referring to uneasiness over the sinking of seven Dutch ships in recent weeks and to delays to shipping caused by the blockade, said active steps were being taken through diplomatic channels in belligerent capitals "to defend our rights as a neutral state."

Netherlands ships, it was announced, are sailing with new safety measures worked out with naval advisers following the loss of the Simon Bolivar, one of six Dutch vessels sunk by mines.

Crossings of the North Sea now are proceeding in groups of two or three led by tugboats equipped with paravanes to ward off mines.

Greece May Force Crisis

Copyright by New York Times.

Geneva, Nov. 28.—Greece may face a serious economic crisis in the near future owing to the Anglo-French decision to seize German exports aboard neutral ships, it was learned here today. More than half of Greece's imports, it was said, come from Germany by sea.

As England and France are believed to have enough warships in the Mediterranean to carry out their plan, sea-borne imports are expected to cease, it was said.

Greek importers have been busy rushing through the customs accumulated German goods. Last week, according to Greek circles here, the credit in Greece's favor had fallen from 16,000,000 to 2,000,000 blocked marks.

Italy Sounds Warning

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 28.—The Giornale d'Italia protests today against a London News Chronicle story which indicates that England might close the Suez Canal, Gibraltar and the Dardanelles in its campaign to blockade Germany.

"Let us repeat without indulging in polemics that the idea is most dangerous," it says. "It may induce other people who are not yet participating in the war to meditate on the domination of vital territories and routes. And it may lead them to think that such a state of affairs cannot endure."

This warning touches one of the fundamental concepts of the war for Italians. They feel like prisoners in the Mediterranean with potential enemies guarding all three doors—England, France and Turkey. If they see a chance to alter that state of affairs, they will, concludes Giornale d'Italia.

Nazis Silent on Exports

Berlin, Nov. 29 (AP).—Authorized sources were unable to say today what reprisals, of any, Germany would take in response to Britain's publication of an order in council providing for seizure of German exports at sea. They said Germany first would see how the new policy works out.

Sinking of the British freighter Uskmouth, 2,483 tons, with loss of 3 of her crew of 25. Cause of the sinking was not immediately made known.

BETTY ANN MRS. WILLIAM COOKE WILLA MAE FLORENCE

Mrs. William Cooke, whose husband is fighting for life in an iron lung at Gallinger Hospital, reads her children a bedtime story. The rent on their home, 1729 Bay street southeast, is paid up until December 13, but they won't have the money for the next payment—it's being used to care for the stricken 28-year-old father. Last spring Willa Mae Florence, 2, was near death from pneumonia, but was saved by a "lung" similar to the one in use by her father

Col. Burnett, Aide to Chief of Cavalry, Dies

Headed Insular Bureau Till June; Served in A. E. F. in World War

Col. Charles Burnett, former chief of the Army bureau of insular affairs, died at Walter Reed Hospital Monday. He had been ill nearly three months.

Since June executive to the chief of cavalry, Col. Burnett had charge of the War Department insular bureau from May, 1937, until it was transferred to the Interior Department six months ago. In that office he held the temporary rank of brigadier general.

In Philippines With Pershing

Born at Concord, Tenn., 62 years ago, Col. Burnett entered West Point in 1897. After graduation in 1901, he served in the Philippine Insurrection and was aide to Gen. John J. Pershing in the islands in 1907. From 1911 to 1914, Col. Burnett spent the first of several assignments at Tokyo, learning the Japanese language.

He was military attache to Japan for most of the time between 1919 and 1929, returning here in 1924 to attend the Army War College.

In the World War, Col. Burnett saw action with the Fifteenth French division at Montdidier-Noyon and as operations officer of the Thirtieth A. E. F. Division participated in the Sommen and Ypres-Lys offensives. After the armistice he was chief of staff of Base Section 1 at St. Nazaire. He received the Distinguished Service Medal for his war services.

Had Many Decorations

Much of Col. Burnett's troop service was spent with the Third Cavalry at Fort Myer. In 1929-30, he was assistant military attache to Great Britain and served as advisor to the American delegation at the London naval conference. Prior to becoming chief of the bureau of insular affairs, he served with the military intelligence division of the General Staff and commanded the Sixth Cavalry at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

His widow, Mrs. Frances Hawks Cameron Burnett, survives.

Funeral services will be Friday at 2 o'clock.

chatted pleasantly with his doctor and nurses, even joked that he was back in the Navy again.

Cooke served a four-year hitch in the Navy before he was married. Now the Navy has come to him, for the respirator in which he is incased was borrowed from Naval Hospital. Gallinger's own respirator has had a lad, Billy Taylor, in it since September 3, necessitating the loan when Cooke was admitted two weeks ago as an emergency patient, stricken with infantile paralysis.

"It took a few days to get used to this contraption," he said. "Lying on your back all the time was pretty tiresome at first. But now I feel pretty comfortable."

Just around the corner, where the Cooke home is, his wife was equally uncomplaining, despite the bleak outlook.

"Our rental agent was very nice," she said. "He told me not to begin worrying yet about the rent. But, after all, December 13 is not far off."

Cooke, a bus driver for the Capital Transit Co., received $480 in company relief association compensation when he was taken ill. That will go, his wife explained, to pay the three special nurses attending him, who cost $300 a month.

"We were just getting out of debt from Willa Mae's illness," she continued. "But I think we'll make out somehow."

Her mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Bair, who left her home in Philadelphia to help care for the grandchildren in the emergency, nodded assent. Willa Mae's sister is Betty Ann, 5 years old.

Gallinger Hospital personnel say Cooke is one of the pluckiest patients they've ever had. And if you canvassed the 1700 block of Bay street southeast, you'd probably learn the neighbors think the wife and mother are pretty good soldiers themselves.

Council to Study War, Education

A study of American educational needs arising from the European war will be launched by the American Council on Education, George F. Zook, president, said yesterday.

Zook announced receipt of a grant for the study, and the appointment of Francis J. Brown, professor of education at New York University, as a special assistant to direct the three-month investigation.

Methodists Ask Support of Wide Program

Church Unification Broadens Religious Education System

Support of the religious education and youth programs broadened by Methodist unification was urged here last night as six Methodist churches held a joint quarterly conference.

The Rev. Charles Phillips, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church, said the new religious education setup of the Baltimore conference was gauged to embrace church-wide interest, with all congregational departments having an active voice in the administration of Sunday school work.

Speaking at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, the Rev. Mr. Phillips described the new program as an "attempt to unify the educational processes in the life of the church," and said he felt that if "we give this new board of education plan the right of way, it will mean much to the progress of religious education in the church."

Discussing the place of youth in the new setup, Dr. Harry W. Burgan said the conference was "giving a large place to youth all along the line," and referred to the recently organized local young people's organization of the new Methodist Church. W. Frank Cleaver, of Hamline Methodist Church, where Dr. Burgan is pastor, is president of the youth group.

Dr. John R. Edwards, Union Methodist pastor, was another speaker at the conference attended by representatives of Wesley, Chevy Chase, Union, Metropolitan, Dumbarton Avenue and Eldbrooke Methodist churches. The Revs. J. Luther Neff, Edward G. Latch, Dr. Edwards, William A. Keese, C. Lloyd Davis and Walter M. Michael gave congregational reports. Their church school, world service and other leaders also reported.

Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University, where the host church is situated, and Dr. A. B. Potrorf, faculty member, were present.

ures may cause inconvenience and perhaps loss to neutrals," but that "these measures for helping bring our efforts to a successful issue may well be worth some sacrifice on the part of neutrals."

The Official Gazette published the order in council decreeing the blockade, originally scheduled to become operative today but deferred to December 4.

The delay in application of the order, which was signed by King George yesterday, was understood to be to give neutral shippers an opportunity to make arrangements to avoid undue hardships.

The new order provides that a merchant vessel which sails from an enemy port or other port after December 4 and "having on board goods which are of enemy origin or are enemy property may be required to discharge such goods in a British or Allied port."

Such goods will be placed in custody of the marshal of a prize court and "unless the court orders that they be requisitioned for the use of His Majesty shall be detained or sold under direction of the court. The proceeds of goods so sold shall be paid into the court."

Loopholes Noted

Such proceeds and goods detained but unsold at the conclusion of the war "shall be dealt with in such a manner as the court may in the circumstances deem just," the order provides. It stated that the law and practice of price would be followed as far as applicable.

An explanatory statement said that requests for the release of goods would be considered if the goods were neutral owned and on board a vessel clearing the last neutral port by December 11 or in a number of other circumstances.

Other developments of the day:

Authoritative sources disclosed that Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax had invited Russian Ambassador Ivan Maisky to clarify Moscow's policy regarding Finland.

Rationing Starts January 8

Food Minister W. S. Morrison told the House of Commons that rationing of butter and bacon would start January 8 with purchases restricted to four ounces. Consumers will be asked to restrict sugar purchases to one pound per person.

Rationing had been scheduled to start in mid-December, but Morrison said the postponement was to "get over Christmas with as few restrictions as possible."

The King's Speech

Following is the text of King George's speech opening Parliament:

"My lords and members of the House of Commons:

"The prosecution of the war commands the energies of all my subjects. My dominions overseas are participating wholeheartedly and with an effectiveness which is most gratifying to me.

"Throughout the world my navies, together with the merchant navy and fishing fleets, are keeping free and open the highways of the sea. At home, in France and in all stations overseas, my armies and air forces are fulfilling their tasks. I am well assured that they will be equal to any efforts and sacrifices to which they may be called.

More Funds Asked

"Members of the House of Commons:

"You will be asked to make further financial provision for the conduct of the war.

"My lords and members of the House of Commons:

"Grave responsibilities rest upon you at this time. You will, I am convinced, express the resolution of the nation.

"The measures which will be submitted to you are such as seem necessary to my advisers for the welfare of my people and the attainment of the purpose upon which all our efforts are set.

"I pray that Almighty God will give his blessing to your counsels."

Presence Unannounced

The King, wearing an admiral's uniform, spoke for only a few minutes, and Parliament immediately recessed until 3 p. m. (10 a. m. E. S. T.).

The usual glittering ceremony was absent from the opening.

No announcement was made that the King would open Parliament, and no crowds lined the route as he and Queen Elizabeth drove from Buckingham Palace to Westminster in a closed automobile instead of the customary royal coach.

The peers attended in uniforms and morning clothes instead of scarlet robes.

Text of Soviet Note to Finland

Moscow, Nov. 28.—The following is the text of the Russian note to Finland today as published by Tass, Soviet official news agency:

In connection with receipt of the note of reply of the Finnish government to the note of the Soviet government of November 26, Peoples' Commissar of Foreign Affairs Molotoff, on November 28, received the Minister of Finland (Baron Aarno S. Yrjo-Koskinen) and handed him the reply of the Soviet government to the Finnish note.

The text of the note of the Soviet government:

Mr. Minister, the reply of the government of Finland to the note of the Soviet government of November 26 constitutes a document reflecting profound hostility of the government of Finland toward the Soviet Union and is called upon to carry to extremes the crisis in relations between the two countries.

1. Denial by the government of Finland of the fact of the abominable shelling of Soviet troops by Finnish troops, which resulted in victims, cannot be explained by any other reason than by a desire to lead astray public opinion and deride the victims of the firing.

Only the absence of a feeling of responsibility and a contemptuous attitude toward public opinion could inspire an attempt to explain the abominable incident with artillery firing by "training drills" of Soviet troops in artillery firing near the very frontier line before the eyes of Finnish troops.

2. Refusal of the government of Finland to withdraw troops which perpetrated the villainous shelling of Soviet troops, as well as the simultaneous demand for withdrawal of Finnish and Soviet troops, formally proceeding from the principle of equality of both sides, betray the hostile desire of the government of Finland to keep Leningrad under threat.

In reality we have here not equality in the positions of Finnish and Soviet troops but on the contrary an advantageous position of Finnish troops.

Soviet troops do not menace vital centers of Finland because they are removed from those centers for hundreds of kilometers while Finnish troops stationed 32 kilometers (20 miles) from Leningrad—a vital center to the U. S. S. R., counting 3,500,000 population—create an immediate threat to it.

It needs hardly be mentioned that properly speaking there is no room for withdrawal of Soviet troops since withdrawal of Soviet troops for 25 kilometers (about 16 miles) would mean stationing them in Leningrad suburbs, which obviously is absurd from the viewpoint of the security of Leningrad.

The proposal of the Soviet government regarding the withdrawal of Finnish troops from 20-25 kilometers constitutes a minimum because its purpose is not to eliminate this in equality in positions of Finnish and Soviet troops, but only to reduce it to some extent.

If the government of Finland declines even this minimum proposal, that means that it intends to keep Leningrad directly menaced by its troops.

Three: By concentrating large forces of regular troops near Leningrad and thus placing under immediate threat the most important and vital center of the U. S. S. R., the government of Finland committed a hostile act against the U. S. S. R., incompatible with the nonaggression pact concluded between the two countries.

Moreover, by refusing to withdraw troops at least for 20-25 kilometers after the villainois shelling of Soviet troops by Finnish troops, the government of Finland has shown that it continues to maintain a hostile attitude toward the U. S. S. R., does not intend to pay any regard to provisions of the nonaggression pact and has decided to keep Leningrad under threat also in the future.

However, the government of the U. S. S. R. cannot reconcile itself to a situation wherein one side would violate a nonaggression pact and the other side would undertake to carry it out.

In view of this the Soviet government deems itself compelled to state that from this date it considers itself free from the obligations undertaken under the nonaggression pact concluded between the U. S. S. R. and Finland and systematically violated by the government of Finland.

Accept, Mr. Minister, the assurances of my perfect respect.

U.S. May Widen Neutrality Act Interpretation

May Allow Shipment Through War Zones Without Title Transfer

By James G. Simonds.

The State Department is seriously considering a broad interpretation of the cash-and-carry provisions of the neutrality act in relation to American goods carried across the territory of European belligerents to neutral nations, it was learned last night.

The question was raised by a request from the Swiss government to the State Department for a clarification of the provisions of the neutrality act which bar the shipment of any American goods to the territory of a belligerent until title has passed to some foreign government or company.

Government officials and legal experts must decide whether Congress intended to stop all American goods from leaving the United States until title has been transferred if they were going to pass through belligerent territory, even though their ultimate destination might be a neutral, such as Switzerland.

Fewer Interferences Is Aim

The problem which is worrying the Swiss government, as well as American shippers, is whether the Swiss may use such ports as Marseilles, in France, which is the harbor of a belligerent, as a place to transship American goods which are intended for Switzerland, under normal trade conditions, that is, without the transfer of title.

Officials listed Denmark, Latvia, Estonia, Rumania and other Balkan nations among those in line for benefits from the projected exemptions.

Although a final decision has not yet been reached, government officials indicated that they looked with great favor on an interpretation of the act in the spirit in which they felt that Congress intended it, that is, so that there would be the fewest possible interferences with American trade with neutrals. It was understood, therefore, that it would rule that title did not have to pass if the ultimate destination of the American goods was unquestionably a neutral such as Switzerland.

The neutrality act says specifically that once the President has issued a proclamation, it would be unlawful to export or transport any articles or materials to any state named in the President's proclamation as belligerents, until after "all right, title and interest therein shall have been transferred" to some foreign agency or government.

Inclined to Grant Leeway

The Government legal experts feel that this was intended to cover trade with the belligerents rather than transshipment trade to neutrals, and for this reason are inclined to grant the shippers more leeway, despite possible repercussions.

The British decision to blockade and seize German exports found in neutral vessels going to neutral countries is illegal, but the United States will do nothing about it, Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared yesterday.

Senator Pittman, who sponsored the neutrality act which forbids American ships and seamen going into the war areas, surveyed the havoc which had been wreaked on British and neutral shipping by German mines in the last ten days and said the act had turned out even better than he had expected.

The possibility was also foreseen by Senator Pittman that the United States might denounce its 1933 treaty of recognition with the Soviet government, if Russia should actually invade and conquer Finland. Whether or not the treaty is denounced, he said, "would depend on the way sentiment in this country grows."

funds contributed by the American people to the American Red Cross would be distributed without complete impartiality.

"After conversations with the German government and German Red Cross lasting more than three weeks, and the exchange of many cables and telephone calls between Washington and Berlin, we are happy to announce that an agreement has been reached."

The American Red Cross delegation which handled the negotiation in Berlin was composed of Ernest J. Swift, Wayne Chatfield Taylor and James T. Nicholson.

Shipments from the American Red Cross, Chairman Davis said, would be made via Trieste to a central warehouse at Cracow. The shipments will be consigned to representatives of the American Red Cross who, in conjunction with the German Red Cross, will allocate them to Polish agencies and committees, including the Polish Red Cross, for impartial distribution.

Devastation Is Outlined

Chairman Davis said that the American delegates, after visiting the devastated areas, reported that Poland was badly in need of relief.

"In Warsaw alone 65 per cent of the buildings were either destroyed or made uninhabitable," said Mr. Davis. "More than 1,300,000 persons are crowded in the remaining buildings, enduring the hardships of a rigorous winter. The danger of a typhus epidemic is great despite the fact that the German military authorities, using Polish health officers, doctors and nurses, are doing their best to re-establish normal conditions."

Mr. Davis said that of the 26 hospitals in the city ten had been destroyed and others damaged, leaving about 8,000 hospital beds to serve the population.

Ships Better In Face of Rift, Edison Told

Advances Made by Bold Steps Despite Opposition, Bowen Says

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer

Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison was told yesterday by one of his ranking aides that marked engineering advances have been made in new warships as the result of "bold" steps taken "in the face of conservatism, trepidation and no little opposition" within the Navy.

The statement came from Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, who was one of the chief figures in a Navy controversy over use of high pressure boilers on ships which broke out into the open a year ago, and who was involved in the recent naval shipbuilding shake-up.

Bowen was recently named chief of the naval research laboratory and materiel aide to Edison after serving four years as chief of the bureau of engineering. At the same time, a virtual consolidation of that bureau with the bureau of construction and repair was ordered, following reports of differences between the two agencies over ship construction matters.

New Boilers Called a Success

In his final report as engineering chief, Admiral Bowen declared the high-pressure, super-heated boilers, which many officers declared dangerous when installed, to be a pronounced success.

By means of increasing the pressure of steam gradually from 200 to 600 pounds and the temperature to 850 degrees Fahrenheit, the reliability, safety and power of ships' engines have been increased, and fuel consumption cut, Bowen said.

Tests have shown, he said, that the machinery of new destroyers equipped with the high-pressure, super-heated boilers could be used to better advantage aboard new cruisers not so equipped.

"As we have advanced steam conditions," Bowen declared, "we have developed machinery which is not only more economical, but is also more reliable and just as easy, or even easier, to operate, maintain and protect in battle."

New Sub Engines Perfected

The report made only indirect reference to the current controversy over defects in new destroyers, which has aroused demands for Congressional investigation. Bowen said new destroyers have proved "reliable and efficient," and that "such few troubles as have developed have been relatively minor in nature and are being corrected."

Announcement was made of the perfecting of light-weight high-speed Diesel engines for submarines, the result of which are "gratifying." Bowen said that a few years ago the Navy scrapped its whole conception of submarine drive to use electric propulsion for surface as well as submerged operations," to remedy the then dependence on foreign designs.

While defects developed in the first of the craft built with two sets of engines, it was said, there is now "conclusive evidence" that the major faults have been eliminated and a satisfactory type devised.

News of Capital Night Clubs

NEWCOMERS TO NEPTUNE. Singer-Emcee Bert Granoff announces that Glen Hardman, notable Western organist, and a new instrumental trio will succeed Eddie Daniels and the Couriers at the Neptune Room on December 9. Organist Hardman is well known on the radio and as a recording artist . . . Innovations shortly to be expected at Neptune are continuous music from 4:30 p. m. to 1 a. m. every day but Saturday, when melody will be in order from 2:30 p. m. until midnight, and Sunday with music from 6 p. m. until 10 p. m., also midnight "community sings" of popular and old-time numbers and Sunday evening concert sessions from 7 to 9:30 featuring finer music. P. S.—That handsome Neptune Fishermen's cup will be awarded tomorrow eve to the angler boating the largest fish in nearby waters in recent months. Big party.

RIVIERA SCOOP. Pete Macias, of the Lounge Riviera, has gotten off fast and first in town with the tunes from "Madame DuBarry," the new Ethel Merman musical. If you want to know how good little Lark Adele Van really is, just listen to her polish off "Fifty-Second Street," Merman's hit number . . . Riviera was a-goggle the other eve when Ted Peckham, ex-head of the Manhattan escort trust, ambled to the ringside.

DANCING MAGIC. Shoreham. Would you like to dance like Veloz and Yolanda? Then here is your big opportunity. Fawn and Jordan are doing the "Violanda," famed dance of V. and Y., in the Blue Room. After finishing, Veloz then demonstrates the dance with lasses and leddies from the ringside. It's a hit novelty.

Club Lafayette. Jack Rollins has evolved his own version of la conga for the Thursday Latin-American Nights at the Club Lafayette. The Rollins teachers, Richard Sweeney and Marie Davidson, will swirl out in any dance you request. So far, no one's been able to stump them.

Pall Mall Room. A new Latin trick, the pirolito, the Brazilian carnival dance, will be introduced at the Pall Mall's fashion luncheon on Saturday by Ethel Fistere, of the Arthur Murray Dancers.

Metronome Room. Swift waltzing rhythms in the Viennese style are being featured strongly by the King's Jesters. This reflects the new collegiate demand for fast waltzes. The modern waltz isn't so dreamy as whirly.

SMART SHOWMAN. The perfect demonstration of how to suit your music to your audience was given by Anchor Room's Matt Windsor when he accordioned for The Post carrier boys the other eve. Matt can play anything from Berlin to Berloiz, but for the carrier boys he swung out on the "Washington and Lee Swing," followed with the "Washington Post March," other college songs, wound up with a rousing "Dixie" that brought down the house.

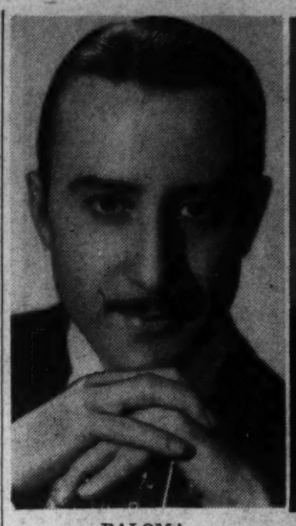
LOTUS PICTURE. A bang-up show starts with the Sevilla Girls in "Jumpin' Jive," accent on the "jive" . . . "Walkin' Rhythm" done in elegantly speedy taps by Jean Kirk and Larry Clayton, she looking like Miami in a long white coat . . . Buddy Shaner singing request numbers for two Eastern Star luncheon parties. The ladies wanted "South of the Border" and "Over the Rainbow," as you shouldn't need to be told . . . De May, Moore and Martin wind up the show with a riot of bustle-bobbing inspired by the gay nineties.



PALOMA, Latin - American guitarist, who's delighting patrons of the Pall Mall Room.

"THE HOLY TERROR!" Black Bart of the Pirates' Den. He's really Cap't Don Dickerman in disguise

REDSKIN ACCORDIONIST. Dave Crocker, of the Rainbow Room orchestra, is the solo accordionist who plays at the Redskins' games in Washington . . . Confidential: We have it that Dave bought two suits of long undies before he took over the assignment. His only problem now is how to keep the accordion warm. That's no foolin', Because extreme cold affects accordion reeds.

THAT CERTAIN MUSIC. Mayflower Lounge. Billie Bailey's sweet caroling of "Good Morning" from "Babes in Arms" with Dick Koons' Glee Club. The good news is Billie's Mayflower engagement has just been extended for the second time.

Cafe Caprice. The Rhythmaires' glossy version of "All the Things You Are" from "Very Warm for May." Leader Eddie Whitesel thinks it's the prettiest tune of the season.

Hi Hat. Singer Carmela's thrilling warbling of the "Tsigane" from Noel Coward's "Bittersweet." Carmela is already building up a following, says Manager Oscar, with a number of people coming in just to hear her brilliant soprano.

Mayfair. The fine piano-ing of Isobel de Marco. And no wonder, because we're told she spends all her spare time in practicing Brahms and Chopin.

Shar-Zad. Those "College Salutes" played by Bill McCune and his boys every Thursday. The artful McCune arrangements give extra pepper to even the most vigorous of alma mater songs.

TROIKA VIEWS. Senator Arthur Capper, waltzing nimbly. We understand he's been in three times in the last week . . . Violinist Sasha sends everyone to never-never land with Chopin's "Tristresse Eternelle" . . . Nick Hope snaps them out of it by accordioning "Twelfth Street Rag" . . . Betja Milskaya sings about the different hats she wears to please different boy friends . . . Greeter Mischa is his chipper self again. Says he got the best of that devilish cold by taking double doses of vitamins.

MOVEABLE BIRTHDAY PARTY. There's to be a superparty in Bamboo Gardens soon to celebrate Maestro Al Norton's first anniversary as its chief funster. Al's really been there a little more than a year. But, what the mischief! If King George can move his birthday around to suit himself, so can Al.

P. S. A completely new floor show opens at Bamboo today.

PIRATE MAGIC. "Sometimes I baffle myself," says Al Dee, the gay young magico who's just joined the Pirates' Den crew. Al poured different beverages for all customers at the Den from an empty (?) cocktail shaker at his opening. He hesitated for a second when a visiting admiral said, "I'd like a keg of beer." "What do you think I am, a magician?" said Al indignantly. Later, he produced a pousse cafe for another skeptic. Ask him for one and see it happen.

SUBURBAN FREE-WHEELING. Fat Boy. De Vaughn Clements is stirring up a high-test swing with his new Fat Boy Orchestra, leading from his vibraphone. De Vaughn has played at many prominent clubs, knows all the tricks of modern ryhthm.

River Bend. George Stein's new orchestra at River Bend has the dancers paddy-whacking for encores until the musicians are plumb ready to fall out of their chairs. Remember, there's another of those monumental "piggy parties" at River Bend tonight.

Knotty Pine Tavern. Ray King's band is tossing out the swing in this popular place. There's a big and shiny floor that can easily accommodate 400 jitter-steppers, even when they're at their fanciest.

FINE EATING DEPARTMENT. Madrillon. For a dish that's a hundred per cent vitamins, sample Chef Maggia's "bouquet of sea food platter with green asparagus tips." It includes lobster, shrimp, crab flakes and oysters.

Dick's Grill. Those are not Smithfield hams that you see so temptingly roasted at Dick's. They're better. They're Purcellville hams cured according to specifications worked out by Proprietor Dick Ashby.

Jury Accuses Man of Stealing Same Truck Twice

A deep-seated weakness for the produce business yesterday brought William A. McNeil, 36, colored, an indictment for stealing the same truck twice.

Samuel A. Salins, fruit and vegetable dealer of 324 Taylor street northwest, missed his truck on November 11. He told the police he left it parked at his home the night before, loaded with 500 pounds of potatoes, 250 pounds of onions, 200 oranges, 200 lemons and all manner of other good green things. Officers found the truck, empty, and returned it to Salins.

A week later, Salins again missed his truck and reported to the police. Early in the morning of November 18, Patrolman Joseph M. Bell, of the Fourth Precinct, recognized the truck on Eighth street, near Half street southwest. The driver abandoned the truck and led Bell a five-block chase before he was nabbed.

McNeil pleaded guilty in the Police Court and was held to the District grand jury, which yesterday indicted him on two counts of unauthorized use of an automobile and two counts of grand larceny.

Building A Bridge

Many mutually advantageous political and economic considerations are involved in that Pan-American rapprochement now being so zealously cultivated. There is, however, one very serious obstacle which, unless a conscious and vigorous effort is made to remove it, may in the long run offset any number of practical benefits.

This obstacle is the wide cultural cleavage that still obtains between Latin Americans on the one hand and North Americans on the other. In this, as much as in the literal sense, the continents still speak "a different language."

After their wars of liberation had been won, nearly all the Central and South American republics paid us the compliment of adopting at least the externals of our political forms, so great was the prestige of our Constitution. No Latin-American people, however, evinced any similar admiration for our intellectual or cultural traditions. Nor was a taste for them likely to be awakened by the political and commercial adventurers who, in the nineteenth century, often typified us to Latin-American eyes.

But this insulated indifference was more than matched by our own. From the very beginning we have been vaguely aware of the tremendous material importance of the great continent to the south of us. Of Latin-American life and ideas, however, we often know rather less than we do about the Chinese. And to the little we knew we were inclined to be temperamentally hostile. Where our philosophic tradition was dominantly Puritanical, that of Latin America was dominantly Catholic. Throughout the nineteenth century the educated classes in the United States, with few exceptions, looked for intellectual leadership to England or Germany; educated Latin Americans looked to France and Spain.

Our rude and feverish literary activities of the nineteen twenties were in a way a second declaration of independence, whereby the leading strings that bound us to the English tradition were broken, and we began to explore resources peculiarly our own. We remained ignorant, however, of the similar movement that was taking place in Latin America. And even today many educated North Americans are unaware that the most distinguished contemporary literature in the Spanish tongue is the work of South American authors.

The problem is not one of fusing these two cultures—though each has much to contribute to the other—but of building a bridge between them. That is why the Conference on Inter-American Relations in the Field of Publications, which opens here today, is of such importance to the future of our Latin-American relationships. For the first and most essential step to cultural understanding is the freer and fuller exchange of thought through the interchange of books, newspapers, magazines and other periodical literature.

Browder On The Campus

Some criticism has been directed at Yale University for granting Earl Browder permission to speak in one of its halls. Similar requests recently made by student organizations at Harvard, Dartmouth and Princeton to have the ranking American Communist address them have been denied. There is much better reason to criticize the denial of the last three universities than the approval of the first.

Neither civil liberties nor academic freedom are directly involved. Mr. Browder could, presumably, speak in Cambridge, or Hanover, or the town of Princeton, and such students as had the time to spend could listen to their hearts' content. On their own grounds, of course, the universities have a perfect right to say what guest speakers shall be invited.

The reason for denying Mr. Browder this invitation to address any who might wish to listen to him can scarcely be fear that his auditors will be seduced by what he has to say. For the theory of communism is usually given adequate attention in political science and economics courses. And if the students cannot resist the Browder blandishments then it might be well to reexamine that part of the curriculum which deals with the inculcation of logic.

If the action has been taken merely because Mr. Browder is under indictment on charges of traveling with a false passport, then the universities which pride themselves on a great academic tradition, are themselves prejudging the case. Furthermore they are casting Mr. Browder in the role of martyr and will probably succeed in making him a campus cause. All credit to Yale for accepting the issue in an intelligent, rational and American way.

The Deutschland

It is one of the ironies of this war that the Deutschland, which last week sank a British converted cruiser off the coast of Iceland, owes her effectiveness as a commerce-raider primarily to the restrictions enforced on German naval construction by the Treaty of Versailles.

Under that treaty Germany was prohibited from building warships of over 10,000 tons displacement. Since a battleship of that small size would be useless, German naval architects, prior to Hitler's advent, set themselves the problem of designing a vessel with cruiser speed and battleship armament within the maximum tonnage specified. The Deutschland and her sister ships, the Admiral Scheer and Admiral Graf von Spee, are the results. No more remarkable warships have ever been built.

It is the outstanding merit of these "pocket battleships" that their main armament of six 11-inch guns enables them to fight off faster ships, while their speed of at least 26 knots permits them to escape most enemy vessels firing a heavier weight of metal. In the entire British and French fleets there are only five ships which, even on paper, have any assurance of being able both to catch and to defeat the Deutschland.

This German raider, therefore, is a more formidable proposition than any of the Kaiser's cruisers which were gradually tracked down and sunk in the World War. As long as the Deutschland can find a base at which to refuel and take on ammunition, where her hull can be kept clean and her diesel engines at high efficiency, the chance of maintaining her present operations is fairly good.

Apparently the Deutschland has such a base. On October 5 she sank the British freighter Stonegate north of Haiti. On November 23 she sent the Rawalpindi to the bottom off Iceland. In between, in the middle of October, she captured the City of Flint and sank a Norwegian ship near Newfoundland. But she was certainly not uninterruptedly at sea during those seven weeks from October 5 to November 23.

Where the Deutschland refueled during this period is unknown. It might have been northern Spain or Murmansk. But there is a stronger probability that, steaming swiftly at night with darkened ports, she made her way back to Germany, slipping out through the blockade again quite recently.

In winter weather, and with the triple threat of mines and submarines and airplanes, the Anglo-French fleet cannot maintain as tight a cordon in the North Sea as armchair strategists consider possible. There is always a good chance for a ship as fast as the Deutschland to slip through into the open Atlantic, and later to slip back again to a home port with every facility for refitting.

One may surmise that lengthy forays, followed by periods in port, are the tactics of her daring captain. Whether he will confine himself to commerce raiding when at sea, or will try to harry outlying and weaker units of the farflung British control, will probably depend on circumstances. But whatever the tactics he and his crew are proving themselves brave and daring men.

Soon or late the chances are that the Deutschland, and her sister ships if they are used as alternates, will be cornered by a superior Allied force. If so they will probably go down fighting, with their personnel asking no quarter and as contemptuous of certain death as were the boys who fought the German raider from the Rawalpindi. They kept the White Ensign flying until their battered hulk sank beneath arctic waters. And the German sailors would do the same by the Swastika.

For no flag claims a monopoly of that courage, loyalty and devotion which are bred in the bone of those who have heard the call of the sea.

Part Of Our Heritage

There is a timely appropriateness in the temporary deposit in the Library of Congress of one of the four original versions of Magna Carta, the one which is the property of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln Cathedral, in England.

In much of the world the lights of liberty have gone or are going out. The very nation which regards Magna Carta as one of the greatest of its constitutional landmarks is today in the midst of a struggle the outcome of which may determine whether the enveloping darkness will cover all Europe or be followed by a new dawn of freedom. In the meantime, the United States has the great responsibility of keeping unimpaired that continuity of aspiration toward a world unfettered by despotism, a world of free men. And in guarding Magna Carta it is guarding part of its own priceless heritage.

It is also peculiarly fitting that Magna Carta should be housed during its temporary haven in this country in a structure which already gives sanctuary to what Lord Lothian, in depositing the document, rightly called the "descendants" of Magna Carta, namely, the Declaration of American Independence and the American Constitution.

Magna Carta, as historians love to point out, was no complete charter of individual liberty. The barons of Runneymede had a particular rather than a universal aim in restricting the rights of the British crown. Yet what they did, as Archibald MacLeish said in his speech of acceptance, "have inured to the benefit of the people of seven centuries and of continents of which their authors never heard."

A Bid For Suffrage

Civic Washington has declared dissatisfaction with its existing political status in no uncertain terms. The hearings before the Board of Commissioners on the Seal reorganization bill have brought forth a positive demand for local self-government. It is unmistakably clear that if this bill goes to Congress in its present form it will not reflect the viewpoint of the majority of local residents.

Several features in the bill have met with general approval. The creation of a civil service system for Washington appears to have almost unanimous indorsement. Most civic spokesmen also agree upon the desirability of departmentalizing the local government. But few of the spokesmen for citizens associations and other representative groups have been satisfied with expression of their views on details of the bill. A substantial majority have also put in a positive bid for District suffrage.

Some provisions of the bill have been severely criticized. The proposed transfer of the municipal hospitals from the Health Department to a proposed Department of Public Welfare has properly met with disapproval. Likewise a majority of the witnesses seem to oppose the proposed merger of the Traffic Department with the Metropolitan Police. And the plan to abolish the Board of Tax Appeals has met with a storm of protest. Adjustment of the bill in these relatively minor particulars, to bring it into line with public opinion, should be taken for granted.

The real problem for the Commissioners is to devise a local governing body that will meet with public approval and at the same time win support in Congress. It is difficult to see how the Commissioners can now evade that responsibility. Last summer they were asked to send to Congress their criticism of the Griffenhagen reorganization plan. Instead they put a special committee to work on an entirely new bill. Now, having conducted hearings on this bill, they have taken leadership of the reorganization movement.

The fact that the people were asked to express their views suggests that the Commissioners intend to be guided, at least in part, by local opinion. If they should send the Seal bill to Congress in its present form, it would carry little weight because it would not have the support of the community behind it. Only by working out some means of satisfying the public demand for a voice in District affairs, therefore, can the Commissioners hope to present a bill that will have any real backing.

Of course, this does not mean that reorganization of the local government should be made wholly contingent upon a grant of suffrage. Authorities at the District Building should be able to conduct the business of this municipality without waiting for the ponderous wheels of Congress to turn, whether they are elected or appointed. Likewise the machinery of local government should be modernized in any event. Reorganization need not be sacrificed to bring a clear test on the suffrage issue.

Congress should be informed that this city of over 600,000 inhabitants wants both reorganization and a voice in the management of its municipal affairs. The Commissioners are now in a position where they can scarcely avoid presentation of this issue, without repudiating the views of the community they have been chosen to serve.

Communism and Japan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that Japan seems to be following Germany's course in drawing closer to Russia, Japan needs new arguments for our continuing to assist her with cargo after cargo of war supplies to be used against our natural friend, China. This is rendered all the more urgent in view of the fact that Japan can no longer say to us: "If you do not sell us war supplies, you are simply throwing trade to Germany!"

How much greater a world menace communism is than "Japanism" seems somewhat undecided. But there can be no doubt about the fact that if Japan herself suddenly turns Communist, the more Chinese territory she holds, the more of China she will also turn Communist. Communism menaces China, not by way of Russia so much as by way of Japan.

If only we could feel certain Japan would never turn Communist, our minds could find a little peace and our consciences might not pain us quite so greatly as we ship our up-to-date man-killing machinery to that tough and determined little nation across the big sea!

But just look! The governmental setup of Japan is so similar to that of Russia that a change to communism would affect Japan little more than a change of Presidents affects the United States! Few heads would fall. It would be evolution rather than revolution.

For An Independent Ukrainian State

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not long ago statements were made in the British Parliament to the effect that it would probably be impossible to restore Poland to her previous size, with the White Russian and Western Ukrainian lands, seized by Soviet Russia, reincorporated in her. Upon those British declarations, the exiled Polish government in France took a significant action.

First, the present Polish President Raczkewicz has announced by a decree the resignation of Marshal Smigly Rydz as the head of the Polish army and nominated to this post Gen. Sikorski, the new Polish premier. Simultaneously the new Polish government expressed its condemnation of the undemocratic and dictatorial system by which Poland was ruled from the time Marshal Joseph Pilsudski seized power until the German invasion.

Secondly, Premier Sikorski and Foreign Minister Zaleski visited London. There they were received by the King and had talks with the leaders of the British government. Upon leaving London Premier Sikorski declared that he is confident that with the victory of the Allied powers, Poland will be recreated "as she was before."

These moves of the Polish government received a wide comment in the foreign press which saw in them an indication that Poland, having been taught a lesson by her misfortune, severs all ties with the past, takes a turn toward a real democracy, and in the future, in the event of her restitution, can be expected to be a model democratic and humane state.

I would not touch upon these Polish announcements if they were irrelevent to the Ukrainian problem. But they are. Not that the Ukrainians do not properly evaluate the tragic situation of the Poles caused by brutal and unprovoked German aggression, since they themselves are subjugated; but on the theory that in the name of human happiness no past mistakes should be allowed repetition, I should like to raise the following questions:

1. Did the Poles really take their bitter lesson to their hearts? Knowing the Poles and their history as the Ukrainians do, the latter cannot help having doubts about that. This was the fourth division of Poland in her history. Each time her leaders worked from exile for her restoration. Each time they enjoyed the greatest possible sympathy and material support of the western powers.

In fact, last time, in 1918, Poland was given her new start in life as an independent country with the money, arms and diplomatic efforts of the Allies even at the expense of other nations, notably the Ukrainians, because great hopes were put in Poland as a future barrier to imperialistic expansion of her neighbors, and as a watchdog of European civilization in the east. And each time the Polish leaders promised—even signed international treaties to the effect—that Poland will live up to the world's expectations and will follow a decent policy in every respect.

Yet today Poland is back where she was about 20 years ago, thanks in a great degree to the misrule of her "colonels." The great democratic countries again have to nurse her wounds and plan for her restoration. And the new Polish government in exile again has to go to the unpleasant task of condemning the order that prevailed in Poland only a few months ago and which was then glorified.

What guarantees can the Poles give us that, if their state is restored they will have a decent system of government, and, if they get back the lost non-Polish territories, they will treat their minorities with dignity and will afford them an opportunity for free cultural and national development?

2. If the Poles have learned their lesson, why do they approach their new start in life with the ideas in which they have just so miserably failed: the Polish imperialism? The observers of recent developments are aware of the fact that even when Poland was in a most precarious position and only a few weeks before the German invasion, the Polish press reechoed with imperialistic cries of the Polish patriots declaring that Poland is far from making any territorial concessions to anyone, but that she herself looks forward to the future when she will be able to expand her sphere of domination far beyond her present borders.

Today the exiled Polish government demands that Poland be restored "as she was before," meaning the inclusion within her boundaries of those Ukrainian and other non-Polish territories which she just lost. And how do we know that, when this happens, she will not continue to cherish her imperialistic and colonial ambitions?

There is no reason why the Ukrainians should not sympathize with the cause of the restoration of Poland and her complete freedom of any foreign domination. Each nation is entitled to its sovereignty. But I think that the Allied powers, instead of putting all their hopes in Poland, should pay an equal amount of attention also to other nations in eastern Europe and should respect their aspirations to independence.

A Straw Man

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was interested in the letter of Charles Borneman in The Post of November 27, in which he rationalizes some ideas which are not in accord with the facts of history.

It is setting up a straw man to assume that everyone who believes that we must protect our shores has in mind a German landing force. The last World War, which Mr. Borneman has forgotten or which possibly was waged before he was born, showed us that there is just as much danger from Germany working through infiltration into South and Central American countries as through direct invasion.

Further, it would not be new for Germany to show force in this part of the world. Living naval officers were present off the coast of Venezuela when the German fleet, about a half century ago, threatened to attack the United States fleet and were deterred from it by the offer of the British ships present to assist the Americans.

Further, if Germany wants our good will, it has not been evident in Germany's foreign policy from the time of the Kaiser to the time of the present newspaper attacks upon our Government and our systems.

As to the German atrocities during the World War, Mr. Borneman assumes that all the propaganda was false. The American Legion has records of such atrocities; neutrals serving abroad saw some of them. The invasion of Belgium was in itself an atrocity and was accompanied by many acts of cruelty and oppression. And if Mr. Borneman is not convinced of that he has only to witness the rape of Poland.

The point is that fundamentally this is not the war of France and Great Britain, but the clash of two forms of government, one of which stands for force and deceit in a world of which the United States is a closely knit part. We may not send troops abroad, but our sympathies and cooperation would be with the Allies as before. The true instincts of the American Nation have accurately guided them in that direction in spite of all the protestations of neutrality.

Uncorrupted Language

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with the greatest pleasure that I read in your issue of November 27 the letter on the proper use of "you all." The phrase certainly has a proper use as explained, though I think that any stress of accent should be given to the second word, "all," as being of special importance.

The expression which most rasps my grammatical nerve is "different than." The Funk & Wagnalls Dictionary gives "than" as a conjunction following the comparative form of an adjective applied to each of two nouns or adverbs denoting comparison, as "The horse is swifter than the ox—The horse runs more swiftly than the ox."

"Different" literally means "carrying away from" and signifies a separation, of place or character, which makes the use of the word "than" in this connection a grammatical impossibility.

I am exceedingly glad to know that there are others interested in keeping our language free from distortions and corruptions. If words were taught in groups based on derivation it would greatly facilitate the work of the student and at the same time make him grammar conscious. If those even beyond school age would addict themselves to analyzing and classifying words they would soon find themselves fascinated and the mental process more exhilarating than crossword puzzles ever even claimed to be. The Post Impressionist

It's a long way to Jarvenpaa, where the watchful can catch a glimpse of Jean Sibelius. So I managed, instead, to "meet" the great composer in Washington. That was when his nephew, Eero Jarnefelt, was Finnish Minister here. Out of his remembrance of things past he conjured up his uncle.

"Until I was 16 Mr. Sibelius was often at our house. When we went to our place in the country he and my aunt took a cottage nearby. But when I was 16 he went to live at Jarvenpaa, and I have not seen him much since. So I will have to tell you how I as a boy knew him.

"I remember best that he loved nature very seriously. He would stop work, play, everything, to lose himself in a strange cloud formation. At our summer place once he was walking in the garden with my mother, and she told him in passing that a certain flower opened only at night. She then forgot she had said this to him.

"Late that night my mother called to my father in the sitting room that some marauder was in the garden. There was a figure lying on the ground among the flowers. My father was about to go out to drive him away, when my mother saw who it was. It was Mr. Sibelius.

"In Finland every summer it is very light even at night, and she could see him plainly.

" 'Pay no attention,' she warned us. 'He is watching that flower, and it might embarrass him to have us notice it.'

"To this day I do not think any of us have recalled it to his mind."

We were silent for a moment, thinking of Sibelius watching in the twilight for a Finnish night flower slowly opening. Then Minister Jarnefelt laughed as he remembered something this had brought to his mind.

"One day when he was going along the road on one of the long walks he took over the countryside, he saw a flock of geese flying south in customary V fashion. In his excitement he stopped a peasant woman riding on her beast and said to her:

" 'Look at that! Look at that!'

"She gaped in astonishment at this gentleman—excited about some geese."

Sibelius' nephew shook his head at his excitable uncle. "This made him a very uncertain person to my mother.

"One summer when I was about 16, I think, he asked me to go to Italy with him.

" 'There are some blue flowers there now I want to show to you,' he said.

"But when I asked my mother, she forbade it.

" 'Your uncle is a very nice man,' she told me, 'but you are too young for this trip. He is too uncertain. When you are to meet him in Rome, he might be in Paris because of a tree he remembered there, and where would you be?'

"So I could not go."

Sibelius hurrying to Italy in the spring—curious behavior on the part of the critics' "painter of gray towering northern landscapes." So, too, were his visits to Paris with a little coterie of talented Finns of the fabulous prewar era, Finns who loved the French capital. "They went to Paris in a group and Mr. Sibelius with them. There I am sure he knew Manet and Monet, whom he admired, and other painters. He was a very close friend to Maeterlinck, for whom he wrote some music—for "Pelleas and Melisande."

"Even at home they sometimes stayed together. They would go to Helsingfors, take a room in a hotel there, and have parties that lasted two, three days, sometimes longer.

"There are lots of jokes in Finland about those parties! Lots of jokes about Mr. Sibelius . . ."

Minister Jarnefelt took still another prop from under my picture of the solemn great man by telling me that Sibelius was not only intensely sociable in his youth and middle age certainly, but also well-dressed!

"I never saw Mr. Sibelius carelessly groomed. He apparently enjoyed sartorial excellence.

"He said to me once—but he may have been joking; he is frequently joking, and I was then a young boy—that he liked to play the piano only in full dress, because he enjoyed to see and feel stiff and immaculate cuffs at his wrists as he played."

But, sociable though he be, he must have solitude for work. He shuts himself up in a very small room, almost too small to contain the big piano. There is a family joke about the size of that room. "Small rooms for big thoughts, big rooms for small ones," say the Sibelius daughters when they show the cramped quarters in which their father turns out music of heroic proportions.

The man I saw in that room as the Minister reminisced was surprisingly mellow. In fact, a decided twinkle glinted in the eyes that could also envision grand vistas of musical splendor. JAY WALZ.

Saving Money

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt intimates that a fund of half a billion dollars should be provided, either by additional taxation or more borrowing, for bolstering the national defense.

If the President will instruct his Attorney General to back the Dies Committee with the same vigor that he backs the radical La Follette Committee and if he will fire out of the Government service those of communistic sympathies and if he will rescue our merchant marine from the clutches of Harry Bridges and his crew, we can have a net increase in national safety, save the half billion dollars, and, which is most important of all, have a considerable increase in our national self-respect.

A Panderer's Record

WILLIE BIOFF, the Chicago panderer who muscled into control of the moving picture projectors throughout the United States and of the studio trades and crafts in Hollywood, answers the disclosure of his true character with some irrelevant remarks. He can't deny that he is a panderer or that he still owes all but eight days of a six-month sentence and a $300 fine for pandering, because these facts are of record. He can't plead any technicality, because the record proves that he received $29 in a specific instance, the earnings of a prostitute inmate of a brothel in which he admitted that he was a bartender and in which the State contended he was a partner. No two ways about it: Bioff was a panderer by trade and by deliberate choice.

Bioff attempts to create a belief that the disclosure of this record at this particular time was part of a plot to embarrass pending negotiations on behalf of the union which he represents, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators. He says it is an attempt to discredit him.

In the latter contention Bioff is inexact. However, if his own record discredits him that is another matter.

Called An Associate Of Noted Gangsters

"HE IS KNOWN as an associate of well-known gangsters," says a report written by Lieut. James Egan, of the Chicago police, assigned to the State's attorney's office and detailed in the investigation of rackets. "He has been known to members of the Chicago Police Department for the last 20 years. He is a thoroughly vicious hoodlum and has always been with gangsters."

Lieut. Egan reports that Bioff has been known also as Harry Martin, Harry Morton and Morris Bioff, and the papers in his appeal from the pandering conviction reveal that his name has been spelled as Bihoff and Bauff.

As to the opportune or inopportune timing of the disclosure, these are the facts:

Tom Courtney, State's attorney of Cook County, including Chicago, has no initiative in the matter. I gouged the facts out of the official records and laid them before Courtney complete. Up to that moment Courtney had no suspicion that Bioff still owed time, but under the circumstances Courtney had no choice but to proceed to extradite Bioff from California and compel him to finish his sentence for one of the foulest offenses, if not the vilest offense, of all.

Inquiry Didn't Show Any Conviction

HOW DID I happen to select this time to expose Bioff? For three years I had been receiving communications and hearing casual remarks that Bioff was a panderer. Two years ago an inquiry brought the information that he had a record of several arrests but no data on a conviction.

Last summer, when Bioff and George Browne, the president of the union, were attempting to kidnap the rich unions of stage, movie and radio actors, the rumors were revived, but still nobody would take responsibility for a flat accusation. And only a month ago, in San Francisco, Carey McWilliams, a member of the administration of Gov. Olsen of California, said he, too, believed Bioff was a panderer but had no proof. McWilliams represents a C. I. O. group opposing Bioff's union in Hollywood.

Union Members Plead for Airing

THEREFORE, the next time I was in Chicago, which was last week, I determined to run down the truth. The inquiry, step by step, proved that Bioff was convicted in a specific case of taking $29 which a woman had earned by prostitution with 13 men in one day. It further proved—and surprisingly—that he had not served his sentence. He had been allowed to resume his career in association with well-known Chicago gangsters, the sentence being conveniently forgotten. As to why it was forgotten or whether other equally vicious felons are at large owing time on sentences that were not enforced, an official inquiry is in order.

Meanwhile I have received many letters, unfortunately anonymous, from persons purporting to be members of various Bioff unions pleading for publicity regarding the union's treatment of its own members. Meanwhile, also, individual members of the newsreel photographers' union have told me that they were compelled to pay an initiation fee of $1,000 and an income tax of 10 per cent of their gross salary to work at their own trade. They have been afraid to permit their names to be used in criticism of Bioff or Browne lest they be thrown out of the union and thus barred from their occupation or beaten up or killed.

This Is Iniquitous

IT IS perhaps inevitable that there should have been only meager reporting regarding the condition of Poland since the partition. Neutral journalists cannot get into Poland. No one can enter without a special permit, and permits have been refused to reporters.

The terms imposed upon Poland are, nevertheless, of the first importance in arriving at an objective judgment regarding the aims of the war and the effect upon Europe of a possible German victory. The facts about Poland are vastly more important than the propaganda of any of the belligerents. From them one can derive a picture of what Europe might be like under Nazi domination.

Such information as we possess has come to us from American and other neutral journalists, either gleaned from emigres or from official German sources. If we confine ourselves exclusively to the latter reports, from Berlin, all of which are subject to censorship, we shall hardly get an impression that errs on the side of unfairness to the Nazis.

Versailles Peace Vs. The Nazi Peace

FROM THESE reports, one must conclude that continued fulminations against the "Versailles system" can only come with good grace from those responsible for it—from the Allies.

In the Allied journals there is, indeed, much discussion regarding the future of Europe and much searching analysis and criticism of the European system erected after the last war. But it must categorically be stated that the "Versailles peace," compared with the Nazi peace, the outlines of which are now clear and the facts about which are indisputable, emerges in retrospect as enlightened, humane and progressive.

The Nazi peace for Europe—basing one's judgment upon the official facts regarding Czecho-Slovakia and Poland—means the end of all small nations, not by absorbing them as equal individual citizens into larger political and economic units, but by their subjection as nations into colonial "protectorates" and by the subjection of their peoples into serfs of the German master race.

In the new Europe envisaged by a victorious Germany the concept of equality as between nations and individuals is ruled out. Triumphant Germany is to be a race of organizers, administrators, officers, engineers and managers.

The conquered are to be permanent slaves to the conquerors. They are to have no full citizenship at all. They are to be hewers of wood and drawers of water; soldiers, workmen and peasants engaged in organized production for their masters, under the masters' orders. They are to have only such limited self-government as the masters permit, and that under conditions which may at any moment arbitrarily be modified or revoked. They are to be reduced to an inferior social, economic and political status.

Poland Becomes Colonial Territory

IN THIS COLUMN I shall deal wholly with the Nazi "peace" for Poland. The Sovietization of Poland is a chapter in itself, and the facts are even more obscure.

But that part of Poland annexed by the Germans has been divided into purely German territory and into a colonial territory, a protectorate, along the model of the division of Czecho-Slovakia into purely German (Sudetenland) and a colonial protectorate (Moravia-Bohemia).

Of the total population of Poland Germany gets 18,000,000 as contrasted with Russia's 14,000,000. Of this population only 1,000,000 are Germans, 15,000,000 are Poles, and 1,500,000 are Jews.

The territory annexed as an integral part of the Reich is considerably larger than accrued to the Reich after the partition of Poland in the eighteenth century. It is larger than Danzig, the Corridor and former German Silesia.

Poland, at the time of Hitler's conquest, was inhabited by Poles in the relation of 18 Poles to 1 German, and in the annexed territory in the proportion of 8 to 1. These Poles are being removed from the annexed territory into the gouvernement general, the rump Poland occupied by Germany but not admitted to the Reich.

Crowded Area Further Swelled

INTO THIS SAME territory, but on special reservations, are being moved all the Jews of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, former Austria and the Reich proper—some 440,000 souls—to swell the population of a territory already overcrowded.

The Jews are permitted to carry with them only the equivalent of 300 marks (less than $100) and such personal belongings as they can carry in a suitcase.

The deportation orders apply to adults. Many have been unable to take their children and must leave them behind, to the care of international Jewish charity or to orphan asylums.

Germans, then, from the Baltic states and from the rest of Poland and former Czecho-Slovakia are to be moved into the Polish territory definitely annexed to the Reich.

The serf population left in the gouvernement general are to live in vastly greater numbers on radically diminished territory, at a social, economic and cultural level to be systematically kept below that of Germany.

The official German newspaper in Warsaw says "there can be no thought of sentimental fraternization between Germans and Poles." The West German Beobachter sums up the position in the words "A strong, thoroughly German peasantry, conscious of its rights as masters, shall find a permanent home in this land."

Greiser Indicates Iron Hand Rule

HERR GREISER, who rules Posen, says "The fate of the Poles will be hard but just." Die Zeit writes, "the cultural differences between Germans and Poles must receive clear expression in the future in all walks of life. That also applies to the right of possession."

The property of the Polish state has been confiscated by Germany. The Polish port of Gdynia, built by Polish labor and Polish money, has been taken over by the Germans and all Poles driven out of it.

The German labor service has been sent into the gouvernement general to organize the Polish workers and speed them up. Drilled like soldiers, these youths are, apparently, ruthless foremen.

And, of course, the secret police, the Gestapo, is ubiquitous.

Now, not only was there nothing in the Treaty of Versailles and the other 1919 peace treaties which even approaches this ruthless subjection and enslavement of nations and peoples but there have been no such peace terms in Europe in hundreds of years.

Barbarian Era Is Only Parallel

TO FIND PARALLELS, one must go to the old imperial conquests of African and Asiatic tribes, back to a form of imperialism which the modern world has long since rejected; or, back beyond that, to the enslavement of the "barbarians" by the Romans—though even they admitted to Roman citizenship the peoples living in territory annexed by the empire.

The citizens of the Allied countries may therefore demand that their governments indicate peace terms in case of their own victory. But no terms conceivable to the civilized mind can be as bad as the terms Nazi Germany has already imposed where she is victorious. They are of a cruelty and a barbarism—made more horrible by modern efficiency—which baffles analogy.

So let us, at least, hear no more about the iniquity of the Treaty of Versailles. It belongs to an imperfect but still more humane epoch. It was at least a treaty. There is no Treaty of Warsaw. For a treaty implies legal rights to both signers.

The Jobless Problem Remains

WHAT MANY members of the Administration have been saying privately and aching to say out loud was expressed Monday night by Corrington Gill, assistant commissioner of the Works Projects Administration.

Speaking in Philadelphia, Mr. Gill said:

"Our emotions have been turned of late to the tragic struggle in Europe, and it is time our attention is redirected to the struggle on this side of the Atlantic."

Mr. Gill dismissed as "fantastic and absurd" the notion that war trade will practically do away with our unemployment. He added, bitingly:

"It is no doubt true that if our country should actually enter this war and send millions of our young men to the battlefield, then there would be little or no unemployment—for a while, until the survivors poured back home. And, of course, if there were but few survivors returning home, our unemployment figures would remain low until a new generation grew up."

9,000,000 Jobless Despite Recovery

OUR INDUSTRIAL production is now topping 1929 levels, but we have, nevertheless, at least nine million unemployed. This is a conservative estimate. If surplus labor backed up on the farms and various other reservoirs were fully measured, the number of unemployed probably would be considerably higher. (Incidentally, an exceptionally lucid and interesting analysis of unemployment and the relief problems can be found in Mr. Gill's recent book, "Wasted Man Power," published by W. W. Norton & Co., Inc.)

If our country remains at peace, unemployment next spring will be nearly as high as it is now, Mr. Gill warned. In this forecast, he is in entire accord with most of the Government economists who watch the employment problem. He is not entirely in tune, however, with the high policy of the Administration, which is to keep the Nation's eyes focused on troubles abroad and on national defense and to make it forget its unsolved problems at home.

Politically, the high policy of the Administration may be expedient. The Democratic Party is seriously divided on many domestic policies, most of them centering about the relief and unemployment problems. The trend of popular thought may be toward conservatism. It may be true that the President can command greater support for his foreign policy than he can for his domestic program—or what used to be his domestic program.

President Disposed To Rest On Oars

BUT, WHETHER it is expedient or not, the high policy of the Administration is rooted in the President's own psychology. His own tendency has been to seek escape from difficulties at home by devoting his thought and time to world problems.

As a result some members of his Administration fear that the President's program for this winter will not differ from the program which would be recommended by Senator Taft, or Representative Wadsworth, or Vice President Garner, if any of them were President. The fear may be slightly exaggerated. The President may defend what they would jettison or alter. But he seems disposed to rest on his oars, and his feelings about our prospects for recovery and reemployment are so blithely optimistic that they appall some of his advisers.

Because they think any attitude toward our domestic problems except cheerfulness is contrary to high policy, many spokesmen for the Administration are not saying publicly what they are saying privately. This does not mean that they are pessimistic about the economic trend next year. Most of them are not. After a late winter setback they expect a continued upswing. But this prospect does not cancel the fact that we are still an immense distance from full employment.

Youth Problem Still Remains

EXCEPTING Corrigton Gill and one or two other outspoken officials, the blunt talk about unemployment and everything bound up with it is being left to sources outside the Government. The American Youth Commission, a nongovernmental body headed by Owen D. Young, is trying to drive home a few elemental facts about the vast dimensions of our "youth problem." Throughout the depression about one-third of our employed have been youth 24 years old or younger. About 3,500,000 of them are now looking for jobs but unable to find them, and at least 1,500,000 more have only part-time jobs.

No less appalling is the fact that a large percentage of these young people are deficient in health and education. In one Midwestern city, 1,800 boys and girls on NYA work projects were given thorough physical examinations. Forty-three per cent of them were found to have physical defects which made them unemployable by the standards set up by private industry in that city. It was estimated, however, that with corrective treatmet, the handicapped could be reduced to 8 or 10 per cent.

The poor education which so many of these young people have received is aother and longer story. In some cases it has been due to the lack of schools or the money to attend them. In other cases there have been schools but the young people have not been taught the things that would help them to earn a living and become good citizens.

Intellectual and emotional adventuring on the other side of the oceans may be fun, but, as Gill admonished. "It is time our attention is redirected to the struggle on this side of the Atlantic."

Small Investors To Get Chance at U. S. Bond Issue

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 28 (AP).—President Roosevelt disclosed today that he had a personal interest in an innovation in Treasury financing, which he said was in accordance with plans to let small subscribers invest 100 per cent of their available funds in Government securities.

The Treasury announced in Washington yesterday it would sell $500,000,000 of 2 per cent bonds and that investors who asked for not more than $5,000 of bonds and agreed not to call for securities for 60 days would be sold all they applied for.

Mr. Roosevelt said today he was interested as senior warden of St. James Episcopal Church in his home town, Hyde Park, N. Y., which he said is buying baby bonds rather than 2 per cent bonds. He said the point is this:

In bond issues for the last six years, if anyone had obtained $5,000 the Treasury had no interest in him, and if he still wanted to buy the bonds he had to go to some larger investor, who bought bonds for resale, and pay a point and a half premium.

Deadly Parallel

By Barnet Nover

Hitler's Sedulous Ape

GERMANY had a ten-year nonaggression pact with Poland. But last April Hitler tore up that treaty although it still had five years to run and although it contained no provision permitting its denunciation by either party before the full ten-year term was up. Five months later, Germany invaded Poland.

In 1932 Russia made a nonaggression treaty with Finland. It was one of many such treaties which Maxim Litvinoff had negotiated with Russia's neighbors. Yesterday Russia denounced the Finnish pact. The parallel is ominous although, in view of Russian policy during these last few years such pacts of nonaggression have proved to be not worth the paper on which they were written.

The action of the Kremlin does not necessarily mean that Russia is about to pounce on Finland as Germany pounced on Poland. That possibility certainly cannot be ruled out. It is, indeed, more of a likelihood now than at any time since the Soviet government began to put the heat on the little Scandinavian democracy to cede territory to Russia and permit Russia to establish naval bases on Finnish soil.

Yet it may be that Stalin, who has imitated Hitler in so much else, is imitating Hitler in using the denunciation of a nonaggression treaty as an instrument of intimidation.

HITLER DID not go to war with Poland immediately after he tore up the German-Polish agreement of 1934. He waited five months. The scrapping of the nonaggression pact was thus only an additional turn of the screw to bring about Poland's voluntary capitulation. It was only an offensive in that "white war" which the Fuehrer had waged with remarkable success over a period of years and which won him his greatest triumph at Munich in September of last year.

It was not until threats had failed to break Poland's will to resist that force was applied. Stalin may be calculating that threats alone will work against Finland. Yet having played the sedulous ape to Hitler in so much else there is a real possibility that the Russian Fuehrer will go the whole hog in his application of Nazi tactics to Russia's small and seemingly helpless neighbor.

LIKE THE POLES, the Finns are standing firm. They have indicated their readiness to make reasonable concessions to Russia. They have suggested that the two countries undertake further negotiations in an effort to find a satisfactory solution of the problem raised by Russia's demands for Finnish territory. They have made it clear, however, that they have no intention of voluntarily permitting their independence to be destroyed.

In this particular they have not deviated one iota from the position they took at the outset of the Russo-Finnish crisis last October. They know—as all small nations know—what it means for a little country to resist the demands of a powerful nation on the rampage. But they also realize that surrender means suicide.

WHAT IS RUSSIA after?

In making his deal with Hitler Stalin unquestionably calculated that the British and French were only bluffing when they said that they would fight if Poland were invaded. He probably expected another Munich. These calculations as to what the British and French would do have obviously gone awry. Russia must now reckon with two possibilities, either of which are unpleasant to contemplate.

The first is the possibility of a German victory. Should Germany smash the Allies, there would be nothing to prevent her from reverting to the plan adumbrated in "Mein Kampf" of a German thrust to the rich wheatlands of the Ukraine. On the other hand, an Allied victory and the replacement of the Hitler government in Germany by a regime ready and willing to cooperate with the western democracies would leave Russia friendless and alone not least because Russia's partisans, once so numerous, have greatly decreased since Stalin's pact with Hitler.

THUS STALIN finds it necessary to build a barrier against a possibly victorious Germany, on the one hand, and a possible coalition of Great Britain, France and post-Hitlerian Germany on the other. This explains the Russian feelers for a temporary truce with Japan even while, as a form of reinsurance, continuing the aid given to China. It also explains the Russian pressure in the Baltic and the Balkans.

So far Russia's program of acquiring buffer areas and new strategic outposts has been successful in Poland, Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania. It has come a cropper in Turkey and in Finland.

The failure to intimidate Finland involves a double danger to this program. In the first place it prevents the acquisition of valuable strategic cases in the Baltic. Of equal importance is that it tends to encourage other nations in Russia's new path to resist the demands of the Kremlin.

That is why it is so important for Russia, at this juncture, to break Finland's will to resist. It may be done by the continuance of systematic pressure on the little neighbor, the unrelenting application of Hitler's tactics of the "white war." And if that fails there shall remain the possibility of using force.

Thus the Finns are in an extraordinarily difficult position. They want to save their independence. But while doing so they must also save Stalin's face.

Or, to be more accurate, his two faces.

Woman Denied Right to Spend More on Charity

Annapolis, Nov. 28 (AP).—Baltimore's Lady Bountiful, Miss Emma Marburg, 79, was barred from spending more of her fortune for charity today by a Court of Appeals order.

Miss Marburg, who has $31,000 annual income, said in her brief that "her chief pleasure and interest in life" was her charities.

She said she has eight aged indigent pensioners at $50 a month, and regularly furnishes dental and medical care to destitute elderly folk.

The philanthropist sued the Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore, trustees under the will of her brother, the late Albert Marburg, to force the bank to turn the body of a $50,000 trust fund over to her at once.

The bank, exercising discretionary powers under the will, refused her request. The trustees were upheld in the lower court, and that decision was affirmed by the Court of Appeals.

Contracts Let For Hospital Job In U. of Virginia

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—Dr. John Lloyd Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia, today authorized contracts totaling $258,803 to be let for the construction of an addition to the University Hospital.

The contract for general construction was let to Harry B. Graham, Charlottesville contractor, whose bid of $233,640 was the lowest of 18 received last week.

Contract for heating and ventilation was let to W. F. Gerhart, of Richmond, for $13,222 and contract for elevators was let to the Salem Foundry and Machine Works of Salem, for $11,941. The contract calls for the building to be completed within one year.

The addition to the University Hospital is to consist of a five-story structure extending the three original wings of this hospital.

Football for the Front

("Ten thousand footballs are wanted for soldiers at the front." Paris news item.)

Is your daddy or your sweetheart
In the trenches at the front?
Send to him a football quickly
So that he can run and punt!
War is hell, as Sherman put it—
Oh, the horrors of it all,
When the soldiers feel like playing
And they haven't any ball!

II.

Never mind the knitting routine,
Cut the gifts of underclothes;
Overlook the cakes and dainties,
For he cannot play with those;
When the modern war is raging
With its shells and bombs and gas,
Then's the time the weary soldier
Loves to block or kick or pass.

III.

Cigarettes? Yes, you may send 'em,
But they aren't vital now;
There are things much more important
In this most peculiar row;
Get a little fund together—
Buy some footballs at the store—
Send, perhaps, a noseguard, also.
For, remember, war is war!

IV.

Europe's future in the balance,
All our standards are at stake;
As morale is all important,
It must never, never break.
Do your duty as civilians,
And, I pray of you, be quick—
For a soldier to keep going
Has to pass and block and kick.

V.

All around the boys are punting—
Now and then they try a smash;
We are in the fiercest battle
Since the Yale and Harvard clash;
Can't you hear 'm calling signals,
That's the most unfailing sign;
There's a crying need for footballs
—And the call is "Hold that line!"

VI.

Guns? Say, kid, they are illegal,
As the new rules now disclose;
You can lose ten yards for using Bayonets and things like those;
Snap that ball and let's get going!
This war's quite a novelty—
Just a little game of football—
AND IT'S QUITE ALL RIGHT WITH ME!

Michael A. Connor, Connecticut commissioner of motor vehicles, has dug up some interesting entries in the oldest bus in America contest. He finds that Joe Sessions, in Bristol, Conn., owns the 1906 Locomobile in which George Robertson won the Vanderbilt Cup race in 1908. The speed made by the cup winner—hold your breath—was 6.3 miles an hour!

Mr. Sessions still drives the car, just for a lark, every now and then, and, by endless tinkering, has increased its mileage from 4 miles an hour to about 7.

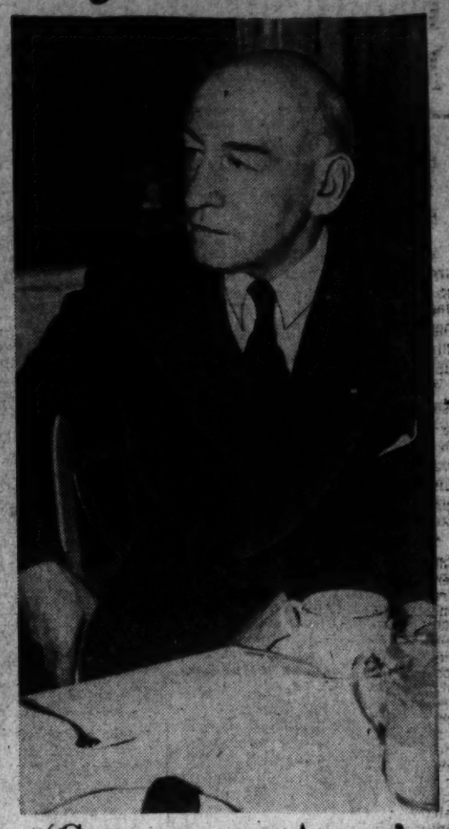
Final Report Luncheon—Community chest leaders and solicitors met at luncheon at the Willard Hotel yesterday for the last time in the 1940 campaign. They worked hard to get within 93 per cent of their goal, $2,000,000. They will not let it go at that, however, for they will continue the drive until they reach the mark or—as the sign says—bust



'Government Agent'—Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, chairman of the Government Unit, led his workers to within 98 per cent of their goal. His unit collected $748,418 of the set figure, $756,000, and hopes to reach the top soon

Your Figure Madame

Proper Muscle Tone Makes Legs Beautiful

MAYBE WE'RE developing a streak of cynicism, but could it be that these leg contests are staged by the publicity department for the benefit of the beautiful young actress in need of a leg up the success ladder?

We hear that Virginia Gillmore is now rated number one for lovely legs in Hollywood. She travels in good company. Ann Sheridan was mentioned for second place, Linda Darnell for third, and a girl by the name of Dietrich for fourth.

What makes us suspicious is the admission that the decisions were rendered after a study of photographs. Now I seem to recall once having told you that La Dietrich's limbs were not pluperfect from the standpoint of the figure expert. And I did that after looking over her photographs. Investigation with the tape measure later proved that Miss Dietrich has very nice legs indeed.

Miss Gillmore's legs look fine in the photograph and it may be she possesses the most beautiful pair in the movie colony. But I am not committing myself. The only reliable test of leg contour is the tape measure. Get yours out and see how you stand! Here's a table of perfect calf and ankle measurements for various heights. The heavy-boned or long-legged girl should use the "high" measure, and the small-boned or short-legged girl should take the "low" measure.

Height	Calf Low	Calf High	Ankle Low	Ankle High
5'	11 ¾"	12 ¾"	7 ½"	8"
5' 1"	11 ⅞"	12 ⅞"	7 ⅝"	8 ⅛"
5' 2"	12"	13"	7 ⅝"	8 ⅛"
5' 3"	12 ⅛"	13 ⅛"	7 ¾"	8 ¼"
5' 4"	12 ¼"	13 ¼"	7 ¾"	8 ¼"
5' 5"	12 ⅜"	13 ⅜"	7 ⅞"	8 ⅜"
5' 6"	12 ½"	13 ½"	7 ⅞"	8 ⅜"
5' 7"	12 ⅝"	13 ⅝"	8"	8 ½"
5' 8"	12 ¾"	13 ¾"	8"	8 ½"

Muscle tone is what makes the big difference in legs, not weight. With good muscle tone, legs are at their best when the weight is also normal, but the big thing is the muscle tone. The movie girl who, as a group, have the loveliest legs are the dancers. Nowadays a dancer is careful to get plenty of leg stretching exercise to conteract too much contracting—or vice versa. If they did only the contracting exercises, they would soon develop the knotty muscles which result from using only a small percentage of the muscle range.

Unless you are a dancer, you have to plan for leg exercise. To fill out the contours, walk upstairs every chance you get on the toes. But stretch your legs, too, by exercising with the heels pointed—stand with the ball of the foot on a thick book, heel resting on the floor.

How to Take Your Girl to the Show And Be Gallant

When a boy takes a girl to the movies he should suggest that she wait for him in the lobby while he stands in line for the tickets. She doesn't need to stand out in the rain or snow.

He should remove his hat and coat in the lobby, not wait till he gets to his seat where he'll interrupt the view of those in back of him.

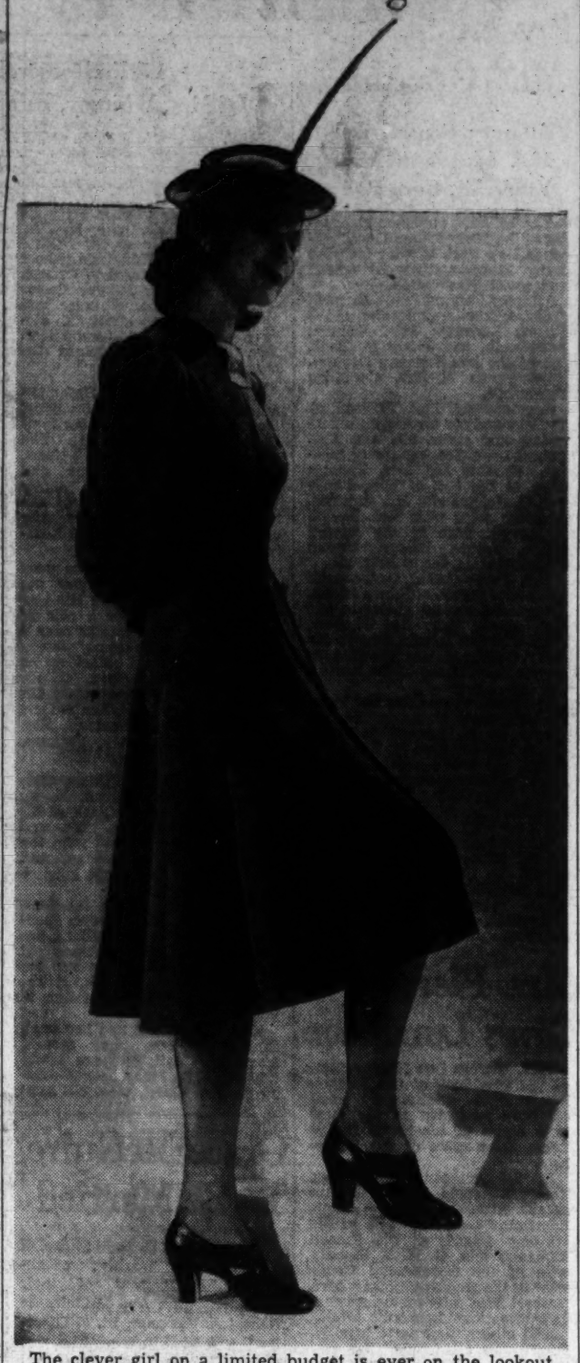
The couple should let the usher lead them to satisfactory seats, the boy following her. If there are no ushers the boy should lead the girl to a seat, letting her enter the row first.

As soon as they are seated, he should offer to help her off with her coat. Most young women prefer to sit on their coats, with the arms and shoulders draped across the back.

The young man may then fold up his own coat and place it with his hat, underneath his seat or on a vacant seat. Or he'll hold them on his lap so nobody can sit on them by accident.

When leaving the theater, the boy leads the way out, waiting at the end of the row until the girl joins him.

For Hard Working Girls



The clever girl on a limited budget is ever on the lookout for a good all-occasion dress, hat and shoes. Here are all three in simple versions suitable for office chores in town or for country week-ending. The dress is cut on flattering princess lines for wear under a tweed reefer of fur "chubbie." It's mossy textured rabbit's wool goes well with the tailored dash of the Harryson-designed porkpie pierced with triumphant pheasants quill. The shoes are high-cut, featherweight kidskins with elasticized side sections for glove tight fit. The medium high heels are ideal for hard working girls

How to Become Important

I. In the Business World.

This is one of a How To Be series for women. The following was prepared by Mrs. Aurelia Puffer Swagg, world famous authority on "Front."

Q.—What is the first step toward becoming a Woman of Importance in the business world?

A.—The primary move is to make one's self difficult to see.

Q.—How is this done?

A.—First, by never answering one's own telephone. Second, by never seeing anyone—even one's mother—without an engagement at least a week in advance. Third, by never sending out typewritten letters without a secretary's initials at the lower left-hand corner.

Q.—But what if one has no secretary?

A.—One can employ a Charlie McCarthy.

Q.—How should a woman of importance enter a business office?

A.—She should bustle in as if in a great rush, preferably with some kind of streamers floating behind her.

Q.—Should she say good morning to her associates?

A.—Preferably not. She is too rushed.

Q.—What should she do first on arriving?

A.—She should make a great stir among the papers on her desk and summon an office boy to perform an errand.

Q.—What else should she do at her desk?

A.—She should find something wrong with the lights or the ventilation and preemptorily summon a janitor.

Q.—What does she next do?

A.—She confers with someone.

Q.—What about?

A.—That is immaterial. She must spend the day conferring.

Q.—With whom does she confer?

A.—Oh, anybody—her associates, her bosses, her hairdresser, her maid at home, and a lot of strange persons on the other end of the telephone.

Q.—What kind of a personality should the woman of importance have?

A.—She should be eccentric, unpredictable, temperamental and difficult to handle—except when she is dealing with those higher up.

Q.—What should be her technique in handling callers?

A.—She should always make them understand that she has "only a minute." If they stay longer, she should begin to fidget, rustle her papers, or open her desk drawer. At the end of the third minute she should stand up.

Q.—Does the important woman in business go out socially?

A.—Yes, frequently. But she always makes her hostess and all the other guests understand how difficult it was for her to get away. And she always has to rush back to the office.

Q.—What does she talk about at social affairs?

A.—Herself.

Q.—How does she react when she makes a mistake in her work?

A.—A woman of importance never makes a mistake.

Q.—What is the ultimate reward of the business woman of importance?

A.—When she passes, people will whisper, "That's Miss Strutt, of Sailem's."

Tomorrow—How To Be Important Socially.

Cellophane Blonde

Cellophane blonde, the newest theme in blondness that is bringing the fair-haired gal back to popularity, is being enthusiastically accepted among New York's celebrities. Although she wears her hair in a Botticelli-like bangs style, Sally Clark McLanahan, who is John Roosevelt's sister-in-law, is a lustrous cellophane blonde.

Reduce Waist By Dieting

"PULL HARDER," gasps Mrs. Hefty, hoping the new wasp-waist corset will work miracles. Actually she'll bulge more than ever!

To have the slender, rounded figure that's in fashion, Mrs. Hefty needs to diet, cut the calories which make fat.

"But," protests Mrs. Hefty, "I don't eat much. Today I had only a waffle and coffee for lunch."

She doesn't realize it isn't how much you eat, but what! A tidbit may have more calories than a 3-course meal—and often the little "fixin's" with a dish are calory-dynamite.

"Fixin's" with Mrs. Hefty's lunch include 4 little pork sausages—300 calories. She takes 2 pats of butter, another 100, and 1½ tablespoons maple sirup, 100. A tablespoon of cream, 2 lumps of sugar give her coffee 110 calories.

Far fewer calories in this nourishing, well-balanced lunch—a steak sandwich, 250 calories, tea and lemon, no calories, a fruit cocktail, 100 calories a half-cup.

Yes, reducing is easy when you know the secret. With a chart, you select satisfying low-calory foods, banish the bulge-makers.

Instead of cream of tomato soup, 269 calories a cup, you have clear tomato soup, 100 a cup. Instead of Brown Betty, 250 calories a half-cup, you have tapioca cream, 127 calories a half cup.

By keeping your total "intake" at 1,200 calories a day for a while, you lose as much as 2 pounds a week, quickly get back your slim young figure!

Our 40-page booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," has a 3-day liquid diet to start your reducing, 42 low-calory menus based on protective foods. Gives calory chart, exercises for stubborn spots, menus for gaining, tooo.

Psychiatrist Would Banish Notion That Mental Illness Is Hereditary; Says It Creates Unfounded Anxiety

THIS DEPARTMENT IS HONORED to present the following letter, submitted by the Director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, with reference to the problem of a recent correspondent who has just discovered, after three years' marriage, that two of his wife's sisters are confined in an institution for mental treatment. The man wrote, in part: "Now I am very much upset about the future of our marriage. The thought of having children makes me fear for their health, and yet the thought of a childless marriage makes the future outlook gloomy."

Children by adoption were suggested as the solution of his dilemma, since this columnist was of the opinion that the mental weakness in his wife's family might possibly be transmitted to children of their begetting. Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt takes tactful exception to this point of view as being unduly pessimistic and cites distinguished authority for his more reassuring reaction. Since it is our invariable desire to "let in light" on subjects which touch the lives of many readers, we should welcome other equally studious contributions to the discussion. M. M.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My attention has been called by a number of persons to your column under date of November 25 . . . I must confess that I was disturbed because of the many persons who may develop anxieties in having a problem somewhat similar to that mentioned by your correspondent.

No less eminent a person than Dr. William A. White himself states in his book on "The Mental Hygiene of Childhood" that "we are coming in these days to think of heredity as being much more restricted in its possibilities for limitation. It is true that many students of heredity believe that all sorts of mental qualities may be traced directly from the ancestors.

"These physicians, however, who deal with the problems of mental illness, see, on the contrary, these peculiarities passed on because, as a part of the child's environment, they are impressed upon it during its developmental period. This view has been emphasized because it has been found possible to largely modify so many personal mental traits."

If you, Miss Haworth, will refer to Dr. White's, "Twentieth Century Psychiatry," in the chapter on heredity and environment, you will find the same enlightened viewpoint expressed in different words. It is particularly because the problem which your correspondent brings up is such a common one, that on the basis of many persons whom we have seen in many situations with profound anxieties, and in view of the more enlightened concept in recent years, I think it is not adding to the comfort of a large body of people, nor in keeping with advanced thinking on the subect, to take the less valid point of view as expressed by the author whom you cite.

I hope, of course, that you will accept my remarks in the spirit in which they are written, since I am aware of your deep seated interest in people. Sincerely yours,

PAUL J. EWERHARDT, M. D.

How Get Work In Radio Field?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Could you please tell me how I could get a position in the radio field? I have done "little theater" work, graduated in journalism, use shorthand, stenotype and dictaphone, comptometer, addressograph and billing machines. Have done newspaper work, stenographic, selling, photography, lecturing and demonstration and interior decorating. Also play a piano, violin, harp and organ. Can sketch a little and have done some work in oils. Have had experience in advertising, finance, banking, mercantile and motion pictures.

Am 38, widow (grass), two children, in good health and free to travel. Am financially able to take a course in radio work if such should be necessary, and if you can tell me where I might enroll for same. Thank you for any help you can give me. H. D. V.

Inform Yourself At First Hand

DEAR H. D. V.: If I wanted a position in the radio field, I would make the rounds of the local radio stations, declaring my ambition, defining my abilities and experience, acquainting myself with the nature and scope of the widely diversified types of work that radio offers, and inquiring into what actual or potential openings exist. I think you can get more helpful information by the first-hand approach than could be accumulated in any other way, and also, that it would be idle to take a "course" unless and until you know what work needs doing that you could qualify for. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Evening Clothes For Older Women

By the Associated Press

New York.—Best evening frocks for women over 50 are designed with sleeves. Some are long-sleeved dresses of black or of colored crepe studded with gold nail heads or worked with glittering embroidery. In others a jacket is worn over a decollete evening dress. The model which is tops in chic combines a dress and jacket of black crepe embroidered in bands of shimmering gunmetal sequins filmed with black marquisette.

In line with the special attention which shops are giving to clothes for women over 50 whose figures have taken on weight, heads of departments have compiled a list of clothes cautions to keep them from costly mistakes. These are the things which they say emphasize avoirdupois and should be shunned: Wide belts of contrasting color, embroidery at the waist, peplums, tight skirts, ruffles, fussy details and horizontal trims.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 28.

ALL HANDS AGREE that this is going to be one of the biggest resort and south-bound cruise seasons ever known to man, or woman, either. With the boom-boom abroad, our folks are going to head South for native sunshine, which is as good, or even much better than the Riviera brand. Also some of the young bloods, who like to jump off Alps, will go west to Sun Valley and ski until they are black and blue from neck to toe.

Alice Hughes

It seems pretty sure that what fun is had by our people this winter will be confined strictly to our own cozy little hemisphere, and a very good idea, too. So shine up, Florida, ere the hordes descend. Miami, of course, should boom enormously, and so should hoity-toity Palm Beach, which is looking forward to a super-gala season. Even beautiful Mrs. Harrison Williams, that best-dressed woman, is going to open her Spanish shack, or hovel, there this winter. It took a big league war to dig Mrs. W. out of her Capri retreat. The good old S. S. President Roosevelt has been hired to lug visitors to Bermuda, since the Monarch and the Queen are off somewhere on His Britannic Majesty's far-flung business.

For the Southern resorts, the clothes I have seen around here are brighter and more colorful than ever before. Girls of all ages are made younger and even prettier by this fresh toggery. Lots of the shorts are made of corduroy worn with long-sleeved shirts. Also prominent in the picture is the culotte skirt, with the trouser effect carefully concealed (most of the time) by front pleats in the skirt.

Even the ski girls will not look so much like old sacks of potatoes this winter. They are not so baggy, and are not tricked out with all sorts of silly embroidery. They look professional—even though the wearers may not. All in all, a dizzy winter looms in the United States. I'd like a bit of it.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—What a drollery in the lobby of the dear old Algonquin yesterday! Sitting there waiting for a luncheon date, I beheld one of the habitues, the long-mustached Rumanian writer of gypsy stories, Monsieur Konrad Bercovici. Then who should enter but this Mr. Melvyn Douglas, with all the glamour of a new hit upon him as Garbo's leading man in "Ninotchka." He and Bercovici beheld each other, rushed into each other's arms, and exchanged loud smacks on the cheek! Ah, these warm-hearted artists! . . .

I hear that tardy customers are still begging to get into the Fair grounds—just to look around. Well, it's a pretty sad and bedraggled sight, these days. Only one late-comer has so far been admitted—a Californian who wanted to compare our set-up with that on Treasure Island, in San Francisco Bay.

Lawrence Tibbett, jr., son of the great barytone who helped the opera open Monday night, has just made his Broadway stage debut in a very small role in the comedy hit "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Ah, the old trouper blood again . . .

Record Turnout of Diplomats, Debs, Dowagers Greets Stokowski Concert

Half of Top-Hat Audience Still Unseated as Impatient Conductor Leads Philadelphians In First Number at Constitution Hall

By Hope Ridings Miller

WHILE LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI put the Philadelphia Orchestra through its well-trained paces last night, Capital society by dozens and scores watched the performance from choice seats and boxes that were filled to the last chair.

A record turn-out of diplomats, dowagers and debutantes were on hand for the event, many notables coming on from dinners that enlivened the preconcert calendar.

"Stokowski waits for no one" was the whisper rippling through the crowd as the white-haired maestro made his way to the front of the stage and started the first number while half of the audience was still to be seated.

From then until the program drew to a close two hours later, the man who has been called "the most fascinating figure in the modern world of music," held the Capital spotlight in the hollows of his very expressive hands. From Haendel's "Overture in D Minor," which opened the concert to Musorgsky's "Pictures" that closed it, the concert lived up to its promise of being one of the great treats of the season.

Up one well-dressed aisle and down the other, as well as all the way around Washington's own "golden horseshoe" social and official celebrities were all over the place. Even up on the stage itself sat a party that came on to the concert after dinner with Mrs. Grant Mason. Attorney General Frank Murphy was in the company, which also included Mrs. John Hay Whitney, George Abell and his house guest, Sir Anthony Jenkinson, and several others.

Wallaces Have Roosevelt Box

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace were in Mrs. Roosevelt's box and had with them the Secretary's brother-in-law and sister, the Minister of Switzerland Mme. Bruggmann. Not far away sat Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, who came without her handsome husband (he is still out of town but will return today).

Coming on to the concert from a dinner given by the Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi were Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Miss Mary Randolph, Paul Wilstach and Aurel de Alth, attache of the Hungarian Legation. Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller had with them a party that included Mrs. Arthur Woods and Miss Laura Sprague.

The Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon were in Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's box; and near them were Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward and Mrs. Edwin Watson, who had with them Miss Ellen Nash and Robert L. Buell.

Mrs. Samuel Connor Gives Supper Party

Trimly turned out in a handsome white satin rock, fashioned with a fitted jacket was Mrs. Samuel Connor, who arrived with Baron and Baronne de Bodisco. The latter was gowned in gold and crimson brocade, made on simple lines. Following the concert, Mrs. Connor entertained a number of guests at a supper party at the Shoreham Hotel, where she makes her home. The event was especially planned in honor of Mr. Stokowski.

Miss Mabel T. Boardman was in her usual box at the concert and had with her four guests. The Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky were in a box, and so was Mrs. Emil Hurja, who had a small party with her.

The Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Hanes, who gave a dinner before, brought their guests on to the Stokowski performance, and several guests, who earlier had attended the dinner given by the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil were also on hand for the concert.

'Stokowski Must Be Different'

Talk at intermission turned chiefly to Stokowski's rearrangement of his orchestra and verbal votes were flying thick and fast against the new set-up of having the stringed instruments to the back of the stage and the woodwinds down center front.

"You know Stokowski—he must always be different" was typical of the remarks you heard in passing. "Why he even comes in from the left, rather than the right," someone observed. "Yes, he must always be different."

But "different" though he is (and I do wish his expressionless face would change just once), his directing last night thrilled the audience from the first note to the final one.

Among those in the crowd were Mrs. Patrick Hurley, who was accompanied by her debutante daughter, Miss Patricia Hurley; Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who entertained at a small dinner before the concert; Col. and Mrs. C. C. Schiffeler, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Miss Alice Clapp, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, who arrived with Mrs. Delos Blodgett; Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, the Yugoslav Minister, and Mme. Fotitch, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza; Anthony Rumbold, of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Rumbold, and several hundred others.

MISS ACHSAH BOWIE DORSEY

Achsah Dorsey Bows Before 600

Coming Out Tea and Dance at Army and Navy Country Club

Some 600 persons turned up at the Army and Navy Country Club yesterday afternoon between the hours of 5 and 8 o'clock to welcome a new debutante—Miss Achsah Bowie Dorsey—into the fast-blossoming bouquet of buds.

Admiral and Mrs. Benjamin H. Dorsey, her parents, had asked a goodly number of the service set as well as cave-dwelling Washingtonians who had known the deb's mother when she was a belle here. The younger set turned out en masse to greet Miss Dorsey and take advantage of the tea dancing to a ten-piece orchestra.

Pastel Flowers Decorate Club

The ballroom of the club was banked, within an inch of the ceiling, with pastel flowers, palms, ferns and fragrant pine boughs. Standing with her parents, between the two fireplaces, the dark-eyed debutante made an attractive picture in her swirling frock of dusky orchid tulle. The gown was made with a very bouffant skirt, small puffed sleeves, heart-shaped decolletage and very low back. Tiny bunches of flowers were appliqued over the tulle. Crowning her dark locks was a peaked cap appliqued tulle—an Irene Castle inspiration. This cap—which incidentally is something new in a debutante's wardrobe—had pastel colored velvet ribbon streamers falling to the floor. Long white kid gloves and an old-fashioned bouquet completed the picture.

Admiral and Mrs. Dorsey received with their daughter. Mrs. Dorsey had selected a peacock blue satin gown fashioned with a full skirt, puffed sleeves and high draped neck line, and wore a cluster of pink-purple orchids.

Many Debs Seen in Throng

Also in the receiving line was Mrs. Eugene de Bullet, of Baltimore, with whom the debutante stays when she visits that city and who will present her at the Bachelor's Cotillon next month. Mrs. de Bullet wore a blue and silver lame gown with a low neckline and shirred elbow-length sleeves and a corsage of white orchids.

Dispensing tea and coffee at the well-laden buffet were Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the Acting Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Benjamin Dennis, wife of Admiral Dennis; Mrs. Percival Rossiter, wife of Admiral Rossiter; Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Edward Stitt, wife of Admiral Stitt; Mrs. Charles Riggs, wife of Admiral Riggs; Mrs. Robert Jackson, wife of the Solicitor General; Mrs. John Downes, Mrs. Ross McIntire, wife of the Surgeon General of the Navy; Mrs. Norman Underwood, Mrs. Alexander Gordon, of Baltimore; Mrs. John Bennett, wife of Commander Bennett, of Annapolis; Mrs. William Furlong, wife of Admiral Furlong; Mrs. William Robertson, Mrs. William McMillin, of Baltimore;

Out-of-Town Friends Present

Miss Marilynn Himes, who bowed to society at a large party on Monday, chose a lacquer red ensemble trimmed in gold for the occasion. Completing the list of debs assisting were Miss Rosalynn Buchanan, whose black skirt was topped by a turquoise blouse and centered with a crushed rose girdle.

Also assisting were two post debs, Miss Doris Becker and Miss Betty Lloyd Hutchison. Here for the gala event were Miss Mary Washington Speer, Miss Barbara Garrett and Miss Henrietta Giddings Renshaw, all debs of Baltimore.

India to Avoid War, Says Woman Leader

Mrs. Kamaladivi, Vice President of Feminine Conference, Says Country Can't Fight Without Independence

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

India sent a million and a half men to Europe for Great Britain in the World War, but now the attitude of the people has changed, according to Mrs. Chattopadhyaya Kamaladevi, one of the country's leading women political leaders. Mrs. Kamaladevi, who is founder and vice president of the All India Women's Conference, declared India, as a subject nation, cannot identify itself with the war.

Mrs. Kamaladevi, is here for several days, making her first visit to the United States on her return from London to her own country. She is now a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hogue, 125 Third street northeast and later will visit Mr. and Mrs. Michael Straight in Alexandria. Yesterday she was guest of honor at a luncheon given at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse by Miss Molly Ray Carroll of the Department of Labor.

She Describes 50-Year Fight

She spoke without bitterness, of the struggle which has been going on for the past 50 years, she says, not against the British people but against the autocratic and imperialistic system, "of which they also are the victims."

The All-India Women's Conference, at its session the early part of this year, passed a resolution to the effect that "India should not identify itself with any war," she said, as the present conflict in Europe was then deemed inevitable. The resolution pointed out that the organization stood for democracy and freedom and that this cause could only be strengthened by India's becoming democratic and free.

"For the past five years, ever since the rise of Hitler, the people's movement in India has been pointing out to the British government," said Mrs. Kamaladevi, "that, in event of war, the Indians, themselves denied independence, could not be diverted from their own demands and aroused to go thousands of miles away to fight for democracy elsewhere.

"It would be like leaving your own house in a mess and going off to put that of someone else in order."

Mrs. Kamaladevi said the movement was perfectly organized, well-ordered and that everyone who joined was pledged "not to harbor violence in thought or deed." Gandhi's leadership has elevated the struggle for political rights to a new level, she asserted.

In order that it shall not become insular and narrow, an educational campaign is being carried on among the peasants, acquainting them with conditions in China, Czecho-Slovakia, and other sections suffering from oppression and aggression. Simultaneously throughout the country, a "China Day," Spain Day," or "Czecho-Slovakia Day" is observed, in which the struggles of these people are discussed and the relation of their need for freedom to that in India pointed out.

Feudal System Still Exists

Mrs Kamaladevi explained that a medieval feudal system was one of the conditions against which India was struggling—and this involved the rich Indian feudal lords, rather than the British. These and the wealthy princes, who are protected both by legal enactments and British military force, are dictators of the worst kind, she said. Many of them are of medieval mind, with no desire either to improve the condition of their peasant subjects or of the country. Some oppose even railroads.

"The people's movement does not tolerate autocracy from Indians any more than from British," she said. "It is not a racial struggle."

She denied that the influence of Soviet Russia was responsible for the attitude of the people of India. They are doing what they have said they would do if war came, she declared.

The distinguished Indian woman, wearing her native sari of purple and gold, seemed to fit into the quiet surroundings of the Hogues' home as I interviewed her, better than into the picture of vast political movements, yet to these she belongs.

She was in London, returning from the meeting of the Women's International Alliance for Suffrage in Copenhagen, last July, when the war interrupted her sojourn. There she felt a growing public sentiment for India's cause, she said, although there was no change in the government's attitude.

Trousers for Women Urged By Famed Dress Designer

Silly hats, red fingernails, bustles, hobble skirts, high heels, junk jewelry and corsets were ruled out as practical women's wear, and trousers heartily indorsed yesterday by Elizabeth Hawes, famous dress designer, in a talk before the Women's National Press Club.

Miss Hawes, author of "Fashion Is Spinach," spoke before a luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel, with three Cabinet wives and other social leaders among the guests. She went down the list of "attention-getting devices" now in vogue among the gentler sex and knocked them down one by one.

She did not object to the idea of attracting attention—that she accepted as a natural feminine aim. She asserted all women dressed to attract men but took exception with the way they did it. Men loathe what women wear nowadays, she declared.

As an example she pointed to the "attention-getting device" she wore on her own head. It was formed of five sable feet on which the "fingernails" had not been cut. She had painted these red, assembled the feet into something in the semblance of a hat and secured it to her hair with a small round elastic. "It is certainly not beautiful," she said. "I think it's amusing but my husband thinks it's terrible."

She predicted a hatless era and said milliners would have only themselves to thank.

Of red finegrnails, she said most women's hands were not beautiful enough to have that much attention attracted to them.

She laughed at the idea that American women ever could be put back into corsets. They will not be made uncomfortable, she insisted, and, because of their desire for comfort, she believes they will adopt trousers within the next few years for daytime wear. The English type, with suspenders, is her choice, with blouses for color.

She predicted America's entrance into the war with the same air of authority she did the masculine trend in fashion and seemed of the opinion they would go hand in hand.

She advised women to wear what they felt like wearing rather than something they thought suited their type. She also advised them not to buy clothes they did not like—suggesting a buyers' strike against fashions which were distasteful.

Her own costume yesterday, in addition to the collection of sable feet on her nead, was simple in line and interesting in design. It was a dress with an olive green blouse, made with a close, round neck and beige sleeves, full at the shoulder and close fitting from elbow to wrist. The black skirt was full, tight at the waist and held with a wide belt, fastened with two buckles.

She is a guest of Mrs. Harry Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, who was present. Other Cabinet wives were Mrs. Harold Ickes and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace. Mrs. George Grant Mason was among those seated at the head table with the guest of honor and Ruby Black, president of the club. Others among guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Thomas Cowell, Mme. Prochnik, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. Emmet C. Gudger, Miss Edna Lonigan, Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard, of Alexandria, and Mrs. Llewellyn H. Lawson, of Honolulu.

Mrs. Dunbar Attends P. E. O. Meeting Here

Women's Club Leader Addresses Session Of Chapter B

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar yesterday attended a P. E. O. meeting for the first time since she came to Washington 18 months ago as president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs—and she had almost forgotten the password, she told members.

Mrs. Dunbar, who is a member of Chapter F, in Portland, Oreg., her home city, addressed a luncheon meeting of Chapter B at the home of Mrs. Eugene H. Pitcher, 3910 McKinley street.

On her recent trip to Portland to speak at the dedication of the new tuberculosis hospital, for which she has worked for 20 years, Mrs. Dunbar conferred with the new national president of the P. E. O., Mrs. Wilfred Jones, who was elected at the convention in Texas this fall. Portland, she said, is proud of having a second national organization head among its clubwomen.

Mrs. Dunbar stressed the importance of the P. E. O. aligning itself with other women's groups in the community to strengthen their united influence as a safeguard to the home and to religious principles She mentioned its work in education and the scholarship fund it maintains, which is one of the largest in the United States.

Mrs. Dunbar, since September 18, has attended the State conventions of the federations of women's clubs in Colorado, Wyoming, South Dakota, Minnesota, New York, Rhode Island and Connecticut. She will address the Takoma Park Woman's Club December 5, the Kensington Woman's Club, December 11, and will speak in Toledo, New York City and Meadville, Pa., in the month.

Hostesses assisting Mrs. Pitcher at yesterday's luncheon were Mrs. Otis J. Rogers, Mrs. R. L. Lynch, Mrs. W. F. Foster, and Mrs. W. H. Magruder. Mrs. Charles Marvin Jones, the president, presided at a short business meeting.

Chapter D. B. P. E. O., entertained the State officers and the presidents of the District chapters last evening at the Martha Washington Seminary, 3640 Sixteenth street. A program of music was given by Mrs. Herman J. Watkins, soprano soloist of St. Alban's Church, assisted by Granville and Thomas Leef, also soloists at St. Alban's Church. Raymond Rapp was accompanist.

Roosevelt Letter Lauds Law Chiefs

Cities Need Better Understanding of Relations to U. S. Agencies, He Says

Understanding of its new relationship with the Federal Government is one of the most urgent problems before the American municipality, President Roosevelt set forth in a statement made public here yesterday.

"There is a pressing need for an agency to provide co-operative means by which our citizens may meet the new legal problems which arise from general urban development," Mr. Roosevelt wrote in a message to the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers.

He congratulated the institute on its effort "to harmonize in a legal way those aspects of municipal government which call for understanding of the new relationships brought about by the changes in the administration of the Federal Government."

Hodes Reads Letter

The President's letter was read at a dinner in the Mayflower Hotel by Barnet Hodes, president of the institute and corporation counsel of Chicago.

An indication that Government subsidies to air mail carriers may soon be lowered was given the session by L. Welch Pogue, general counsel for the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Pogue said he had no inclination to be a "spoil-sport" because of recent increases in air line revenues, but pointed out that a reduction in mail subsidies is inevitable when non-mail income rises to where the Government is making "an unreasonable contribution" to operating profit.

He stated that the C. A. A. is required by its mandate to institute rate revision proceedings on its own initiative when the facts indicate a need, as well as to receive evidence in hearings instituted by the carriers.

Kelley Addresses Session

Commander Raymond J. Kelley of the American Legion, former corporation counsel for Detroit and head of the institute, told the attorneys the stand taken by the Legion in its Chicago convention in September was a powerful factor in swinging the country from belief that America "is bound to get into the European mess" to the present "confidence we can stay out."

He said the Legion was responsible for creation of the Dies committee, "which is dragging into the light of day the rats who are gnawing at our foundations, and doing it regardless of whose ox is gored."

Delegates heard a warning that American cities are "desperately" ill-prepared to cope with any menace to public utilities in case of war, from Col. Louis L. Roberts, city attorney of Evansville, Ill. He urged immediate measures looking to protection of water supply, sanitation and similar services.

He proposed inclusion of municipal governments in formulation of national defense plans. The agents of potentially hostile powers are now in this country and ready for "that M-day," he asserted.

The civil liberties committee of the institute brought in a report pointing to "a remarkable increase in the amount of protection thrown about the exercise of civil liberties" by recent decisions of the Supreme Court. The committee predicted the content of the law "will grow ever more inclusive of those elements essential to the preservation of our heritage of liberty."

The institute concludes its three-day conference with a business session at 9:30 a. m. today in the Mayflower.

Zion Only Hope For Refugee Jews, Noted Author Says

Ludwig Lewisohn, author and Zionist leader, declared last night that Palestine alone offered some hope for the millions of destitute Jews of Europe. The novelist spoke before 900 persons who filled the Jewish Community Center auditorium to overflowing.

Appealing to Washington Jews to become members of the Zionist organization, Lewisohn averred solution of the so-called Jewish problem lay in political action to obtain Palestine as a permanent homeland.

He asserted he was not exaggerating in the slightest when he characterized the German occupation of Poland as "a catastrophe unparalleled in the history of the Jewish people."

Palestine, he said, can provide homes for 8,000,000 people with intensified agriculture. Despite restrictions on immigration and hostilities with the Arabs, Lewisohn pointed out, 34,000 Jews entered Palestine last year to find permanent homes.

The speaker was introduced by Rabbi Isadore Breslau, president of the Washington Zionist organization, which sponsored the program.

Capital News in Brief

2 Boys Marooned

Time and tide marooned two District boys for a chilly half-hour on Roosevelt Island in mid-Potomac yesterday.

Charles Reed, 17, of 2318 Fortieth street northwest, and Miller Marshall, 18, of 3407 O street northwest, went from the Virginia shore to the island opposite 3600 K street on stepping stones, uncovered at low tide.

While they explored the island, the tide rose. A Harbor Police boat rescued them.

Indictment of the commission form of government in the District and demands for a city manager-council plan were made yesterday by civic representatives in the second day of hearings on the Seal plan to streamline the municipal setup.

Pleas for self-government were made to the District Commissioners, who must report to Congress on a plan to reorganize the the government.

The hearings on the Seal plan, which was authored by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal in collaboration with District Auditor Donovan, Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst and Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, will end this morning.

Added yesterday to the previous day's champions of local suffrage was W. W. Coulleitte, of the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights. He said the "most important" element of the reorganization plan had been omitted by the Commissioners' "kitchen cabinet," which drafted the Seal bill.

"We, the taxpayers, are being ignored in the entire setup. We pay the taxes which make it possible to run the government," he said.

He added that the District never had a "more efficient group of Commissioners."

Plan Held Inadequate

Most outspoken antagonist of the commission form of government was Col. L. R. Maddox, of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association. Without mincing words, Col. Maddox said:

"We want a city manager selected by a governing body which has been elected by the people of the District. We do not feel the Seal plan is adequate. We want a council elected by the citizens. No shifting or shuffling of personnel will do the trick. We object to any increase in power for the Commissioners until we are permitted to choose them."

Henry L. Colman, of the Northwest Council, said "it is inconceivable that the Commissioners can recommend to Congress any plan which does not include a provision for suffrage." He also opposed the Seal plan to transfer municipal hospitals to the Board of Public Welfare, abolish the Board of Tax Appeals and place the District Assessor under the proposed finance department.

Colman made a plea to the Commissioners that they abolish the Board of Zoning Adjustment which he said has "its hands tied on certain zoning cases and must neglect the wishes of the citizens."

Ernest Henry, representing the Petworth Citizens Association, placed his group on record as favoring an elected governing body. He said the plan for a District civil service commission was "very admirable," but saw no reason why a proviso excluded employes in District institutions outside the city limits.

He asked the Commissioners if they were giving members of Congress a "field to explore their patronage."

Opposition to the reorganization plan was expressed by W. J. Tucker, of the Anacostia Citizens Association. He said his association was opposed to any type of reorganization unless a provision is made for suffrage.

Without suffrage, any government is arbitrary and despotic in character, he said. In the District the government is beneficent, however, "thanks to the character and quality of the men who at this time happen to be in office," he said.

"It is nonetheless despotic in that those who are governed have no voice in choosing governors," Tucker stated.

"To spend time and money in devising changes in the structure of District government, before its people become citizens in fact, as well as in name, is like constructing a watch and omitting the mainspring. It is like erecting a building without first laying a proper foundation. It is doing things out of order," he said.

Tax Board Abolition Opposed

William J. Bartle, of the Stanton Park Citizens Association, opposed the abolition of the Board of Tax Appeals and made a strong plea for suffrage and national representation.

Guy Tinner, of the Bloomingdale Civic Association, said he favored the present commission form of government until Congress gives the District suffrage.

Opposing the abolition of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic were the Traffic Advisory Council, represented by Whitney Leary, its president; Washington Automotive Trade Association, represented by R. J. Murphy, and the American Automobile Association, represented by Washington I. Cleveland.

Cleveland said the kitchen cabinet "male quartet" sounded a "sour note when it reached score 206 (section of the bill relating to the traffic department) of the proposed new theme song for the District."

"Second Bass Whitehurst continued to sing an old familiar strain; Barytone Donovan and Tenor Keech dueted a forlorn minor; while Tenor Seal intoned a staccato discord."

Col. McCoach Recommended

In the cabinet proposals, Capt. Whitehurst voted to retain the present Traffic Department as is; Maj. Donovan and Keech voted to place the engineering functions under the proposed Public Works Department, licensing features under the proposed License Department and the enforcement with police; and Seal would place all features, with the exception of licensing, under police.

Kenneth Armstrong, treasurer of the Federation of Citizens Associations and representing the Burroughs Citizens Association, said he favored a city manager-council form of government. He said the city manager should be chosen by either the council or the President and suggested Col. McCoach, engineer commissioner, for the job.

The recommendation of the Seal plan to grant the Commissioners the power to levy taxes or to legislate is "dangerous." This power should not be given to appointed officials, he said.

Mrs. Virginia Weston, speaking for the Voteless League of Women Voters, demanded that local suffrage be included in any plan for reorganizing the District's government.

Wirt F. Smith, of the Young Republican Club, said any reorganization plan that does not provide for enfranchisement of District citizens would be strenuously opposed. Martin Chancey, secretary of the District Communist Party, also called for self-government in the District, as did a brief submitted by the Socialist Party. Lucy Hancock, secretary of the Washington branch of the League for Peace and Democracy, recommended suffrage and the inclusion of a Department of Labor in the new setup.

Also appearing yesterday were William J. Thompkins, District recorder of deeds; Mrs. Ernest Howard, of the Federation of Women's Clubs, who opposed transfer of hospitals; William E. Hayes and A. H. Gardiner, of the District Bar Association, who opposed abolition of the District Board of Tax Appeals; a spokesman of the Washington League of Women Shoppers indorsing a Labor Department, and Jesse Crawford, appearing as an individual, who contended the present government was efficient.

Tribute Paid to Pastor of Shrine of Bles sed Sacrament

EDMUND M. TOLAND
Toastmaster

LEVIN P. HANDY
Dinner Chairman

Clergymen of two faiths and an attorney last night paid tribute to the right Rev. Thomas G. Smyth, pastor of the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament, as a bulwark against a "terrifying world future" at a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel.

Present at the dinner and reception were more than 500 members of the Chevy Chase parish, which originated under Mgr. Smyth's guidance. His 28 years of service there resulted last week in his elevation to the rank of domestic prelate in the household of Pope Pius XII.

John F. Crosby, law associate of Joseph P. Tumulty, also an honored guest, traced Mgr. Smyth's work in expanding his pastorate from a congregation of 100 in the Chevy Chase Branch Library to the 3,000 who worship in the present church, which, with a supplementary building, is valued at nearly $1,000,000. Such careers, Crosby said, have been mainstays of Christianity in combatting the "hideous monster of atheism."

The Rev. J. Hillman Hollister, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Chevy Chase, extended to Mgr. Smyth the congratulations of Protestant congregations in the community.

Stressing the necessity for good will among Protestants and Catholics, Dr. Hollister declared "cooperation among faiths is dictated not only by good sense but good religion."

"Unless Protestants and Catholics live together on terms of mutual respect," which he said existed in Chevy Chase, "we can make but feeble efforts" in fighting paganism.

The Rev. Thomas J. Crowley, assistant pastor at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament, praised Mgr. Smyth's "priestly zeal for the spiritual welfare" of his parish. He presented a check to Mgr. Smyth from the parishioners.

Information Held Vital To Liberty

Restriction Leads To Dictatorship, U. of Md. Dean Tells Adult Educators

The American system of adult education must teach and inspire the people to protect their liberties against encroachment by the "big boss" dictator, Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of the education department at the University of Maryland, told members of the District Adult Education Association last night.

As a corollary, adult education in America, or in any of the remaining democracies, must strive to give the people an "efficient freedom" by giving them as wide a type of information as they want and need, Dean Benjamin declared.

Democracy "Can Work Fast"

Recognized authority in the field of adult education and author of "Saber Tooth Curriculum," Dr. Benjamin spoke at National Education Headquarters Building, 1201 Sixteenth street northwest.

"Democracy can work faster in crises than any despotism, if only the people are informed as to what is going on," Prof. Benjamin insisted.

"Even the meanest intellect in a system of freedom, like ours, is entitled to all the information he needs and wants in order to operate in it. To restrict information in a democracy is a crime, a crime which eventually leads the democracy before the execution squad of the "big boss" dictator."

The Maryland University educator predicted that if the trend of the past 25 years toward political restraint of freedom continued the next 100 years would give a complete triumph to the dictators with their "big boss club technique," and that instead of four or five dictators there would be 100 dictators telling the people how and what to think.

Uses Germans as Example

"Nineteen hundred years ago," Dean Benjamin related, "it was Arminius who led the Germans in their successful fight against Roman tyranny in order to preserve their traditional liberties. Then it was the Romans who used the "big club" on their neighbors.

"Yet, today, by a process of mental training, or education, backed by the 'big club,' descendants of Arminius and his freedom-loving cohorts find it a crime even to remember a vanished freedom.

"They have even been taught to hate and torment a part of their own people because one uneducated man believes the medieval superstitions about the Jews."

Thus, the dean said, in a democracy it is up to the adult education system to inspire the people to oppose and fight the "big club" technique, and to teach them what the technique is.

The panel included Miss Maude Aiton, principal of Webster School; Dr. Mildred Weise, curriculum and teacher education specialist for the WPA; and Dr. Howard Long, assistant superintendent of District schools. Dr. Chester S. Williams, of the United States Office of Education, presided.

Citizens Oppose Seal's Plan if Not Given Vote

The Hampshire Heights Citizens' Association last night adopted a resolution opposing any action on the Seal plan for District government reorganization unless some provision is made for District suffrage. The resolution was presented by Dan R. Lamborne, chairman of the taxation committee, in the association's regular meeting at the Barnard School, Fourth and Decatur streets northwest.

The Board of Education's proposal for sex education in the schools as a "long-range health improvement measure," was approved in a resolution adopted by the group.

It went on record as opposing the elimination of No. 2 Rescue Squad from the area as embodied in a recent plan for Fire Department reorganization. It also went on record as supporting the Grover Park Citizens' Association's request for a community house in the area.

A special committee was named to investigate the educational facilities of the John A. Chamberlain School, 1300 block Potomac avenue southeast, at a meeting of the Southeast Citizens' Association last night. Plans were discussed for the association's cooperation with a special citizens' committee at the opening of the John Philip Sousa Bridge December 9.

Lincoln Park Leaders Envision East Capitol 'Avenue of States'

Our Town:

By Christine Sadler

Every time a civic leader living between the Anacostia River and the Capitol comes downtown to work, sight of the Mall reminds him that eventually his area is sure to be just as carefully planned and developed.

With one lane of the Pennsylvania avenue Bridge ready for opening on December 9, and the armory-auditorium project underway at the end of East Capitol street, the hope has more foundation today than ever before in recent years.

"It's just a matter of time now until East Capitol street becomes the Avenue of States, and has a bridge that will take it on to a connnection with the Maryland highways," Orrin J. Davy, president of the Southwest Council of Citizens Associations, said last night.

A. D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, who for years has been visualizing the beauty of an East Capitol street "as a complement to the work done west of the Capitol" and whose association kept passing Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge resolutions as the decades went by, also "knows" the Avenue of States is coming.

L'Enfant's Idea

"Lincoln Square will be Colonial Square then and all along the Avenue of States will be museums or monuments of some kind to the different States," Calvert declared yesterday. "L'Enfant had such an idea in mind and it never has died."

"What's being done at Gallinger Hospital is another indication this area is on the line of march," Davy said. "When I was a child it was looked upon as a sort of pest house but the building program under way there is really something."

Calvert visualizes also a boulevard developed out of Twenty-first street and connectinng with the arboretum, and urges a general speed-up of the Anacostia Parkway project. Both he and Davy call attention to the need for a rehabilitation of school buildings in the area. For the most part, they are old, lacking in modern facilities, and crowded.

Why the level, well drained section east of the Capitol lagged behind in development while the swampy regions to the west prospered always mystifies the Washington newcomer, who arrives to find the Capitol "facing away from the town" and the Goddess of Freedom looking out over a comparatively unbeautiful area, rather than west acros sthe Mall to the beautified Potomac.

Jefferson Lived Nearby

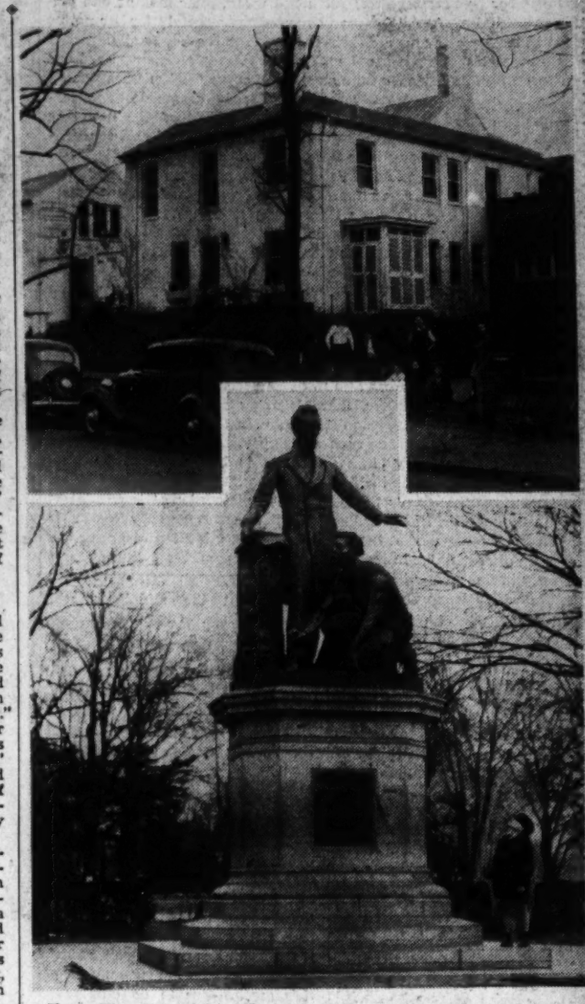
Also, there are those who go looking for the "old part of town up around the Capitol," believing that everyone from Peggy O'Neale to the ladies who ignored her once lived there. 'Twas never so, of course, although some of the very earliest celebrities did sparkle from a Capitol Hill address.

When Thomas Jefferson walked to his inauguration, he started out from his boarding house only a few blocks away and the first municipal hall was up that way—but Lincoln Park as a community is only around 40 years of age. "The section east of Fifteenth street really has developed within the past 15 years," Calvert said, "building probably 500 houses within that time."

"What is now Lincoln Square was fenced in by high boards, as I remember it during the Civil War," James Duhamel, secretary of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, recalled yesterday. "A hospital and commissary were on the inside and barracks were between there and the Navy Yard.

"The industrial development along the Navy Yard, of course, is very old. The British did more damage down that way during their visit of 1814 than anywhere else, as far as the town itself was concerned. Where Lincoln Park community is was forest in the 1860's."

In Lincoln Square, from which the section takes its name, is one of the city's most unusual memorials—the Emancipation Monument unveiled in 1876, and was purchased by the voluntary contributions of emancipated slaves.



Top—The Friendship House, 619 D street southeast, playhouse of the Lincoln Park section's children. Lower—Statue of Lincoln the Liberator

For many years the square, which was developed about 1870, was the scene of a mass celebration of colored people on each Emancipation Day.

At 619 D street southeast, now a settlement, Friendship House, is The Maples—one of the oldest homes in Washington. While not in Lincoln Park, The Maples and the Alva Belmont House in Stanton Park typify the kind of homes the District had before it became the District and still was "old Maryland". Haunted since 1838, it was erected in 1796 by William Mayme Duncanson, and has a wine cellar that is 42 feet under ground. In 1871, it was purchased by Mrs. Edson Briggs, the noted Civil War woman journalist, and sold by her daughter-in-law to the Friendship House Settlement.

A few other landmarks stand in East Washington between the Capitol and the river, but it is the new that interests Lincoln Park citizens and their neighbors the most.

"President Taft's insistence that the new Supreme Court Building come over this way should not be left out of our story," Calvert asserted. "Every victory brings another. That's why I'm so hopeful about the Avenue of States."

Tomorrow—Friendship, and old Tenleytown.

Young Swedish Actress Lives Up to Her Notices

Igrid Bergman Charms in "Intermezzo;" Local Theatergoers Take to Balloting; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IT IS NOT SURPRISING that David O. Selznick—and all the rest of Hollywood, for that matter—was perturbed when, after making one picture in this country, Ingrid Bergman departed precipitately for her native Sweden in response to an overwhelming desire to see her family.

Miss Bergman's one picture on this side was "Intermezzo—a Love Story," opening this Friday on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Its preview screening for the drama desks yesterday afternoon confirmed all of the flattering things that have been printed and said concerning Miss Bergman's work opposite Leslie Howard in this exquisitely produced and rationally acted film. She is an intense and radiant young actress with a rare gift for naturalistic playing and that indefinable endowment that causes her to appear vibrantly beautiful when, as a matter of fact, she is not, really.

BELL

Miss Bergman obviously is a young woman of culture and quick mental perceptions. Among the several languages she is reputed to speak is a perfectly intoned English that is tinged with only the slightest suggestion of accent. She seems also to be an accomplished musician. Of course, there is never any telling about such things on the screen, but the piano playing that forms such an important factor in the story of "Intermezzo—a Love Story" seems actually to be performed by Miss Ingrid. At least she has the hands of a virtuosa.

The love story that forms the basis of the pictured plot is an "intermezzo" in the married life of Holger Brandt, a great concert violinist. It is told on the screen without theatrical flourishes, violent climaxes or extravagances of any kind. In its quality and movement the picture it most persistently brings to mind is "Love Affair," in which Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer achieved so resounding a success. "Intermezzo," however, lacks the gentle vein of comedy that unobtrusively permeated the Dunne-Boyer vehicle. It is very distinctly a picture for intelligent and thoughtful audiences who derive pleasure from things of beauty, beautifully executed. Not the least of its attractions is the wealth of music it affords, either as an essential element of dramatic narrative or in an almost continuous interpretative background.

Miss Bergman makes her American debut as a conspicuous member of an especially well balanced cast, led, of course, by Leslie Howard, but also including Edna Best, John Halliday and an occasional fleeting glimpse of Enid Bennett, brought out of retirement for the first time since the remote days of her silent stardom.

And there is a wire-haired terrier in the cast that is worth watching, too. That first growl of his is prophetic.

It would save a vast amount of wear and tear on the delicately organized nervous systems of the drayma departments if the boys would make up their minds when they're going to open their new bills and then make it stick. As an offset to the Friday opening of "Drums Along the Mohawk," at the Palace—instead of Thursday—the Metropolitan now comes through with word that "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" will be popped into its repeat downtown engagement tomorrow—instead of Friday. As nearly as we can figure out at the moment, that will make two Thursday openings this week, the Marx Brothers in "At the Circus," at the Columbia, being the other one—but you can see for yourself that we have our fingers crossed. All ten of them.

Washington theatergoers attending the Civic Theater's production of "Merrily We Roll Along," at Wardman Park this week, are taking enthusiastic advantage of the opportunity to express their preferences for the Civic's last three plays of the season. As this is written, "Saint Joan," George Bernard Shaw's great play of the Maid of Orleans, is leading in the balloting. Running a close second is William Saroyan's "My Heart's In the Highlands," the first work of one of America's most discussed young playwrights. Almost in a deadlock with these two is Irwin Shaw's "The Gentle People" and "Father Malachy's Miracle," a recent Broadway success.

These four, oddly enough, come along about the middle of the printed ballots. Other titles from which choices may be made are "Medicine Show," "Dame Nature," "Murder In the Cathedral," "Rip Van Winkle," "Johnny Johnson," "Prologue to Glory," "Princess Turandot," "The Insect Comedy," "Criminal-at-Large" and "Busman's Honeymoon."

Speaking of balloting, Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller, of the Little Theater, makes known that more than 12,000 votes have been cast by patrons of the Ninth street house, expressing their wishes in the matter of pictures to be shown in this year's "International Film Festival." Plans for this important event—the Little's second—are to be divulged to the press today at a luncheon following the unrelated preview of the much-discussed picture of "The Puritan," to be shown at the Belasco Theater, beginning Sunday. More of both later.

And re that business of whetting the appetite, Joe Cook is slipping into town a day ahead of his scheduled opening in "Laugh Factory," on the stage of the Earle Theater Friday, and will be feted by Zone Manager John J. Payette and the Warner executives tomorrow at brunch. Thus the drama desks will begin laughing, as well as eating, again.

As complete a collection of "freaks" as ever was assembled in a Ripley "Odditorium" was encountered by Jesse L. Lasky, veteran motion picture producer, in his nine-week tour of the country in quest of new talent. A human radio, a cow with a Greta Garbo complex—whatever that may be in a fovine—a man who wanted to commit suicide and a 52-piece "saw band" were a few of the heterogeneous assortment of applicants who sought entrance to fame through the "Gateway to Hollywood." Mr. Lasky made a bit of a record, on the same side, at that. Out of the 18 aspirants he took to Hollywood for his competitive broadcasts, seven found their way before the cameras in feature pictures.

Irony-of-Fate Note

Back in 1928, when sound and dialogue were just getting started on the screen, Mr. Lasky was one of their bitterest opponents. He probably was thinking of his vaudeville cornet playing!

Howd'ya Mean Just One Big Happy Family?

Hollywood Has More Troubles Than Heinz Has Gherkins!

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Nov. 28.—Hollywood's labor troubles, which are so complicated they're funny, seem to be smoothed over for two months more and there's no danger of your favorite movie house being closed by a strike until February 15.

On that date the picture producers promise to prove to the satisfaction of their help that they're on the verge of starvation, corporately speaking. They will demand that the 10 per cent pay raise they granted last week be abandoned.

Joseph M. Schenck and the other movie moguls even promised the union workers a peek into the books to see where the $1,000,000,000 spent annually by movie fans actually goes. In all the history of motion pictures the ultimate landing place of that $1,000,000,000 has been a deep secret.

The studio workmen claim that even with their 10 per cent raise, they average $900 a year each. They say this is hardly enough to keep body and soul together. They say furthermore that of the 60-odd salaries in the United States of $200,000 a year or more, some 40 of them are reported to the income tax bureau from Hollywood movie producers.

Don't Like Close Shave

The workers insist that a movie executive who earns $200,000 every 12 months is not the man to be trying to shave $90 off a $900 yearly pay check. So keep an eye open in February for news of more movie strike threats. It'll make interesting reading. And that isn't all.

No telling where some of the bigwigs will be. William Bioff, Hollywood agent of the International Association of Theatrical Stage Employes, is free under $1,000 bail now on a 17-year-old charge of pandering in Chicago. He was convicted in 1922 and served only six days of a six months sentence. The Illinois appellate court, which confirmed his conviction, wants to know why he didn't serve the rest of his time. The records don't show.

Then there is the little matter of the $100,000, which Bioff is supposed to have borrowed from Schenk, head of Twentieth Century-Fox and president of the Producers' Association. A grand jury has looked thoroughly into this transaction.

Bioff says he borrowed this $100,000 to buy a fruit ranch, but gave Schenck back his check when it developed the land was no good for growing oranges.

The Ubiquitous Law

Schenck and 11 other movie makers, meantime, are being investigated by G-Men in connection with their income taxes. Another section of the Justice Department is looking into the organization of Twentieth Century-Fox while a third contingent of Federal lawyers is wondering whether to seek indictments against the whole movie industry on antitrust charges.

These accusations are based upon the claims of numerous theater owners who say they cannot rent first-class movies and hence are losing their patronage. They charge that the big chains of theaters, affiliated with the studies, are trying to freeze them out of business. And that's only the beginning of the story of strife in Hollywood.

The I. A. T. S. E. of Bioff is an American Federation of Labor organization. John L. Lewis' C. I. O. is trying to pry its way into the movie business, while Bioff has just emerged the loser in a fight to gain control of the Screen Actor's Guild, made up of the world's highest paid union members.

All this battling over pay, representation and rights has had its adverse affect on the picture business. All sides claim they're not responsible, but the fact remains that an actress, for instance, can put more umph into a screen kiss if she's not worrying about the speech she's about to make at union headquarters.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 28 (INS).—My favorite bazooka player, Bob Burns, is going a-visiting to make his next picture, for today Paramount granted Bob permission to go to Universal to star in "Alias the Deacon." Offhand I can't think of a better role for Robin (as Bing Crosby calls him) than that of the genial and philosophical crook who poses as a deacon and then turns straight. The play, by John B. Hymer and Leroy Clemens, ran for years in the big towns and in stock companies, and Universal made it as a movie in 1937 with Jean Hersholt.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"Alias the Deacon" will be megaphoned by Richard Wallace and will be his first picture since his hit with little Gloria Jean in "The Underpup." Nat Perrin is working on the script and doing a hurry-up job, since the picture is going into production January 8. I know Universal is pleased about this deal because they have been trying to borrow Bob for over a year.

Wonder how or why Paramount let Osa Massen get away from them after the way the fans and the critics discovered her in a big way in "Honeymoon in Bali?" Personally, I thought Miss Massen proved herself one of the best bets in a long time in the Madeleine Carroll-Fred MacMurray picture. But today it was Walter Wanger who stepped in and signed her on a long term contract. Walter has been searching for an exotic star ever since Hedy Lamarr made the boxoffice ring with "Algiers"—and he gets another excellent bet in Osa. News of her first picture under the new Wanger contract will be forthcoming after the Scandinavian star returns from a holiday trip to New York.

With the fans still arguing over whether they like Myrna Loy best as the perfect wife, or as a naughty Lady Esketh in "The Rains Came," M-G-M is planning a compromise. Today the bosses were in a huddle about putting Myrna in "Flight Command," in which she'd play the wife of an air officer, who falls secretly in love with his younger aide, Bob Taylor. Several pictures have been rumored for Bob, who just returned from the East. But a wire from the Coast brings the news that "Flight Command" will probably be his first—and Myrna is the only woman in the cast.

Snapshots of Philadelphia collected at random: Constance Bennett telephoned from New York she starts rehearsals on "Easy Virtue" there on December 4; Phyllis Haver and Billy Seaman here for the Cornell-Pennsylvania game with a big party; Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan guests of honor at Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity dance, where they presented Jane with a gold evening bag with the fraternity crest and Ronnie with a beautiful cigarette case; our whole troupe was entertained after the show Saturday night at the Warwick, where we saw Mrs. George Fitzmaurice's sister, Connie, who is married to a Philadelphia businessman.

Betty Grable and Bert Lahr are in town and we dropped in to watch them rehearse "DuBarry Was a Lady," which opened last night; George Lamaze's Warwick lobby looks like Hollywood, with Ethel Merman, Betty and Bert, the Jules Steins and our gang, including Arleen Whelan, Susan Hayward, Joy Hodges, June Preisser, Jack Mulcahy and Mecca Graham, talking shop between shows; Bill Israel, genial manager of the Earle Theater, has done everything to make life easy so we don't mind five shows daily. But even with the Philadelphia houses closed on Sunday we didn't have a vacation, hopping to Camden for three shows. Hate to brag—but we're doing five shows daily and each one is to standing room only. Who said Philadelphia was a cold show town?

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Gay to Grave

From his comedy hit opposite Greta Garbo in "Ninotchka," Melvyn Douglas turns to a tense dramatic role in "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep."

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Nov. 28.

One of our better fan magazines, which will be out soon, selected its All-American motion picture team of 1939, which runs as follows: Ann Sothern for "Maisie," Geraldine Fitzgerald, "Dark Victory;" Bobs Watson, "On Borrowed Time;" Brian Aherne, "Juarez;" Robert Donat, "Good-by, Mr. Chips;" Roz Russell, "The Women;" Vivien Leigh, "Gone With the Wind;" Wendy Hiller, "Pygmalion;" Henry Fonda, "Young Mr. Lincoln;" Greer Garson, "Mr. Chips," and Laurence Olivier, "Wuthering Heights." It's interesting that out of 11 mentioned, 7 are English. Writer went on to say that, naturally, they had retired to the bench players like Bette Davis, Paul Muni, Spencer Tracy and Luise Rainer. Which is okay. Now, I'll admit all these people gave wonderful performances, but how about Jimmie Stewart in "Mr. Smith," Priscilla Lane in "Four Daughters," Jane Bryan in "We Are Not Alone," Mickey Rooney in "Babes in Arms," Jack Barrymore in "The Great Man Votes," Greta Garbo in "Ninotchka," Will Fyffe and Doug Fairbanks, jr., in "Rulers of the Sea," Gloria Jean in "The Underpup," Ingrid Bergman in "Intermezzo," Ginger Rogers and David Niven in "Bachelor Mother," Maria Ouspenskaya in "The Rains Came," Charles Boyer and Ferika Borros in "Love Affair"? Well, now I've had my say. Wonder how many will agree with me?

HOPPER

As soon as Alice Faye finishes retakes on "Little Old New York" she'll head for New York, carrying with her quite a gift—two original models for the good ship Claremont, built for the picture. She'll present them personally to the New York Aquarium—you know, that fishy place. The studio had no idea there were so many boat lovers in the country. They've turned down hundreds of requests for these models and an offer for $3,000 apiece. So I'd say that's a pretty nice gift—wot?

Speaking of boats, Bill (Pygmalion) Lipscomb's nine tons of furniture just arrived from England, after being loaded on and off boats eight times. But finally made an American boat. Bill is a great lover of antiques. Lots of his things are of the Charles II period. Bill, you know, did a play in that period—"The Royal Charles." Now Frank Lloyd has an option on another—"Than You, Mr. Pepys" (pronounced "peeps"). Pepys was not only a gentleman who kept a diary (here it's disastrous for either a lady or a gentleman to own one) but as undersecretary of the British Navy under Charles II did a lot to develop that navy. Frank Lloyd, who also loves the sea and has turned out some of our best sea pictures, has big plans for this one.

Spencer Tracy may be a swell actor and Academy Award winner to everybody else in the world—but Albert Dekker remembers him for another reason. Yesterday on the set of "Strange Cargo" they had quite a laugh about it. Several years ago the stage company of "Conflict" (which boasted such names as Spence, Dekker, Eddie Arnold and Frank McHugh), had an exciting evening. Spence was supposed to shoot in the general direction of Dekker, but the leading lady missed her cue, came in too soon and, rather than break up the scene, Spence did fire at Dekker. And the charge from the blank set his coat tail afire. What a time he had—trying to grab at the fire and put it out, while making the audience think he was going hysterical from pain. Spence says he's never been as good since.

Just before Jack Barrymore left here he went to a Santa Barbara hospital. They put him on a diet, which didn't include Elaine Barrie. For breakfast he got an ounce of orange juice; for lunch they gave him a cup of tea, and his dinner consisted of half a slice of bread. Finally the meager diet got on his nerves and he rang for the nurse and shouted: "Bring me a postage stamp; I want to do some reading!" . . . Wonder if you've heard about one of our better writers who was invited to a snooty producer's home for dinner. Writer wired: "Sorry I can't make it tonight. Lie follows in detail."

They do say that when "Of Mice and Men" is released as a picture Lon Chaney, jr., and Leigh Whipper (the colored actor who plays Crooks, the stable boy) will hit stellar runs.

Can't you see the girls standing in line when Brian Donlevy opens in his personal-appearance tour? Incidentally, he has something new in contracts—an "anti-yellow" clause in his Paramount contract. Says he doesn't mind dying but, b'gosh, they've got to let him die clean!

On his first day on "Young Tom Edison" Bobby Jordan (a Dead-Ender) will taken to the schoolroom by Mickey Rooney—and was Bobby furious? Then he complained to the teacher he couldn't study with Mickey playing the piano so loud—so "Young Edison" was promptly silenced. Now it looks like another feud—and good!

Marsha Hunt, for four years an ingenue on the screen, is only 21, yet she plays a role in "Joe and Ethel Turp Call on the President" that takes her from youth to the age of 65.

Economist Wins Football Contest; New York Tickets

Harold Breimyer Takes First Prize In Final Selections; Four Others Get Redskin-Giant Pasteboards

The winner and champion prognosticator of Washington's football fans: Harold F. Breimyer, of 1814 Newton street northwest, 25-year-old economist with the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The award: The Washington Post's grand prize for the finale to its 10-week-old football contest—a free round trip to New York Sunday and two tickets to the Washington Redskins-New York Giants game for the National Football League Eastern Division championship.

HAROLD F. BREIMYER

Breimyer not only named the winners in 16 of the 19 outstanding college games last Saturday, but also predicted three of the actual scores and indicated one of the three tie games. His selection topped a list of more than 12,000 entries in The Post's final contest.

Other winners, each of whom will receive a pair of the highly coveted tickets to the Redskins-Giants game, are, in order:

Fred W. Bradbury, of 3629 Ingomar place northwest, auditor for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., second.

Lorraine Schreiner, of Belle Meade, Va., 21-year-old clerk for the American Viscose Co., at Front Royal, third.

Kenneth Schreiner, 18-year-old brother of Lorraine Schreiner, stillman for the Belle Meade Products Co., fourth.

Bynum Hunter, 14-year-old third form student at Woodberry Forest School, Orange, Va., fifth.

Breimyer's winning margin was in his prediction of the George Washington-Bucknell score, 7-6, the Northwestern-Iowa tie, 7-7, and the Georgia-Auburn game won by the latter, 7-0. He also indicated the U. C. L. A.-Oregon State game as a tie, but called it 7-7 instead of the actual 13-13.

Entries in The Post's contest were judged first on the number of winning teams picked, then on the actual scores listed by the contestant.

Bradbury, second-prize winner, also picked 16 winning teams, but he named only one actual score, the Northwestern tie game. He called the U. C. L. A. contest a 14-14 tie—off just one point.

Miss Schreiner, with 15 winners, predicted the actual scores in five of the games, while her brother had the same number of winners, but only two of the actual scores correct and one of the tie games indicated. Hunter, with only four errors, took fifth place with two actual scores.

Breimyer, who has competed in two previous Post selecting contests but never won, attributed his success to careful study of the complete records on the leading college

Title Game In Milwaukee

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Nov. 28.—The game to determine the championship of the National Professional Football League will be played in State Fair Grounds, Milwaukee, on December 10, if the Green Bay Packers can maintain their lead in the Western division, Carl L. Storck, league president, announced today.

The decision was reached at a meeting of club owners here.

The Packers, now one-half a game in the lead, can clinch their title by defeating the Detroit Lions next Saturday. In event they lose, however, and are thrown into a tie with the Chicago Bears, the two teams will meet on December 10 for the Western title, and the victors then will meet the Eastern winners in a "World Series" game on December 17 in Milwaukee or Chicago, depending upon the game's outcome.

The Eastern representative will be decided Sunday in a game between the Washington Redskins and the New York Giants, now tied for the Eastern division lead.

New York's Rover Boys of Ice Hockey were not up to storybook form last night. The Washington Eagles repelled their desperate last-period comeback, with the aid of several miraculous saves by Goalie Gordon Lee, and nosed out the defending champions and current leaders of the Eastern Amateur League, 2-1, before 2,501 paying customers at Riverside Stadium.

The Eagles, looking unusually chipper, despite playing their sixth league game in eight nights, were away winging with two goals in the first period, and for a time it appeared as though they would fully vindicate the 10-5 licking the Rovers handed them in New York Sunday.

However, the Rovers, who appeared the fastest skating and cleverest stick-handling team to show here this season, settled down, matched the Eagles' airtight defense, pulled up to 1-2 and threatened throughout the final 20-minute period to tie the score and send the fray into overtime.

But Goalie Gordon Lee, the Eagles' outstanding player for the second straight home game, thrust his frail 133 pounds into shot after shot and almost single-handedly saved the game for his mates.

Smallest Player Stars

The smallest player in the Eastern League and perhaps the smallest in organized ice hockey, the 25-year-old Lee drew down a series of tremendous ovations from the disappointingly meager crowd. Also outstanding in the Eagles' impregnable defense, which limited the Rovers to their lowest scoring total of the league season, were Bill (Stinky) Davies, Hal (Admiral) Dewey, Roy Covert and Ken Partis.

Washington's offensive star was Alan Kuntz, right wing, who scored

Locals to Entrain Tomorrow for N. Y., Where They Will Drill for Game

The Redskins will take the field against the Giants at the Polo Grounds on Sunday as pronounced favorites in the betting. The Post was informed last night by Jack Doyle, Broadway's No. 1 betting commissioner.

"My opening odds, which I have announced today, make the Redskins short-enders," said Doyle in the parlance of bookmaking. "The Redskins are 3 to 5 and I am quoting the Giants at 13 to 10."

Doyle declared that future odds would be governed by the trend of the betting, but that barring a heavy show of money on the Giants, the Redskins would continue to rule emphatic favorites.

Expects Odds to Shorten

"Any changes in the odds will probably give bettors on the Giants a longer price," said Doyle. "My guess is that by the time the two teams go on the field Sunday, the Redskins will be as short as 1 to 2. Of course, in that event we will be offering 3 to 2 against the Giants."

His opening odds, Doyle explained, are based on his own appraisal of the two teams. Later odds will be subject to the flow of betting, but Doyle sees no chance that the Giants will take the field as favorites.

"The Redskins appear to have too much power," he said. "The Giants have been having a tough time winning their games and the Redskins have been running away with the opposition. When the Redskins beat Detroit, 31-7, it was the clincher as far as the odds are concerned. The Giants lost to that Detroit team."

Tickets for the game at New York continued to be at a premium both here and in Manhattan yesterday. The Redskins' supply has been exhausted and officials of the Giants declare the demand is far in excess of the number of seats they are holding.

Entrain Tomorrow

The Redskins will entrain tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock for Rye, N. Y., where they will train at the Westchester Country Club on Friday and Saturday. They will not move into Manhattan until Sunday noon. Coach Flaherty's choice of the Westchester club as a training site was natural enough inasmuch as it was there that they trained for their triumphant 49-14 sortie against the Giants in 1937.

Coach Flaherty's chief concern as the game approaches is keeping his athletes whipped up to the high competitive pitch they attained against the Lions last Sunday. In a workout at Griffith Stadium yesterday there was evidence that all of his injured players would be available for Sunday's game.

Flaherty's two-team system worked with such success against the Lions that he will employ the same tactics against the Giants. Andy Farkas and Frank Filchock will team in the opening backfield, and will be replaced in the second and fourth periods by the Sammy Baugh-Dick Todd combination.

Giants Settle Down To Hard Workouts

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Nov. 28.—The New Giants today settled down to the task of preparing for the invasion of the Washington Redskins.

Coach Steve Owen held one of his longest drills of the season when the squad worked out in the morning and plans an extra long session every day this week. Special attention was given to the task of building a pass defense to stop the paralyzing thrusts of the Redskins' aces, Frank Filchock and Sammy Baugh, who between them have completed 103 out of 170 passes, an average of 60 per cent, unequalled in football history.

The Giants reported in much better physical condition than Coach Owen had hoped after the Dodger game.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

One year to the week after they saw their heroes limp off the Polo Grounds gridiron beaten by a 36-0 score, 15,000 Washingtonians are going back to New York for another Redskins-Giants game. That's faith for you.

POVICH

At that, there's reason why the Washington contingent should be strong on the scent of a Redskin triumph over the Giants on Sunday. The intervening year has produced a different sort of Redskin team. And the kindest thing that may be said about the Giants is that they apparently have not improved. In fact, developments have been such that the team that was licked by five touchdowns a year ago will take the field as the betting favorites.

Actually, though, it isn't the same Redskin team. It's a better Redskin team chiefly because it is two deep compared to the thin line of regulars Coach Flaherty was able to toss in against the Giants last year. Turk Edwards, rebounding from his poor season in 1938, is again an imposing figure in the line. Sammy Baugh, free from injuries this season, is again a dagger poised at the defense. Andy Farkas has learned how to play pro football, and there's Dick Todd who was confining his talents to the college gridirons last season.

Coaches Never Anticipate Victory Over Giants

The Giants have lost only one game this season—that to the Lions—but they have not been the impressive club they were last year. They have not been overpowering the opposition in the same manner as the Redskins. In fact, Coach Steve Owen admits that for the Redskin game he is abandoning the two-team tactics that the Giants used to such good advantage last year. Owen admits the Giants' reserves are something less than wonderful.

But National League coaches never anticipate a victory over the Giants. The New York club is always tough to beat. No club in the league, and that includes the Redskins, is as quick to capitalize on the breaks as the Giants. The New York team is more nearly of the stripe of the Redskins than any other club in the circuit and we mean in alertness and opportunism. There's usually a Giant around to pounce on an important fumble or pick up a loose ball.

The mass exodus of Washington fans is inspired not only by the revenge motif with that 36-0 pasting of last season in mind, but by the fond hope that the Redskins might stage another such show as transpired in 1937 when the score was 44-19. That unforgettable Redskin triumph set in motion the annual pilgrimages of Capital fans to the Polo Grounds.

Giants' Boss Made Strategic Error

Before that 1937 affair, Coach Owen, of the Giants, played directly into Ray Flaherty's hands and aided the Redskins' coach no little in Flaherty's efforts to whip his athletes up to a high competitive pitch. A week before the game, Owen had given to the press his selections for the league's all-star team and not a Redskin was included in his selections.

Flaherty made the most of that blunder by the Giants' coach. He flaunted the clippings before his Redskins, pasted Owen's selections on the dressing room wall. He asked his athletes bluntly if they were going to stand for that sort of treatment to swell guys like Cliff Battles and Sammy Baugh and Turk Edwards who deserved places on anybody's all-star team.

Flaherty made the matter a personal issue with the Redskins, and psychologist that he is, he had his athletes hopping mad by game-time. They were aflame with ambition when they took the field and in short order scored three touchdowns to take a safe 21-0 lead by half time.

Lucky for N. Y. Game Isn't Played on Paper

Owen last year did not make the same mistake. He maintained a discreet silence concerning his all-star selections and Flaherty had no medium with which to prod his Redskins into action. The revenge motif this time was on the side of the Giants and they laid waste to the Redskins.

Stastistically, the Giants can hardly be conceded much of a chance against the Redskins. The only edge the Giants appear to have is in interception of passes, having plucked 31 enemy heaves out of the air against 22 interceptions by the Redskins, and a slightly better average in punting.

But happily for the Giants the game will be played on grass, not on paper. The Giants' supporters are hardly bothered by the fact that the statistics favor the Redskins. In their ten games this season, the Giants were "out-statisticked" by the opposition, but the Giants lost only one of those games. The only statistics the New York club is interested in is the final score.

No club that boasts the likes of Tuffy Leemans, Ed Danowski, Ward Cuff and Ken Strong and Les Barnum in its backfield, operating behind the sort of a line the Giants have, figures to get licked except by a super team. That's what the Redskins will have to amount to next Sunday afternoon.

Peckinpaugh Quits as Pilot Of New Orleans

By the United Press.

New Orleans, Nov. 28.—Manager Roger Peckinpaugh of the New Orleans Pelicans has resigned after the most disastrous season in the club's history, Acting President A. B. Freeman of the New Orleans Baseball Co., Inc., announced tonight.

Freeman said Peckinpaugh gave no reason for his resignation, but he "imagined" it was because the Pelicans had severed relations with the Cleveland Indians after 13 years.

The Pelicans have made a tentative working agreement with the St.

PECKINPAUGH

Louis Cardinals which Freeman expected would be concluded at the minor league meeting at Cincinnati, Ohio, December 4-6.

Peckinpaugh was not available for comment.

Bought by the Washington Nationals from New York in 1922, Peckinpaugh was the initial member of the Peck-to-Harris-to-Judge double play combination which helped Washington to pennants in 1924 and 1925.

He went from Washington to the White Sox and later managed the Cleveland Indians until he was replaced by Walter Johnson. Then for three years he did publicity work for the American League.

Bees Buy Loane From Springfield; Hitless With Nats

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 28.—The Springfield Club of the Eastern Baseball League announced today Bob Loane, who hit for .306 last year, had been sold to the Boston Bees. His home is in Oakland, Calif.

Loane, a right-handed hitting outfielder, was given a brief tryout by Washington last summer and was returned to Springfield after a dismal showing. He went hitless in a two-week tryout.

Nile Kinnick Voted Heisman Grid Trophy

Iowan Polls 651 Votes to 405 for Michigan's Harman

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 28.—Nile Clarke Kinnick, jr., star halfback of the University of Iowa team, today was named as 1939 winner of the John W. Heisman Memorial Trophy, awarded each year by the Downtown Athletic Club to the outstanding college football player in the United States.

The selection, announced by Chairman Willard B. Prince, of the Heisman Trophy Committee, was made from the votes of sports writers and sports broadcasters throughout the United States.

Kinnick polled a total of 651 points in the voting; Tom Harmon, of Michigan, was second with 405, Paul Christman, of Missouri third with 391 and George Cafego, of Tennessee, fourth with 296.

Only these four received any great amount of support. In the Southwest, the voters made Big John Kimbrough, of Texas Aggies, their first choice over Christman with Kinnick and Cafego bringing up the rear while the Pacific Coast experts picked Kenny Washington, of U. C. L. A for third place behind Christman and Kinnick.

The trophy will be presented to the Iowa star December 6 at the Downtown A. C.

The Heisman trophy was given as a memorial to the former club athletic director and a famous football coach, who died in 1938. His last coaching position was at Rice Institute, where he rounded out a 36-year coaching carrer in 1927. Last year's winner was Davey O'Brien, of Texas Christian.

'Good Thing' Backfires for Contest Cheater

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Nov. 28.—William M. Ritchey was heading for a touchdown in picking football winners but a Federal mail fraud charge broke up the play and today he was free under $500 bond awaiting grand jury action.

United States Commissioner David J. Meyerhardt said the 24-year-old postoffice employe fooled the defense like this:

Mailed a pencil-addressed envelope to himself Friday. After games were played Saturday, filled in an entry blank, erased his name, put in that of the sponsoring company, marked the envelope "wrong box" and remailed it.

Ritchey won three consecutive weekly contests and was near the grand prize when, the commissioner said, sponsors became suspicious because the letter always arrived late, although postmarked before the Friday night deadline.

Joseph Gardella to Lead 1940 Harvard Eleven

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 28 (U.P.)—Halfback Joseph Gardella, 22, of Arlington, a junior, today was unanimously picked by 22 lettermen to captain the 1940 Harvard football team.

Gardella has twice earned his letter and started in the Yale game last season as a fullback, but was a substitute this year and failed to start against the Elis.

Trojans, Texas Aggies Lead Football Poll

By Bill Boni,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 28.—A wave of support as powerful as their own attack and as solid as their own defenses today sent the University of Southern California Trojans into a first-place tie with Texas A. and M. in the Associated Press football ranking poll.

The Trojans, leaders in the race for the Pacific Coast conference title and the right to play in the Rose Bowl, looked so impressive in beating Notre Dame last Saturday that they were boosted past Cornell and Tennessee. Thus a team that has played one tie—with Oregon in the first game of the season—was placed on even terms with one unbeaten-untied squad and ahead of two others.

All-Around Backing

In producing the first deadlock in the four years the poll has been taken, this seventh survey of the 1939 season found Cornell winning a plurality of the first-place votes. The Ithacans, who in routing Penn on Saturday finished their first all-winning campaign since 1923, were ranked first on 34 of 111 ballots.

But the Texas Aggies and the Trojans got better all-around backing for their total of 939 points each to Cornell's 909. The Aggies, who finish their schedule against Texas Thursday but already have won the Southwest Conference race, were ranked No. 1 on 27 ballots, second on 37 and third on 24. Southern California got 25 firsts, 33 seconds and 26 thirds.

With the Trojans and Cornell moving past them, Tennessee's Volunteers dropped down to fourth place, with 871 points. Fifth place, as last week, was held by undefeated, once-tied Tulane, with 670.

The biggest advance of the week was made by Duquesne. The Pittsburgh Dukes, a predominantly sophomore team that has come through eight games without defeat or tie under a new coach,

Armstrong, Ambers Bout Off Friday

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 28.—Performance No. 3 in the Lou Ambers-Henry Armstrong fistic follies, scheduled for Friday in Madison Square Garden, today became the battle of "the little men who weren't there."

It was to have been for the world welterweight championship. Now, it is definitely off for Friday; it is certain to be off for at least two weeks; it may be sidetracked for two months—and there's a possibility it may be shelved for keeps.

Four physicians examined Armstrong, the little Negro titleholder who won and then lost the lightweight championship in his two previous punch-parties with Ambers. In reports to the State athletic commission today one physician, Dr. William Walker, said he found nothing wrong with Hurricane Hank. The other three reported he was suffering from a heavy cold and sore throat. They recommended no fighting until he is in better condition.

Immediately the Friday fuss between the two was postponed. In

Missouri Likely Orange Bowl Choice

Bids Go Out After This Week's Games; 6 Teams Considered

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Nov. 28.—While other prospects remained in doubt, Missouri University stood out in unofficial discussion today as likely to gain an invitation to play New Year's Day in Miami's Orange Bowl.

There was no official assurance that the team would be asked by the bowl committee, as a half-dozen schools remained under consideration. The Missourians are openly receptive.

It was strongly indicated that, without waiting for the Rose or Sugar Bowl committees to pick their teams, the Orange Bowl selections might be made immediately after this week's games.

Georgia Tech had been considered a likely prospect, but the committee wanted to wait until after the Engineers got past the hurdle of their traditional rivals at the University of Georgia Saturday. Meanwhile, it was understood Coach Bill Alexander had set tomorrow as a deadline on an invitation.

The Orange Bowl committee wanted to see about Tennessee's prospects before making a decision, but felt the Rose Bowl selections might be delayed too long. The result may be that the Volunteers will not be considered further.

Clemson continued to be among the top prospects for a Southern representative in the game.

Cliff Bolton Goes To Buffalo; Tigers Get Pitcher Smith

Detroit, Nov. 28 (AP).—Gen. Mgr. Jack Zeller of the Detroit Tigers, announced today that three players had been turned over to Buffalo, of the International League, to complete the deal by which the Bengals obtained Pitcher Clay Smith.

BOLTON

The trio consists of Pitcher Joe Rogalski, Outfielder-First Baseman Leslie Fleming and Catcher Cliff Bolton.

Fleming came to Detroit last season from Beaumont, of the Texas League, and was later sent to Toledo, of the American Association. Rogalski had trials with the Tigers in 1937 and 1938 and was with Toledo most of last season.

Bolton retired from baseball when he disappeared from a bus hauling the Washington baseball team during the Florida training season three years ago. For several years a first-string catcher with the Nats, he retired to his farm in North Carolina.

Shu, Pritchard Lead in Poll for All-Virginia Grid Team

Six Elevens Share Honors In Voting

Cadet Backs Chosen Almost Uninimously; V. M. I., Virginia Also Land 2 Stars

By Barton Pattie,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 28.—Abisha (Bosh) Pritchard and Paul Shu, V. M. I. backs, led the 1939 Associated Press All-State football team balloting with an almost unanimous vote of the 25 Virginia coaches who participated in the annual poll.

Other berths on the honor squad were divided among the "Big Six" squads, Richmond, Virginia Tech, Virginia and Washington and Lee placing two men each, and William and Mary one.

Selected to run with Shu and Pritchard in the backfield were George (Buckeye) Warriner, of Tech, and Jim Gillette, of Virginia. Arthur Jones, Richmond's triple-threater, who made last year's all-State team as a sophomore, received a praiseworthy vote, but his total fell below that of the first quartet, it being a case of five fine backs with only four positions to be filled.

Wins in Walkaway

Bill Burge, Richmond's 6-foot 4-inch end who tallied 38 points for the Spiders, had a walkaway race for one flank spot, while Charlie Gondak, W. and M. 6-footer, was selected as his running mate.

Lee McLaughlin, Virginia, kept the tackle berth he won in 1938 by a safe margin, while Dick Boisseau, W. and L. captain, clinched the other tackle spot with the biggest vote received by any lineman. There was likewise little dispute over the guard spots the coaches agreeing that Woodrow (Goose) Gosney, Tech, and Jim (Pillbox) Lindsey, W. and L., turned in the season's best performances. Ed Merrick, Richmond, won the center post for the second time.

Only three members of the honor team are from other States, Gondak and Merrick from Pennsylvania and Gosney from West Virginia.

Pritchard is the only sophomore. Gondak, McLaughlin, Gosney and Warriner are juniors and have another year of competition.

Strongest Lineup Since 1934

The all-State team this year was selected from the strongest "Big Six" lineup since 1934, when W. and L. won the Southern Conference championship and Richmond had its one-defeat season.

The men chosen were standouts in victories over such outside teams as Vanderbilt, West Virginia, Furman, Maryland (twice), Davidson, Sewanee, Citadel, Chicago, Centre and Gettysburg, and ties with undefeated Rutgers and Southwestern.

The all-State backfield, averaging 181 pounds, takes its place behind a 191-pound line, which could hold its own in any league. Each of the backs are capable passers and kickers, to which add Pritchard's speed in the open field; Shu and Warriner's line-busting, and Gillette's elusive stepping, and you have a mighty dangerous offense.

Pritchard received high tribute for a sophomore, getting 48 votes (2 counted for first team, 1 for second team), which means that 23 of the 25 mentors and scouts who participated in the poll would like to have the Hopewell flash o ntheir first squad, while the other two held him in readiness as a No. 1 reserve.

Coaches Who Made Selections

Cooperating in the selection of the All-State team were the following coaches:

Glenn Thistlethwaite, Mac Pitt and J. S. Kellison, Richmond; W. E. Tilson, Bill Ellis and Jack Hennemier, W. and L.; Frank J. Murray, E. R. Slaughter and Art Guepe, Virginia; H. B. Redd, H. M. McEver and S. D. Tilson, V. P. I.; Carl Voyles, Rube McCray and Pop Werner, W. and M.; A. T. S. Hubert, Russ Cohen and Jimmy Walker, V. M. I.; Frank L. Summers and P. R. Bynum, Randolph-Macon; H. E. Smith and E. J. Bowyer, Hampden-Sydney; Gordon C. White and Buddy Hackman, Roanoke, and T. L. Porterfield, Emory and Henry.

Cherner Team Sets 2 Marks At Ice Palace

Team Set of 1,824, 680 Game Rolled for League, Season Highs

A new league record for team set, 1,824, and sesaon mark for team game, 680, were registered by Cherner Motors last night in the Chevy Chase Commercial League at the Ice Palace.

Ed Lambert rolled high game of the night, 167, and Dick Meyers' set of 417 was best, but the best Cherner could get out of competition with Equittable Life was a 2-out-of-3 decision.

ARCADIA

Margaret Miller, Trinity No. 1 bowler, rolled a scintillating season record game of 140 to top individual efforts in the Lutheran Ladies League. Best set went to Katherine Rockenbach, also of Trinity, with 325, and the team combined for high team game and set, 569 and 1,509. The latter score broke a season mark.

In the Railroad Retirement Board Ladies League, Capitol Limited came away with all honors. Ella Back rolled game of 122 and set of 322, and the team's aggregate was 504 and 1,339.

A. Solem, Atonement roller in the Lutheran Men's League, paced his team to high game, 619, and high set, 1,644, with an individual set of 397. Luther Place's Pietela won individual game honors with 154.

TAKOMA

Youngblood Hardware, with a clean sweep over Takoma Motor five, went into undisputed first place in the Takoma Duckpin Association and threw the second-place standings into a triple tie. The losers, Dome Oil and Takoma Funeral Home shared the runner-up spot. Johnny Burger held on to first place for high individual average with 110-24.

LUCKY STRIKE

Office five went into first place in the U. S. Housing Authority League when it swept its three games with Management. Richard Hausman paced the effort with a set of 360. J. L. Jenkins, of Accounts, rolled high individual game, 142.

Mary Flanagan, of the second-place St. Gabriel team in the Ladies Catholic League, rolled the best game of the night, 138, but had to be content with a tie with St. Francis' Naomi Farrall for high individual set, 333. St. Francis took the odd game from AllSaints B team.

Agriculture Forestry Service individual honors went to McBain, of Redwood, with 139 and 368. Fir team, behind Jenny Malcolm's 315, swept three games from Spruce.

Despite Bill Miner's high game and set, 138 and 342, Friendship lost a three-game decision to Milton Kronheim five in the Distributors League. Jerry Horak was best for the winners with a 339 set.

Naismith, Deceased Basketball Inventor, Liked Fencing Better

78-Year-Old Educator Opposed Most Rule Changes in His Peach Basket Pastime

By the Associated Press

Lawrence, Kans., Nov. 28.—Dr. James A. Naismith took two peach baskets 48 years ago, invented the game of basketball and started the construction of gymnasiums and field houses all over the world. But—

Personally, the 78-year-old educator, who died today, thought wrestling and fencing better exercise. In his later years, he was much more likely to be found watching athletes in those sports.

He opposed a majority of the basketball rules passed since 1925. If the decisions had been left to him, it is probable that not all of rugby's roughness would have been deleted from the game he designed.

He recalled that during the early days it was the final duty of the team's captain to open the dressing room window before leading the players onto the floor.

This was done so that if the customary after-game squabble became too violent both the players and officials would have on exit.

Naismith, an ordained minister, came to the University of Kansas in 1898 to lead chapel exercises and instruct physical education classes upon recommendation of Amos Alonzo Stagg, his classmate at the Springfield (Mass.) Y. M. C. A. College.

Naismith was the center on Stagg's first football team at Springfield in 1890 and the now famous gridiron tutor was away on a two-week tour of the Midwest when Naismith hung up the two baskets and created his own memorial.

Stagg, who still has stereopticon slides showing the oroginal baskets, recalled today in California that captains of the first two basketball teams to play in the new sport were S. Libby, now a real estate agent at Redlands, Calif., and Duncan Patton, living in retirement at Toronto, Calif.

Dr. Naismith's first wife, who died in 1937, played on the first girls' team before their marriage in 1893. Although he invented the game, Naismith had only modest success as a coach.

In contrast, the present Kansas coach, Dr. F. C. (Phog) Allen, has given the university one of the best basketball records in the Nation. The two men had many sincere but friendly arguments.

Especially did Naismith dislike the rule which requires the offensive team to speed down the floor 10 seconds after gaining possession of the ball. One day while Dr. Allen, whose cage teams have won 322 of 392 games played, was lecturing on the value of that regulation, Dr. Naismith sat at a nearby desk and authored a blast against it.

It was his theory the defensive team should come up the floor and try to take the ball away.

Ken Keltner Fans in Effort To Get Social Security Bonus

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Nov. 28.—Ken Keltner, Cleveland Indians' infielder, batted .000 today in the Social Security League.

He fanned in an effort to bat out a vacation bonus of $240 unemployment compensation insurance.

Keltner, who makes around $7,500 a year as Cleveland's third baseman, applied for State job insurance of $15 a week on the contention he is unemployed this winter.

KELTNER

The Ohio Unemployment Compensaton Bureau said no. It explained he was under a year's contract and so had not separated from his employment.

At his Milwaukee home Keltner said:

"I made the claim because I thought I had compensation coming. I am taking the claim out to save everybody a lot of trouble."

The State bureau, which had disallowed the claim prior to Keltner's announcement of withdrawal, said benefits also had been denied two players for Columbus of the American Association.

Applicants who satisfy the bureau they have no jobs but are willing to work are entitled to $15 a week up to a maximum of 16 weeks. Contributions to the fund some solely from employers, who forward 3 per cent of each worker's salary.

Naval Academy Head, Staff Officers Cheer Drill for Army

Admiral, 200 Others Join Pep Rally

Sing School Songs As Middies Practice; Larson Picks Starting Backs; Wood Reserve

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Nov. 28.—If there were any doubts that Navy fans wouldn't be 100 per cent behind their team Saturday when the Middies take the field lowly underdogs against Army, they must have been dispelled today when practically every officer here turned out to cheer the team at practice.

Heading the group of about 200 officers, whose turnout at practice was unprecedented, was Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent of the Naval Academy. Admiral Brown joined the others in singing school songs to the musical accompaniment of the band.

Another feature of this remarkable demonstration of school spirit was cheers by a group of youngsters, sons of officers who play football under the name of "Navy juniors."

Prepare Bonfire

Meanwhile midshipmen were busily engaged in gathering material for a huge bonfire to be lit tomorrow night when a pregame celebration will be held on Farragut Field. Every old chair which could be found in the precincts of Bancroft Hall—some 200 of them—were piled up. To this will be added all sorts of discarded materials of an inflammable nature.

Maj. Emory E. (Swede) Larson, head coach of football and his assistants, drove their charges through a spirited practice although no scrimage was held. The major portion of the drill was devoted to passing and punting and pass defense.

6 Yearlings Work In Army's Line-up

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 28 (AP).—Six sophomores worked in the Army first-string line-up today, indicating that Coach Bill Wood may send out the youngest team he has used all season to face Navy at Philadelphia Saturday in an effort to break the Cadets' record of not having won a major game this year.

The addition of Carl Helmstetter at right end brought the yearling total to six. Others are John Hatch, tailback; Bob Evans, blocking back; Ted Michel, tackle, and Jim Rooney and Ray Murphy, guards. All have been through several major tests and are expected to give good account of themselves. Harry Heffner, another yearling, alternated with Senior Jim Dubuisson at wingback in a large part of the workout.

Allowing no contact work, Wood confined today's drill to fundamentals and team assignments. While the kickers were trying punts and placements, Wood had the backs and ends handling the ball on passes while the line worked on blocking. An assignment drill followed, then the teams went indoors to wind up the short session with more passing.

Wood plans hard workouts tomorrow and Thursday before leaving for Philadelphia Thursday night.

Eagles Defeat N. Y. Rovers, 2-1

the Eagles' first point in 7:05, and then assisted Dewey to tally the second and what turned out to be the winning goal in 12:20. Covert, an exceptionally speedy skater, also was prominent on attack, being credited with two assists. It was his pass to Kuntz that was relayed to Dewey for the decisive point.

The Rovers, completely shackled by leech-like guarding during the first two periods, came back with a rush in the third, scored in 9:05 and nearly put in a tying shot on several other occasions. Their lone point came on a neat double-pass play, Murdoc McKay to Walter Rimstad to Albert Collings, who feinted Goalie Lee out of position and sent in a scorcher. Lee partially blocked the rifle-like shot but it slipped through his padding.

Less than a minute later the Rovers made their final serious bid to deadlock the count but Lee made a splendid stop of a hot shot from Frank Boucher. The flyin puck bounded hard against Lee's chest and he fell flat on his face, but at the same time smothered the puck and prevented any rebound shooting.

Tommy Hitchcock Given 18th 10-Goal Ranking Since 1920

Veteran Polo Star One of Only Three Honored by National Association

New York, Nov. 28.—The fabulous career of Thomas Hitchcock, jr., who was an established polo player while Joe Louis, Sam Snead and Joe DiMaggio still sported three-cornered pants, was stretched past another milestone tonight when the stocky veteran drew a perfect 10-goal rating for 1940.

Only two other players were endowed similarly in rankings announced by the United States Polo Association for the next season. They were Stewart B. Iglehart and Cecil Smith, who were ranked at 10 goals with Hitchcock as well during 1939. The fourth of the four horsemen this year, Michael Phipps, was dropped one goal to nine.

Hitchcock

The association added 134 new names to the roster and changed the rankings of 210 established players. The most prominent men affected were:

Winston F. C. Guest, raised from 7 goals to 9; Erie Tyrrell-Martin, raised from 8 to 9; Robert Skene, raised from 7 to 9; Elbridge T. Gerry, raised from 7to 8; Robert L. Gerry, jr., raised from 6 to 7; George Oliver, raised from 6 to 7; Terence Preece, raised from 6 to 7.

All major changes except those of Oliver and Preece were based on play in the International Cup series between the United States and Great Britain here last summer, and the National Open tournament. Hitchcock's perfect ranking came as a minor surprise as the dean of America's horsemen had been quoted as saying that 1939 would be his last active season.

The 1940 rankings assured Hitchcock of a record unapproached in polo. He first was given a high-goal position in 1920, when he drew a handicap of 7. Since then he has won the 10-goal classification 18 times in 20 years, or more than any man in history.

The perfect ranking was the fourth for Smith in ten years of competition and the fourth for Iglehart over the same period. Phipps and Elmer Boeseke, jr., are the only other Americans to have been similarly honored since 1928.

Boston Bruins Beat Leafs, 6-2, Without Shore

By the Associated Press

Boston, Nov. 28.—As if to prove their greatness without Eddie Shore, their super-defense star, the Boston Bruins rallied for a mighty effort that gave them a 6-2 victory over the speedy Toronto Maple Leafs tonight, before 12,000 at the Boston Garden.

Shore, under contract to play in all of the Bruins' home games after December 15, and before in case of an emergency, disagreed with the Bruins' management that his presence was necessary tonight because of Jack Crawford's injury and remained in Springfield to direct his International-American hockey team against the Philadelphia Ramblers.

The Bruins appeared determined to outdo themselves without him and they traveled at a fast pace from start to finish while keeping Turk Broda, the rival goalie, under terrific pressure.

N. Y. Rangers Take 4-1 Edge On Red Wings

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—The New York Rangers found their scoring touch tonight and defeated Detroit Red Wings, 4-1, in a National Hockey League game to chalk up their second win of the season.

A slim crowd of 8,358 saw the Rangers score once each in the first and second period, and twice in the third to end a scoring famine that had left them will down the league standing. Tonight's victory put them in a three-way tie with Boston and Chicago for fourth place. The Red Wings still held to the third slot.

Neil Colville put the Rangers in the lead after five minutes of play and Bryan Hextall added another early in the second period before Don Deacon replied for Detroit on a play setup by Sid Howe and Carl Liscombe.

Landis Faces Swann in A.A.U. Feature

Proteges of Furr, Farrell Highlight Friday Night Show

It will be college coaching against professional coaching Friday night, when Ray Landis, protege of Phil Furr, meets Kenny Swann, coached by Al Farrell, former Maryland University heavyweight, at Turner's arena in the District A. A. U.'s 135-pound novice class quarter-final match.

Landis, who fights much the same way as his coach, Furr, now in the midst of a professional comeback, scored an impressive victory over Dick Shelton last October on the Library for the Blind amateur show in Griffith Stadium and defeated George Stimyer last week in the arena.

Farrell, one of the District's outstanding exponents of amateur boxing, reached the semifinals in the Southern Conference tourney when he was an undergraduate at Maryland four years ago and has made a polished fighter out of Swann, who knocked out Paul Williams, of Baltimore, in the first round last week.

Their bout will highlight the night's program which marks the passing of the halfway mark in the A. A. U. tourney.

Another bout sharing the main interest will be that between William Scott, of Police Boys Club No. 5, and Joe Pavone in the 126-pound division. Scott is substituting for Reds Vernon, who is turning Thespian for the night to take part in his high school play.

It was the first attempt at prognostication for Bradbury and young Hunter, while Miss Schreiner and her brother have entered four of the previous contests.

Tickets to the championship game in New York were put in the mails last night.

Three other contestants, with 15 winners named, missed winning prizes by a hair's breadth and at least deserve honorable mention. They are:

Joe J. Farley, of 15 West Pall Mall street, Winchester, Va., and Mrs. Sophia E. Fowler, of 303 Eleventh street northeast, each of whom named only one actual score, and Mrs. Muriel N. Heflin, of 3503 Fifteenth street south, Arlington, Va., who failed to get any of the actual scores.

Decision of the judges is final.

Texas Aggies, Trojans Lead In Grid Poll

Cornell 30 Points Behind in Associated Press Survey

Buff Donelli, jumped back into the first ten at sixth place and, if they can get by their final obstacle, Detroit, on Saturday, should have a top-ten berth when the final returns are in.

In addition to Texas A. & M., two other conference leaders and a runner-up made the grade. Duke's Blue Devils, one-point losers to Pitt, finished their Southern Conference schedule unbeaten and tied with Clemson for first place. Duke got seventh place and Clemson fourteenth. Missouri, the Big Six winner, placed eighth, and Iowa, nosed out by Ohio State in the Big Ten race, finished three levels above the Buckeyes in the rankings in taking ninth. Tenth place for the week went to Holy Cross, which plays its last game against Boston College Saturday.

With Cornell, Duke, Missouri and Iowa already through for this year, all of the few games left for the Big Tenners will be major ones. Texas A. & M.-Texas and Tennessee-Kentucky will be two of Thursday's headliners, with Southern California - Washington, Tulane - Louisiana State, Duquesne-Detroit and Holy Cross-Boston College providing a major share of Saturday's fireworks.

Beyond that, Tennessee and Southern California each will have one more to play—the Vols with Auburn, a team that appears to have got going after a slow start, and Southern California with U. C. L. A., its Los Angeles neighbor and lone remaining rival for West Coast honors. Both contests are scheduled for December 9.

Standing of the teams (points figured on 10-9-8, etc., basis, first-place votes in parentheses):

Team.	Points.
1—Tie between Texas A. and M. (27) and Southern California (25)	939
3—Cornell (34)	909
4—Tennessee (18)	871
5—Tulane (4)	670
6—Duquesne	334
7—Duke (2)	331
8—Missouri	277
9—Iowa	129
1 —Holy Cross	123

Second ten—11, Notre Dame, 105; 12, Ohio State, 95; 13, U. C. L. A., 75½; 14, Clemson (1), 46; 15, Michigan, 40½; 16, North Carolina, 40; 17, Georgetown, 33; 18, Nebraska, 30; 19, San Jose (Calif.) State, 29; 20, Santa Clara, 22.

Also ran—Georgia Tech, 19; Boston College and Princeton, 15 each; Fordham, 12; Oregon State, 9; Penn State, 4; Oklahoma, 2; Kentucky and Syracuse, 1 each.

Hank Armstrong, Ambers Bout Off

its place, Promoter Mike Jacobs inserted a ten-round battle between Allie Stolz, of Newark, N. J., a fast-rising lightweight contender, and New York's Petey Scalzo, ranking featherweight challenger who already holds a knockout victory over Joey Archibald, the 127-pound champion.

After announcing this new slugfest, which originally had been planned for December 22, Promoter Mike went into a huddle with Al Weill, Ambers' manager, ar Eddie Mead, Armstrong's rotund pilot.

Weill insisted the fight be put on in two weeks; Mike promptly offered a December 15 date, and Mead, just as promptly, turned it down on the ground his fighter couldn't be in shape. At the same time he said he hadn't made up his mind about going through with a fight between Armstrong and Jimmy Garrison in Cleveland December 11.

Seconds Carried On

Mead then countered with a request for a January date for the Ambers bout; Mike suggested the 24th, and Weill came back with a snappy "No!"

"Lou has been training for Armstrong for a month," Weill pointed out. "He wants to go home (to Herkimer, N. Y.) for the Christmas and New Year season. If he does, he can't be back in top condition by January 24. If you want the fight after the first of the year, make it late in January. Frankly, I'm so disgusted with all this merry-go-round that I'd just as soon forget the whole thing."

N. B. A. Won't Recognize Bout—If It Is Staged

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP).—The National Boxing Association announced today it would not recognize as a title bout the scheduled Henry Armstrong-Lou Ambers fight.

Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, president of the N. B. A., said the association at its September convention unanimously voted to recognize as title bouts only contests between a champion and one of the three leading contenders in his own weight class.

Miller pointed out that Armstrong is the welterweight champion and Ambers the lightweight title holder.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 28.—Unless some gifted promoter can arrange a post-season game between the University of Chicago and Whiffletree Teachers, the undisputed futility championship will be decided next Saturday at Philadelphia when what often looks like the two worst teams in the country battle to decide which is the worst.

CONSIDINE

We feel we are betraying no secret when we tell you that the teams are Army and Navy. Nor are we breaking any particular trust when we reveal that we are going to cover the trial when Frank Murphy indicts both academies for charging $4.40 and $5.50 to see what not even the wildest enthusiast has dared to predict will be a football game.

The public is so indignant over this blatant profiteering that only 102,000 persons will attend the game, and the gate will come to only $500,000. Scalpers are already getting $10 a copy for tickets along the curbs in Upper Darby, with free pepper-pot. Hundreds will be crushed in and around the Municipal Stadium, fighting to get at least one brief glimpse of this mighty survival of the unfittest.

Aerial Defense Like Revolutionary Blunderbuss

We can see those teams now, locked in a titanic contest of left-footedness, lame-brained technique and general inefficiency. Hark, to the roar of the Navy halfback, running the wrong way. List to the rumble of those Army fumbles. See the weighty coaching staffs, sticking pins in their maps and cogitating on whether to pull that daring new play the Statue of Liberty.

Somehow we think old Navy will come through and win incontestible possession of the inadequacy crown. Faced with the appalling handicap of a 3-2 lead, in the fading seconds, we seem to see Navy's secondary rising up in all their enthusiastic ineptitude and failing to knock down a wobbly Army pass—just in time to lose the game.

Navy has the same fine aerial defense which a revolutionary blunderbuss would afford against a 4-motored bomber. This weakness, if not superseded by some hitherto unrevealed Navy blundering, will be the thing that gives the Annapolis boys the coveted edge in this deathless skirmish for the cellar.

Numberous Secret Drills . . . for What?

When we were a fun-loving child of 27 or 28 we used to stand for hours outside the enclosed field at Annapolis where Navy was holding a secret practice. And we remember how we used to go back to the office and write darkly of the black magic which Navy would pull out of its hat on the day of the super spectacle.

Other young men simultaneously must have stood outside Army's secret practice field, trying to peer through a crack and wondering whether it was worth risking death at the hands of a brass-hat military tribunal. After that there would be ponderous interviews with the Navy or the Army coach, with a big, pompous graduate manager doing most of the talking and turning on and off the interview like a spigot. The graduate manager was always a former great, and resentful if you forgot it.

And then on the day of the game, we would be so carried away by the thrilling hoof-beats of the marching cadets and midshipmen, and the lilt of those grand old tunes "Anchors Aweigh" and "On Brave Old Army Team," that we always forgot the pain of those pre-game secret practices and interviews. And it never occurred to us, until a few minutes ago, that the boys might have been practicing new fumbles, new ways to interfere with a pass receiver, new ways to miss a tackle, new ways to stumble in the clear, and new ways to call the wrong play.

You Can't Beat "Floor Show" Before Game

It's no crime to be as bad as Army and Navy are this year. After all, Army beat Ursinus and Furman and Navy won its first two games, against William and Mary and Virginia. Army lost to Notre Dame by only two touchdowns and Navy lost to the Irish by one. But these scores, of course, don't count. If the Irish ran up a big score on either of these money-making foes (and took the edge off their next year's games) Layden would be justified in suing the touchdown scoring culprits.

But you'd be appalled or amused at the grim seriousness with which these two comic valentine teams are preparing for this football counterpart of September 9 game between the Browns and the Athletics. This week alone there will be more secret practices than the Redskins, Packers, Tennessee, Cornell or Southern Cal will have in a full season. An air of expectancy, something akin to the pregnant hush of a zero hour, will come over the rival football camps, and you'd get the gloves of any brigadier general across your chops if you suggested out loud that the schools were taking $4.40 and $5.50 under false pretenses.

However, the futile, feverish business will be fought out before a magnificent crowd, and a "gate" that will cause good teams to howl with anguish. After all, the football that will be on tap may be a lot of sweaty nonsense—but you can't beat that floor show they give you with that punk fare.

Tempe State Gets Sun Bowl Bid; Clemson Sought

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 29 (AP).—Arizona State College of Tempe was selected today as host team in the New Year's Sun Bowl football game.

Sun Bowl officials are looking to the South for a second team, but also are considering several Western schools, including San Jose State.

Clemson, which wound up sharing the top of the Southern Conference, was regarded favorably, although there was some doubt the match could be made.

Huntsman Turner Offers Ducks to Wrestle Winner

Eight ducks—that's the reward Promoter Joe Turner is holding out for the winner of the match between groan artists Able Coleman and Joe Cox tomorrow night in his Fourteenth and W street arena.

Although he doubtless would reap more action if he offered eight bucks—meaning dollars—Turner has been on an extended hunting trip and figures to have an excess of duck come time for the Cox-Coleman rumba and waltzing show.

The supporting roles at tomorrow's business, beginning at 8:30 p. m., will be filled by Jack Hader against Bob Wagner, Alan Eustace against Mark Hoesly, George Lenihan against Bibber McCoy and Gus Sonnenberg versus Rudy Strongberg.

Ace Call Wins St. Inigoes Purse at Bowie Track, Pays $24.50

Conde Rico, The Favorite, Runs Second

Montsin Takes Third In Field of Eight; Daily Double Pays Backers $110.40

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 28.—Followers of the C. C. C. Stable and Trainer H. Guy Bedwell, veteran Maryland conditioner, "got well" on the same day. The Baltimore-owned barn has not been very successful at the meeting here and Bedwell has been ill. Today, Ace Call, carrying the white and green colors, turned in a smashing effort to win the St. Inigoes Purse, featuring the Tuesday program a few hours after Bedwell was discharged from Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

Pays $24.50 Mutuel

It was to the tune of a $24.50 mutuel that Ace Call scored. The gelded son of Trace Call and Knights Gal finished a length and a half in advance of Isadore Bieber's Conde Rico, the heavily played favorite in a field of eight. Third money went to Harry Friedberg's Montsin, six lengths away from second position.

The chief battle was between the first and second leading trainers of the year. Hirsch Jacobs, tops among the conditioners, saddled Conde Rico. Jackey H. Linndberg rode Ace Call around the mile and a sixteenth course in a capable 1:48 1-5 over a fast track and before some 7,000 fans.

The race was a "catch ace call" affair from start to finish. Lindberg, who did not fly the Atlantic took the A. C. C. gelding to the front at the first turn. Rex Flag tried to keep up with him and fell by the wayside. Then Conde Rico went up. Jockey Watson held the South American horse in second place to the stretch and then put him to a drive. He came up to all but take the lead. However, Ace Call had something left and went on to be drawing out at the finish.

Outclasses Opposition

In the secondary feature, the Carvel Hall Handicap, Liberty Flight, owned by W. F. Mannagh outclassed his opposition. Carryingn 122 pounds and with Apprentice Mike Caffarella, seeking his fifteenth victory, in the saddle, the Liberty Limited gelding galloped home six lengths ahead of his nearest opposition, Bill Farnsworth. No Sir was third in the field of eight going 6 furlongs. Liberty Flight paid $5.60.

The pay-off in the daily double was $110.40. H. Neusteter's Lonely Road paying $12 set the stage for the pay-off by winning the first race from Allmar an Eight Rolls. The second race went to Fair Elise which paid $15 in her own right. She brought Caffarella winner No. 14 and defeated, among others, Witheraway and Sweepden.

LONELY ROAD, slow to begin, improved position luckily on inside, came with good energy through stretch under hrad drive and was up to hold ALLMAR safe. ALLMAR forced to front at first turn, could not draw clear of EIGHT ROLLS until midstretch and was weakening when caught. EIGHT ROLLS forced pace and weakened. WHITE HOPE shuffled back at first turn, improved position gradually and came full of run at close. HIGH LANCE had good speed for half.

FAIR ELISE, allowed to settle into stride and not hurried during first half mile, came to contention boldly when placed to drive and won going away in easy fashion. WHITHERAWAY forced pace of SWEEPDEN, took command approaching stretch and held on well, but was no match for winner. WAKITA was rated while close up to stretch and weakened slightly. MISS PONNE was well placed for half and faltered.

Daily Double, LONELY ROAD and FAIR ELISE, Paid $110.40.

GAYOVA, slow to get under way and sent wide for racing room, responded gamely to intermittent punishment and closed with bold rush to be up in final stride. TRUE KNIGHTESS went into command approaching stretch, but could not resist winner while under punishment at close. RAISE UP set early pace and held on willingly in final test. INNUENDO closed gamely, but was held safe.

LIBERTY FLIGHT, off well back, was rushed to top going to turn, drew out gradually and won with speed in reserve. BILL FARNSWORTH, keen forward factor from start, was held safe by winner, but was best of others. NO SIR, off slowly, improved position on inside and closed gamely. MILK PUNCH, steadied while within striking distance for half, went to outside for racing room and took command with bold rush to hold away thereafter under drive. OVERSIGHT, slow to begin, worked way to contention on inside and closed full of run. CISNEROS, allowed to settle into best stride, gained ground steadily after opening quarter and closed gamely. He pulled up very lame. CONVILLE went close up in early stages, took lead approaching half pole and was weakened when displaced.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won galloping; place driving. Went to post 4:36. Off at once. ITALIAN HARRY came with good energy at close.

Selections at Bowie

Deal Al: Well, the big horse, Dunlad, goes today. We ain't scared of nothing but Sunny Rose, Impressionist, Maryland Maid, Fleet Heels, Ribroast, Close Kin, Hoffberg, Sagacious, Blacant, Lochaline, Sun High, He Goes, Drosera, Gossip Time, Circus Lights, Little Harpist and Winter Money. If you like him, bet him, because we are really trying. I went around to see Dunlad with Trainer Bob Cook after stopping by Aaron's store over in the town of Bowie to get him an apple. Darn'd if he would east the apple. Probably wants cavier, but he won't get it until he wins a purse or two. I stayed long enough to lose 40 cents playing rummy with the stable boys. That's the ecnod bet I have lost on my stable. They tell me that Jockey Don Meade was hit in the eye by a stone, but it had four knuckles tied on it. Anyway, it was all in good fun. Guy Bedwell has recovered from his recent illness and reported at the track yesterday. Trainer J. P. Jones shipped Mrs. Louise Viau's Rex Flag and other horses back to the farm at Charlottesville, Va., late yesterday. Louis Feustel, acting for Mrs. E. G. Lewis, sold the 2-year-old Noon Step to the Railroad Stable, which will take him to Charles Town. Speaking of the West Virginia track, Racing Secretary Fred Burton has opened his office up there. Gregg Johnson will take entries here Saturday for Monday's racing at Charles Town. Jockey Bobby Dotter leaves for California at the conclusion of the meeting. Jockey Johnny Gilbert has hung up his tack temporarily and will depart for the West Coast any day now. Many horsemen who had planned to ship to Florida are reconsidering because California will use either the Puett gate or a similar starting device. Florida will use the Bahr gate. R. A. Moore's Clodion will go to the West Coast for this reason. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Pimlico Queen, with several races under her belt at Pimlico and Laurel, should be primed for her best effort in today's opener. Her debut on this track this spring was impressive. Good Reception raced well behind Domkin and others at Havre and will be the contender if fit. Bid Your Time deserves consideration.

Second race—Close Kin was a hot favorite in New York last outing racing against similar competition. He is lightly weighted for this encounter and with the popular Caffarella riding figures to win. He Goes promises to become a sharp contender if he runs back to some of his trials over this strip. Dunlad might threaten.

Third race—Busy Wire looked good when he took the measure of Clapair making his first start. This Questionnaire colt may have a little class, at least enough to whip this sort. Blablah has speed to keep out of trouble and figures next in line. Dulie receives a good figure.

Fourth race—Syracuse has encountered ill luck in his two Bowie races. Previous efforts at Pimlico were good and he is accorded a slight edge in this field. Hadnogal has whipped the top horse in his last two heats and will be the one to beat today. Royal Teddy is not outclassed and could surprise.

Fifth race—True Call drew considerable betting support in the Endurance Handicap and ran an even race to finish sixth to Felon. Competition is not so keen here and she should register. Rawson is capable of retaliating the recent defeat handed out by Pass Out last week and they figure to finish in that order.

Sixth race—Count Tetrarch won two heats at this distance then finished second to Charming Herod in his most recent effort. He is more cheaply placed in this event. Golden Vein displayed his superiority over a field of cheaper grade platers last start and looms as the contender.

Seventh race—Birdlea has been victorious in his last two starts, has demonstrated his liking for this track, and meets a caliber of horses he is capable of whipping. He should be hard to beat. Bar Play placed third to Charming Herod early in the meeting, but his time was not good. Pete Wendling is dangerous.

Best bet—Birdlea.

Ken Overlin On Arena Card Monday

High-Ranking Middle Meets Baba Argovan In 8-Round Feature

Ken Overlin, one of the National Boxing Association's top-ranked middleweights, will meet Baba Argovan, former Pennsylvania coal miner, in the eight-round feature match Monday night at Turner's Arena, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn announced yesterday.

In Overlin, Washington fans will see the smoothest fighting machine to set foot in the local ring since the stars of the indoor season—barring, possibly, only Pat Comiskey, the young heavyweight hope, who meets Maynard Daniels tomorrow night in Baltimore.

His latest fistic venture was a ten-round decision over the popular Ben Brown, ranking Atlanta fighter, in Miami Monday night.

Born in Decatur, Ill., Overlin has been making this sector his headquarters lately. He has the distinction of a ten-round victory over the former New York and California middleweight champion, Fred Apostoli, and the memory of a four-round knockout he suffered at the hands of Freddie Steele, one-time middleweight champion, in 1937.

Argovan is a club fighter of sorts who has battled in New York's Madison Square Garden, where he lost to Washington's foremost contender for middleweight honors, Georgie Abrams.

Metropolis Building Opens New Offices

Reception Tonight Will Mark Association's 73d Anniversary

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Marking 73 years of successful achievement, Metropolis Building Association announces the opening of its new office at Second street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Officers and directors of the association will welcome shareholders and other guests this evening from 7 to 10 o'clock, when the remodeled quarters of the institution will be formally opened to the public.

Completed at a cost of more than $50,000, the enlarged office is the latest in modern designing. The floor is of pink Tennessee marble, counters and office trimmings being in bronze. Metal Venetian blinds on the many windows add to the attractiveness of the interior, the harmonizing colors of the walls and ceiling being brought into pleasing relief by the new indirect lighting system.

All equipment is in mahogany, including the fixtures in the board room, which occupies space directly under the main banking room. Two large vaults have been added to protect the records and files of the organization. One of the most striking additions to the renovated quarters are the new outside doors. Of massive bronze, they are handsomely decorated and enhance the appearance of the building. Inclusion of the adjoining building is expected to give the association ample space to accommodate future expansion.

Landmark in Southeast

Metropolis Building Association long a landmark in southeast Washington, was established in 1866. During the 73 years of its existence it has assisted in the development of not only the section of the city in which it is located, but the District of Columbia as a whole. Resources are approximately $6,000,000.

Officers and directors are: Harry G. Wilson, president; John Scrivener, vice president; Rudolph W. Santelmann, secretary; Henry E. Tripp, treasurer; George M. Seibert, William A. Simpson, Henry N. Wiegand, Martin T. Wiegand, Arthur Seagren and Harry H. Wilson.

U. S. Savings at Peak

Long-term savings of the American people reached an all-time peak at the end of 1938 when they totaled $31,698,000,000 and topped the 1937 figure by $2,183,000,000, according to the report of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for the fiscal year 1939.

Accumulated savings reported for the end of 1938—representing approximately 115,000,000 accounts—surpassed by $6,740,000,000 the amount reported for 1929, when prosperity was most prevalent. This increase, arising during almost a decade of curtailed business activity, shows that people are far more concerned with providing for future security than formerly.

Included in the statistics are postal savings, United States savings bonds, savings deposits in commercial banks, 2½ per cent postal savings bonds, and savings in life insurance companies, mutual savings banks, and savings, building and loan associations.

Annual increases from 1934 to 1938 have more than offset the depression losses in the three preceding years, the report declares. Largest annual increment of savings in this recovery period occurred in 1937. During 1938, the growth was somewhat smaller, reflecting the decline in business activity, and in national income in the latter half of 1937 and the first half of 1938.

To a large extent, these savings represent the accumulated resources of middle and lower income groups. With a cash value of $780, the amount of the average savings and loan association account exceeded most other types of long-term savings. The average savings account in national banks was $421, while $300 was the average cash value of life insurance policies, the report explains.

Hecht, Lansburgh To Give Employes Christmas Bonus

More than $12,000 in Christmas bonuses will be distributed to employes of the Hecht Co. during the current holiday season, Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager, said yesterday.

Employes who have been with the organization for six months or more will receive Christmas bonuses, based on their length of service. Thus more than 92 per cent of the regular employes will participate.

Hundreds of temporary employes, called in during the holiday season, will share in special bonus arrangements, Mr. Dulcan said. He pointed out that the distribution of special rewards at Christmastime was in line with the store's policy to recognize special effort, and to encourage all workers to build permanent places for themselves in the store-family.

Lansburgh Program

Lansburgh & Bro. department store announces bonuses ranging from $2 to $15. About 1,700 employes are included, according to Ralph L. Goldsmith, general manager.

Contingent employes on the pay roll from November 24 and up to December 15 will receive $2. The bonuses will be distributed on December 15.

In addition Lansburgh's announces the distribution of Christmas savings checks on December 1 to those employes who participate in this method of saving through the store. The Christmas savings will amount to about $35,000.

Financing, Export Handicaps Beset Aircraft Firms

Cleveland, Nov. 28.—Boom or no boom, all is not rosy with the aircraft industry, Steel Magazine reports in an exclusive article today. Builders are beset with financing difficulties and obstacles in exporting, while haunted anew by the spectre of stringent Government control.

Funds urgently needed for plant expansions and new equipment in some cases are not readily forthcoming from private capital. Although planemakers' earnings outlook is the best in their history, new capital is moving in with caution. Profits on Federal contracts are restricted by statute, and there is ever present the possiblity of high taxes on "war profits." That capacity may subsequently prove excessive also causes concern.

A New Deal group in Washington is believed anxious to see the aircraft industry nationalized for defense reasons. Already urging more regulation by the Administration, they propose the Government advance funds for additional production facilities either by loan or subsidy. Certain it is that fuel will be added to the fire they are kindling if private capital is not adequate.

Bank of Montreal Joins Billionaire Class

Montreal, Nov. 28.—Total assets of the Bank of Montreal at the end of its fiscal year on October 31 amounted to $1,025,508,367, the highest level in the bank's history and a new high mark for Canadian banking, according to the 122d annual statement of the bank today. The assets represented an increase of $151,252,539 for the year.

The year's profits of $3,462,446 showed an increase of $64,056 over the previous year and were equivalent to 4.54 per cent, on capital and undivided profits. Deposits on October 31 totaled $014,909,050, an increase for the year of 151,752,105.

Syndicate Buys Adams Bldg., Historic Site

Home of John Quincy Adams Also Was Occupied by Madison

Webb & Knapp, Inc., of New York, representing a syndicate, have purchased the Adams Building at 1333 F street northwest, in what is considered the most intensive retail zone in the District.

The plot is improved with a seven-story fireproof building, having a frontage of 55 feet on F street by a depth of 113 feet irregular. The building is occupied by a number of tenants who have retained for their use entire floors. Bond Clothing Store and Regal Shoe Store occupy the ground and second floors. Among upper floor tenants are Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., Boyd Business School, the law firm of O'Brien & Berman and the Bureau of Public Roads.

The property was owned by the Adams Building Trust, headed by Robert A. Nordblom, sole surviving trustee. In July, 1939, the Mutual Life Insurance Co. made a 10-year first mortgage in the amount of $450,000. The land and building are assessed for the current year at $548,235. It is understood that the property rents for approximately $80,000 per annum.

Home of Two Presidents

For more than 125 years 1333 F street northwest has been associated with the name Adams. The home of John Quincy Adams was located on this site. The Adams' F street residence was historic as having been temporarily occupied by President Madison after the burning of the White House in 1814. On January 8, 1824, when John Quincy Adams was Secretary of State, there was held there the famous Adams Ball in celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of New Orleans.

Andrew Jackson himself attended the Adams Ball, together with about 1,000 guests. Perhaps no ball ever held in Washington was more celebrated or more historic than the Adams Ball in honor of Andrew Jackson at 1333 F street.

The Adams home remained intact for many years. About 1880 it was removed to make way for an ornamental iron front building which was known for many years as "The Adams Building."

Webb & Knapp, Inc., were represented in the purchase by Parker & Wyatt, of Washington, and the firm of Hausserman, Davidson & Shattuck, of Boston, represented the seller. Feist & Felst, Inc., were the brokers in the transaction.

The department also said gold deposited under earmark by foreign governments and central banks in the Federal Reserve Banks declined last week—the seven days ended November 22—by $9,304,033, leaving $973,259,753 still on deposit.

Stocks Get Nowhere in Dull Trading; New Treasury Offering Lifts Debt To 42 Millions but U. S. Bonds Advance

New York, Nov. 28.—The Government bond market was firm to higher today on the Treasury's announcement of new financing and the stock market acted quietly in accordance with the rules and regulations of Sir Edmond Hoyle in that it got nowhere except slightly lower on restricted trading. The composite average showed the unsensational loss of 0.11 point, which is in keeping with the best practices of these days of enlightened economy and the volume on the big board was 621,460 shares, or enough to pay half a living wage to the thousands who work in Wall Street.

The financial district was far more interested in the major problems of Government financing than in the fluctuations of markets which have become so meaningless in the last few weeks. The announcement of the first major piece of cash financing by the Federal Government in nearly a year centered attention again on the condition of our national fiscal affairs and the sight was an unpleasant one.

The Treasury's offering of $500,000,000 in new 2 per cent bonds brings the direct national debt to $42,000,000,000, or within $3,000,000,000 of the statutory debt limit, even by the Administration's bookkeeping system. Actually the debt has already gone far above the limit, by other accepted methods. By that we mean the methods used by you and me in keeping our household accounts, by the cities and States in keeping their accounts and by every business organization in keeping theirs.

One Dollar Same as Another

The principle that governs all of us, with the single exception of the Federal Government, is that when we spend a dollar we must find that dollar somewhere and nothing is gained by telling ourselves than any particular dollar is different from any other dollar. It does no good to say that we are paying the milkman out of our regular budget but that the electric light man will have to get his out of an emergency budget, which is just one of those things which we refuse to take into consideration.

Faced with a statutory limit to the public debt of $45,000,000,000, the Federal Government already has exceeded that by guaranteeing an additional $5,500,000,000 of debt over and above the direct obligation of $42,000,000,000. Any child knows that if you guarantee a debt, that debt becomes yours until it is paid off. But not so with the enlightened bookkeeping of the Federal Government.

Now comes the President today with a new twist of bookkeeping. The national defense budget is to be divided into two parts, called A and B, the former covering expenditures which would have been made anyway even without a European war and the second covering extra items considered essential because of the war. No matter how thin you slice it and no matter what letters you file it away under, it is all money out of you and me and it goes on to the good old national debt. The President can work his way down to the letter Z and still it will be money spent which you and I must meet. There is no use trying to fool ourselves by bookkeeping.

After the Limit?

The question arises as to just what the Administration will do when it gets to the statutory limit. At the rate it is going, it will be within a paltry $500,000,000 of that figure on June 30, the end of the present fiscal year. (Actually it is already above it, but we shall forget for the time being the guaranteed debt.) Of course, it has authority under the Thomas amendment to issue $3,000,000,000 in green backs. And unquestionably it is counting upon Congress increasing the statutory limit. But the whole question is brought to the fore now by the new financing and by the President's innovation in bookkeeping, which would get a credit rating of Z if any industrial company applied it to its own books.

Fluctuations in stocks today were unimportant. There was an attempt to rally the list under leadership of the steels, but there was no follow through to the buying. Aviations were under pressure and the coppers drifted lower. Curtiss-Wright again was the most active stock and closed off a minoor fraction. Bethlehem lost more than a point, but most of the speculative leaders held within a narrow range.

Treasury Bonds Higher

United States Treasury securities moved upward in the listed bond market today, in reflection of brisk business and advancing levels over the counter, where the bulk of transactions usually occurs. Other departments of the bond market were relatively quiet and irregular, the turnover being only $6,490,000. The advance of Treasury bonds easily outstripped other movements in importance, as it comes on top of ample indications that the $500,000,000 offering of new money obligations is eminently successful.

With dealers estimating that allotments on the new issue may only run to 6 or 8 per cent of applications, attention turned quickly to the market for oustanding bonds Long dated bonds were marked upward by a half-point and more, while smaller gains appeared in the intermediate maturities. Heavy inquiry was reported from many parts of the country. The shortest datings were quiet and firm. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and credit corporations moved up with direct Treasury obligations.

Highly rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were dull, owing to the appearance on the market of the new flotation of $52,500,000 Public Service of Colorado bonds and debentures. The new issue went "out the window" and soon was quoted at substantial premiums over the announced offering levels.

Court Appoints 2 Trustees For Jersey Central

Newark, N. J., Nov. 28 (AP).—Federal Judge Guy L. Fake appointed today Shelton Pitney, Newark lawyer, and Walter P. Gardner, of Jersey City, trustees for the Central Railroad of New Jersey in its voluntary reorganization proceedings.

The names of the two must be approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington and then each will be required to post $50,000 bond. Gardner was formerly a member of the Court of Errors and Appeals, New Jersey's highest tribunal.

Judge Fake said he hoped "one of the first problems undertaken by the trustees would be to provide taxes due the State." The judge, who had been informed the railroad had $5,000,000 cash on hand, added "litigation has withheld millions of dollars of railroad tax money required by the State government for operating its school system."

The Central filed its petition in bankruptcy October 31 after Attorney General Wiltentz served notice he would move to collect $7,229,614 in taxes owed by the railroad for 1932 and 1933. The next day the carrier obtained an injunction restraining the State from collecting the taxes.

Boeing Air Plans Increase of Capital

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—In an effort to obtain new working capital, Philip G. Johnson, president of the Boeing Airplane Co., today presented to stockholders a plan for increasing the capitalization of the company. He asked them to meet December 22 in Seattle to authorize an increase in the number of capital shares to 1,250,000 of $5 par value from the present 800,000.

Johnson said the company's backlog of unfilled orders had increased from $12,308,112 on September 1 to $27,954,175 on September 30 and that money was needed for new machinery, equipment, and plant expansion.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 28.—British government bonds advanced sharply on renewed investment demand and international shares closed at today's best prices in the Securities Exchange. Gold and commodity stocks stayed in the background.

Paris.—Higher prices accompanied active bourse dealings today. Substantial gains were recorded for Suez Canal, French Ford, Bank of Paris and Schneider Steel. Rentes closed unchanged to 175 centimes higher.

Amsterdam.—Bourse prices made a feeble comeback in late trade today after being trimmed slightly early. Turnover was at a minimum.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures bounded 18 to 22 points today. Most buying was inspired by increasing difficulties in acquiring and financing freight space.

$18,155,658 of McKesson Assets Held Fictitious

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—A request for suggestions as to how to reorganize McKesson & Robbins, Inc., was sent to creditors and stockholders of the big drug and liquor house today by William J. Wardall, trustee of the company. He asked that such plans be sent him on or before next January 15.

The reorganization will be the first of any large corporation under chapter 10 of the bankruptcy act, which went into effect last year, just two months before the Coster-Musica scandal revelations which caused the affairs of McKesson & Robbins to be put into trusteeship.

In his notice to creditors, Wardall stated that the company's "book inflation of assets" at the end of 1938 was $21,025,658, "of which approximately $2,870,000 was misappropriated and the balance represented by book entries of fictitious assets which never existed."

Wardall asserted that reorganization of the company is essential because $15,725,000 in debentures, now due and owing, would otherwise leave the company unable to discharge this and other indebtedness.

Cotton Futures, Except October, Close Higher

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—The December cotton futures contract moved to a new high for the current forward swing today despite heavy transferring from that month forward. Final prices on old contracts were 2 to 9 points up, while new October lost 1. Keen demand for December spilled over into March and May, although peak prices were not fully maintained.

Liquidation in the spot month was readily absorbed despite issuance of 119 transferable notices, most of which were stopped by leading spot interests.

Back of demand for December, brokers said, was difficulty of securing lint for prompt delivery except at good-sized price lifts. With the spot month hovering around the theoretical Government loan figure, it was added, sellers felt secure in holding out for better quotes in view of the cushioning effect of the loan.

Grains Climb With Europe Heavy Buyer

Day's Purchases Put at 10,000,000 Bushels, Largely in Canada

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 28.—European buyers re-entered the North American grain market today for more than 10,000,000 bushels, the biggest purchases in one day since the war began, helping to lift domestic prices of all principal cereals.

Most of the buying was centered in Canadian grain, principally wheat, but inasmuch as the Dominion's large surpuus is weight on world wheat markets in general this business tended to strengthen the Chicago price. Winnipeg quotations for wheat shot up 2⅝ cents at one stage, their sharpest advance since early days of the war.

Wheat contracts here rose as much as 1⅜ cents, with May and July at their best levels since November 8. Closing prices were near the day's highs or ¾@1¼ better than yesterday. December 88¾@88⅞; May, 87⅛@87¼; July, 85@85⅛.

Corn Also Gains

Corn gained ¼@⅝, December closing at 50⅞@51, and May, 53@53⅛. Oats gained ¼@1 cent; Rye ⅞@1, and soy beans, 1¼@2½, but lard lost 3 to 8 cents.

Continued drought in the domestic Southwest and strength in securities also induced some buying of grains.

Great Britain, the leading European buyer, took approximately 8,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat and 750,000 bushels of United States corn. In addition, continental European countries bought 500,000 bushels of wheat, 500,000 barley, some rye and oats from Canada. Despite this heavy purchasing of actual grain, mostly negotiated through government agencies, speculative interest in wheat futures remained on a small scale, which tended to hold the price rise in check. The Canadian wheat board was credited with sales at Winnipeg.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A hand submitted by R. M. L., due to bungling by both players, ended in a minor suit part score when a game could have been won in a major. This is what he says:

"I sat West with these cards:

♠ Q J 9 7 5
◇ A K 10 9 7 6

"As I recall it, both sides were vulnerable. The bidding developed like this:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Dbl.
Redbl.	Pass	Pass	2 ♣
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	2 ◇
Pass	Pass	Pass

"My partner's hand was:

♠ A 10 4
♡ J 10 7 2
◇ 8 5 3
♣ A 7 5

"My contention was that my double of one heart showed I had a strong hand and was short in hearts, and that my subsequent bid of clubs, the suit of my opponent, showed I was short in clubs and consequently I must be very strong in diamonds and spades.

"In the play a spade was opened, and I took the finesse, which lost. A spade was returned and ruffed by North, a heart returned, and another spade ruffed so that I made only three diamonds. However, four spades are cold in the hand, there being only one loser in each of spades, hearts and diamonds (the latter suit was divided three and one)."

R. M. L.'s letter shows that subconsciously, at least, he knows he could have managed the bidding better with his two-suited hand.

A jump overcall is the answer. Had West simply bid three diamonds over one heart he would have indicated a strong distributional hand and asked his partner to respond with one high-card trick or trump support and ruffing power. On the next round he could show his spade suit and the pair would probably agree on four spades; though five diamonds is an acceptable contract and is very unlucky not to make.

But East failed also in not making some attempt to understand and support his partner's awkward struggle to reveal his holding. East surely should have taken some action over his partner's two-diamond call, having two aces.

BURY THE AXIOM . . . There's an old radio axiom which insists the carriage trade never writes nor telephones, as do we mortals when a broadcast displeases or pleases us. That bromide was laid gently in the waste basket Sunday when the New York Philharmonic (no less, m'dears) was a half hour late in starting. WJSV's poor telephone operator, gently immersed in Mary Haworth's theory and fact, was forced to lay aside her paper and answer an endless stream of phone calls. All protests, too. And it was with some difficulty that she got the idea across that the Philharmonic was in Chicago and Chicago is on Central Standard Time and Washington is on Eastern Standard Time and the broadcast would start shortly.

The poor switchboard gal's reaction to the unexpected blitzkrieg was "You, know, those Philharmonic folks use just about the same words the boys at Stinky's Bar and Grille use when a ball game is cut short."

It is interesting to note that the Philharmonic broadcasts will be heard at the regular time next Sunday.

SO SORRY DEP'T . . . At the urgent request of a reader (John Charles Daly) we would like to point out that those pictures in Monday's column and the early Tuesday masterpiece were not reasonable facsimiles of the author. They were, or is it are, John Charles Daly.

ON TONIGHT'S MENU . . . It seems to me a press agent has touched the nadir when he starts shilling for a night of the week, but we'll repeat—Wednesday night is radio's loveliest night except mebbe paynight . . . anyhow WJSV offers the following . . . Paul Whiteman, Gracie Allen and George Burns, Al Pearce, Jean Hersholt and Maurice Evans plus a dozen or so supporting artists who are well under par in their respective leagues . . .

"BUT that economic side is only a part of life. Like the grotesque infamies of race-oppression, it's not the point of what's at issue. I'm trying to tell you something about freedom. What I want you to be sure of is that without living as free men we shall be destroyed by this tremendous new spirit blowing over the world, glorious though it is. Hence freedom is far more valuable to us even than Mr. Dewey thinks, because—no, no, I've said that already. That was not what I meant. I meant to guess aloud that fascism comes from something new in the air everywhere in our time. Everywhere. From a new wind blowing over the world of men, great beyond imagination. To this great wind fascism spreads black sails on a pirate ship. But that is not the fault of the wind. If we will but learn to set our sails it will carry us to undreamed goals of——But wait, wait, I have not told you yet the name of this great new wind. What is its name? It is too great to say aloud—like Jahveh. It can be put into no words. But we can all see where it is taking us—into feeling as never before the oneness of mankind—into an awareness that humanity is one, that one of us cannot survive except as part of the whole. But be warned—this oneness can be for ill as well as for good. Like freedom, it can be misused, it can be turned into a mockery of itself. Because, like freedom, it is not enough. We are, each of us, himself and no other—yea, but not only himself. It is not enough to be alone. Nor to be together."

Yes, yes, why had he not been able to say it before, crying it out as he was now, with the tongue of angels—"See, young Americans, you are not forced to give up one to have the other—you cannot have one without the other. The fascist exploiters of this new spirit of oneness tell you that man can have but one. They lie. As Mr. Dewey gave his life to hand on freedom to you—do you give your lives to hand on both. Don't let yourselves be cheated out of the rich complexity of the human birthright. See, there is the goal before you, to fight for both. Oh, happy youth, to see your goal so clear! My generatin had no goal. We hung in a limbo of purposeless compromise, waiting for we knew not what. You . . ."

A PASSING CAR cast a stinging cloud of snow-crystals into his face, half blinding him. It stopped beyond him. A man's voice called, "Something the matter with your car, Prof. Hulme?"

His bubble burst. His fervor left him. With a shudder, he fell miles deep into a cold reaction of shame. "No. Not at all. My car's all right," he answered curtly, as if he were offended, and getting quickly in, slammed the door.

Why, he had been in a daydream! A boy's daydream! Idiot! To let himself go in that welter of phrase-making. Sitting in his car, taking practiced care not to let the wheels skid on the snow-packed slippery road, some of those phrases rang again in his ear. He blushed for them, literally felt his face grow hot. Turgid! Priggish! Incoherent! Sentimental! A mess! "The Bastille of economic injustice"—from what pamphleteer had his mind picked up that cant phrase? "Limbo of purposeless compromise"—God! What verbiage! Had anybody ever run a phrase into the ground with iteration as he did with "The Stone Age" and "the cave-man!" He groaned and swore to himself. Why, his young people would laugh aloud if they dreamed he had so much as thought of speaking to them like that. No, they would not laugh. They would stare and tap their foreheads. He had been freed for a moment from the gaping stunned bewilderment with which he, like other moderns trying to understand, stared at the massed millions of details of the modern world's misery. He had been freed by the illusion that it had a meaning and that he had caught a glimpse of the meaning. He had thought that for an instant something had set him far enough away from its complexity to guess at its true shape. A boy's dream! A child's! A simpleton's! He was once more hurled to the ground and pinned down under the senseless confusion of those inexplicable millions of details—concentration-camps, soil erosion, armaments, share-croppers, riots in Palestine, the failure of education, the bombing of women and children, the cynicism of English Tories, the sincere, single-hearted idiocy of American reactionaries—which addle the brains of people reading their newspapers the world around. By the time he was at his house, he was frozen in self-scorn, aching with the certainty of failure. He knew now that he could never say it so that it would seem like anything but the platitude it had so long seemed to him. He could never make it come to life for anyone else as it had for him. As it was no longer, for he had lost it by trying to say it. It had turned back into a platitude. There was nothing there. There never had been anything.

WHERE NOW, was the brisk self-confident pedagogue, sure of himself, bored because he was repeating with listless skill a task he had wholly mastered? What chills, what burnings, were these?

He ate his supper in silence. That evening Eli came into the study. "Say, Prof. Hulme, you know that idea of yours about not just getting all the profit there is for yourself in a good business plan?"

"It's not exactly my idea, Eli. It's pretty common, nowadays."

"Well, anyhow, Jules and I have been talking about it some, and we don't see but as it might work, maybe if—well now, for instance, suppose the railroad does fold up for good, why couldn't the towns along the right of way run the busses and trucks that'd be needed? Somebody's bound to get money from running busses, if they're run right. Then the folks that used the busses'd get the money instead of Mr. Lane and his friends in the banks. Jules and I and a couple of the other fellows thought we'd sort of study it out—no, we didn't cal'late to do anything. Jules is no hand for business anyway: and I've got all I can tend to for a while. Just study it up for the fun of it, see how a person might work it."

Timothy listened to him as always, and as always did his best to make an intelligent comment. But he had no creative one to make. He doubted, he said, if it could be done. Whoever heard, he asked, of a town going into business? Eli pointed out that St. Albans owned and ran its system of sewage disposal, that Bennington owned its water system. Timothy admitted that that was so. There might be something in it. But there would be an unheard-of tangle of legal complications.

He took thought and suggested a couple of books on municipal ownership that Eli and Jules might get out of the Ashley Library, if they felt like it. The boy took the titles down and stayed for a while, talking and asking questions. But Timothy was depressed and unresponsive. He had made enough of a fool of himself for one day.

After Eli had gone, he tried to take himself to task for not rising to the opportunity; for he knew well enough that, yesterday, it would have seemed the opportunity he had been hoping for. But the moment, after, it occurred to him that Eli probably paid as little attention to the fluctuation of his moods as Aunt Lavinia's carpings, that to the young rustic he probably seemed like Aunt Lavinia, immeasurably ancient and remote, to be heeded or disregarded as Eli wished—Eli strong in insensitiveness. Perhaps, he thought, pulling toward him the pile of papers that were his evening's work, perhaps quite simply strong in strength. And in any case, my business is to teach English. That's all I'm fit for, the humble schoolteacher's task—hard enough in all conscience!—of training boys and girls to say simple things in short sentences.

BUT WHAT was growing within resisted, with patient power, this faint-hearted attempt at a great refusal. For the most part it lay quiet, far beneath the surface of his laborious days with their classes and their textbooks and their examination papers and the complicated puzzle of their relationships to be fitted together. But once in a while it gave a throb of vitality that pulsed all through the busy, busy life of the busy man.

One of these came after town meeting in March. Mr. Dewey presided, but as everyone felt, looking solemnly up at his wasted face, for the last time. Timothy was "approached" about taking his place next year, and answered that if elected, he would serve.

Walking home, he thought that only a year ago on this day, Susan and Canby had not yet seen each other; but he could not keep his attention on sweet self-pity, his mind, struck with an idea, racing again along the new road it had chosen almost against his will. "Why, there's a sort of disgracefulness," he thought, "in trying as I did to put it into bellowing rhetoric. Simplicity is the way to say it. Naturalness is its only wear. One heartfelt arrowy phrase of clean simpleness is the only way to express this conception of homecoming, this longing to enter into a wholeness that is not kindness with its overtone of self-righteousness, no, nor justice only, with justice's pompous self-esteem. It is not self-interest, either. Unless it is self-interest not to mutilate one's foot, or cut one's own hand."

He shook his head ruefully. "One heartfelt arrowy phrase of clean simplicity!" he thought ironically. But as he climbed slowly on, up Academy Hill and passed unnoticing, with steady step, the icy slipperiness of the flagging-stones beyond the primary school, he was thinking, "It really is a longing to go home after centuries of exile. No wonder—and how tragic—that despairing millions flock through the Fascist door that seems to lead to this oneness."

HE WALKED along the driveway toward his house, noticing but vaguely that someone was coming toward him, telling himself, surprised, "Odd how like mysticism this sounds. And I've always thought mysticism silly. 'To feel oneness with humanity'—what is that but a cant-phrase of the mystical jargon? They never make sense, those phrases, except to those who, knowing the experience already, do not need to be told of it. But I am not in the least fanciful. Nor is this a fancy. It is the plainest reality."

Someone was saying something to him—"Prof. Hulme, I'm sorry to bother you, but—Prof. Hulme! Say, Prof. Hulme . . . !"

"Oh. Yes? What it it, Alice? I was thinking so hard about something I didn't notice you were there. What can I do for you?"

"Well, in the sophomore play, there's a character that has to carry a cane. And we wondered if you'd let us borrow yours. You know, the one with the carved ivory head. We'd take good care of it and bring it right back as soon as the play's been given."

"Why, of course, Alice. Come along with me to the house now and I'll get it for you."

But when they went together into the hall, the stick was not in the corner where he usually left it. Perhaps it was in the new closet. He looked. It was not there. He searched in all the corners and nooks of the first floor, and went up to his study. It was not to be found. Going back to the hall he stood for a moment, trying to think when he had last carried it. But he had no recollection of it at all. It must have been months ago since he had used it. Perhaps, he told the girl, he had left it somewhere outside the house and never gone back for it. "Why don't you," he suggested, "see if there is something you could use for your play in the attic of Dewey House?"

MARCH WAS OVER. The ice was out. The snow shrank to forlorn wreaths in the corners of the fields, and vanished with the first arbutus.

At Miss Peck's Timothy heard someone saying that Canby Hunter had finished up that second house he had been doing and was on another in West Drury. He thought to himself, "I must remember when I am out in my car, not to take the road that leads over the mountain to the Drury Valley."

The roads were free from snow now. Probably, he thought, Susan and Canby would again drive over to see their Clifford circle. But they did not.

The spring had a disagreeable affect on Timothy that year. It made him restless, as he had never been. He drove about aimlessly.

Hepaticas came after the arbutus. He had never noticed the spring flowers so closely. They reminded him of Susan. This was absurd, for he had no associations of flowers with her. It was disheartening to find that he was more often than ever reminded of her. By things that had no connection with her, at all. Perhaps it was only that he missed her more. Perhaps missing someone you have lost comes in recurrent waves. He tried to be patient, to let this wave pass.

But patience was not enough. As if drawn by an invisible magnet within him, other reminders of her called to him out of the day's routine. Making a professional visit of supervision to the class that hed been hers in the primary school, he stayed after hours for a struggle with the teacher over methods of teaching reading. When the old janitor came lumbering into the room with a pail and a mop he and the teacher had been astonished to have Prof. Hulme, with a muffled exclamation, reach for his hat and vanish without a word.

A boy in an English class (one of the new students from a tiny hill hamlet) asked if he could hand in on a theme-assignment, something he had written some months ago. Timothy said, "Why, it doesn't make any difference when it was written," and correcting papers late the next evening had read, written on blue-lined paper:

"The leaves are falling
That were alive and green
All summer long up high
Don't step upon them."

Timothy sat motionless at his desk for a long time. Finally, "But you do step upon them," he said aloud, marked an A in red ink on the corner of the paper and picked up the next theme to be corrected.
